Machine Guns Roared From "Death Special" At Mothers and Babes

DETECTIVE CHIEF TELLS GRAND JURY OF "THIRD DEGREE"

Questions Put to Lanford Indicate That Investigation of Police Methods Is Being Conducted.

TORTURE ERA IS PAST, CHIEF INFORMS JURY

Science and Skill Now Employed by Detectives in Securing Confessions From Criminals, He Says.

The police "third degree," which has created such widespread discussion during the Mary Phagan murder investigation, has been thoroughly explained to the grand jury by Detective Chief Newport A. Lanford, who appeared before that body at its request.

Detective John Black, of headquarters, who has been an active figure in the Phagan case, is also said to have been quizzed about methods employed by the police and detectives. He will not talk of the subject. Members of the jury are reluctant to give any information.

Chief Lanford, however, willingly told a Constitution reporter of his testimony before the jury and of the nature of queries which were put to him. He says he gave a complete and apparently satisfactory account of the "third degree" and the manner in which it is practiced at police headquarters.

Is Jury Probing Police Methods?

The belief is prevalent in both police and court circles that a secret probe is being promoted by the grand jury into methods employed by both the police and detective departments, and that it was in pursuit of this investigation that the detective head and Black were examined. Chief Lanford is inclined to scout this theory, although he is unable to account for the testimony that was required of him and of Black in the "third degree" probe.

The use of the "third degree" during the Phagan mystery has caused much comment. Its most effective employment, it will be recalled, was in extracting three sensational confessions from the negro sweeper, James Conley. Newt Lee, the negro watchman, the first suspect in the murder case, was subjected to a "degree" equally as strenuous.

The public letter of Mrs. Leo Frank, in which she took the detectives and Solicitor General Dorsey to task for subjecting her servant girl, Minola McKnight, to a system of cross-examination, which, she asserted, left the girl in a state of exhaustion, probably served to actuate the jury's inquiry into police methods. Mrs. Frank's letter was a stinging arraignment, and Witness Tells West Virginia Probers How the Operators Sent Armored Car, With Death-Dealing Guns, Thro' the Strike Territory.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN WERE GIVEN NO MERCY BY MEN BEHIND GUNS

Senator Martine So Stirred by the Story That He Openly Denounced Those Responsible as Not Even Being Men—Witnesses Agree That the First Shots Were Fired From Armored Car.

Charleston, W. Va., June 14.—About a single battle in the coal strike on the Paint and Cabin Creek districts centered today's inquiry by the senate committee investigating the coal mine strike.

Almost all day the committee heard statements concerning the attack on Holly Grove, a strikers' camp, from an armored train which was run up into the strike district on February 7.

The committee was astounded at the testimony of Lee Calvin, an ex-mine guard, who was one of the men in the armored train when the strikers' camp was fired on. Chace Estep, a miner, was killed and Mrs. Anne Hall wounded. Calvin, called by the attorneys for the miners, told a sensational story of the attack. After relating he had been a "chief guard" on Cabin Creek, and had left the district because of the shooting there, he said that Sheriff Bonner Hill and Quinn Morton, a mone operator, had prevailed upon him to join a party going up Paint Creek in the armored train.

Got Rifles Ready.

Washington, June 14.—The Italian government has notified the United States that Thomas Nelson Page will be acceptable as American ambassador. President Wilson probably will send Mr. Page's nomination to the senate next week. On Saturday, June 21, the Marquis Confalonieri, the Italian ambassador here, will give a dinner for the new American ambassador and Mrs. Page.

FRANK HOOPER AIDS PHAGAN PROSECUTION

Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey Announces His Associate in Big Case.

Just before leaving yesterday afternoon for New York, Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey announced that Attorney Frank A. Hooper would be associated with him in the prosecution growing out of the murder of Mary Phagan.

Saying that Mr. Hooper was his personal choice, Dorsey also stated that Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coleman, parents of the victim, had been consulted and had directed him to employ such counsel as he desired and that his choice of Mr. Hooper satisfied the Colemans.

Attorney Hooper has been a well-known figure at the Atlanta bar for four years. Shortly after coming to this city, he was associated with ex-Governor Joseph M. Terrell, with whom he was connected until the governor's death. He was for twelve years the solicitor general of the southwestern judicial circuit at Americus, Ga.

Among many notable cases with which he played a conspicuous part were the Childers trial in Americus and the famous Cain murder case in Cordele. He was counsel for the defense in each case. He will be in charge of the solicitor's affairs which relate to the Phagan case during Mr. Dorsey's absence on his present trip.

MAN OF MYSTERY SENDS BULLET THROUGH BRAIN

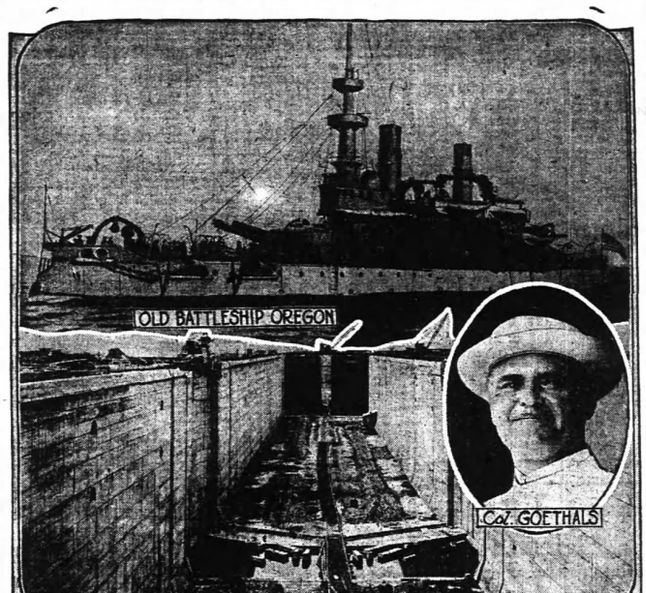
John W. Brown Had Never Revealed His Past History to Neighbors Near Macon.

Macon, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—John W. Brown, a man of mystery, committed suicide at the home of L. P. Price, 9 miles east of Macon, late this evening by putting a bullet through his brain.

Brown was in charge of George A. Willis' farm. He appeared in that community last August, but never told any one where he came from or any of his past history.

He was well educated, a musician of ability and had an extensive knowledge of books.

SQUABBLE OVER GOETHALS GOES TO WHITE HOUSE



Rumors of dissension in the Panama canal commission over Colonel Goethals, chief engineer of the canal, created wide interest in his visit to the white house. It was announced that Colonel Goethals would ask President Wilson to back him up in his administration of canal affairs. On the other hand, it was said some members of the commission would seek to get the colonel out on the ground that he was too domineering. It was predicted here that the president would try to smooth matters over so that Colonel Goethals would stay till the canal was opened. The first ship will probably go through before the end of the year, Colonel Goethals declares. The people of Oregon have petitioned congress to send the old battleship Oregon, condemned to share the fate of the old San Marcos as a naval practice target, through the canal at the head of the first battleships to go through. This will likely be done. The Oregon is shown in the illustration with one of the great Gatun locks and Colonel Goethals.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS CHARGED TO SURGEONS

Warrants Issued for Five U. of P. Professors Because of Vivisection.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 14.—Warrants were issued here today for the arrest of five professors and surgeons of the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania on the charge of cruelty to animals in connection with the vivisection of dogs. This constitutes the second step in a legal campaign by the Women's Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Recently Dr. J. E. Sweet, of the university, was arrested on a similar charge.

The defendants, who must appear before a police magistrate next Saturday, are Dr. Allen John Smith, former dean of the medical schools; Dr. Edward Tyson Reichert, professor of physicological chemistry; Dr. Richard Mills Pearce, Jr., professor of research medicine, and Alfred M. Richards. It is said that warrants for other members of the faculty probably will be issued in a few days.

John R. K. Scott, counsel for the women's society, said tonight:

"This proceeding is not based on vivisection of animals, but the needless cruelty and neglect of the animal after it has been submitted to experiments and operations.

"It has been brought to the society's attention that after a dog has been subjected to such operations as the breaking of the spine, the removal of portions of the brain and stomach the animal was placed upon the cement floor of the kennel and no attempt made to relieve its sucering."

$5,000 IN CURRENCY VANISHES IN TRANSIT

Detroit, June 14.—Approximately $5,000 in currency disappeared in transit this afternoon between the Wyandotte office of the American Express company and a Wyandotte manufacturing concern where the money was to be used to meet the pay roll. According to the express company, the money was in charge of Driver Edward Rushlow. A search revealed Rushlow's wagon, but the young man was not found. A bag of silver coins was found in the wagon, but a bag of bills, making up the greater part of the pay roll, was missing.

TO DISCUSS CALLING OF STATE CONVENTION

Meeting Thursday Will Consider Advisability of State-Wide Consultation on W. & A.

Acting upon the unanimous request of the committee on Western and Atlantic railroad, a meeting of members of the Atlanta chamber of commerce is called for Thursday evening, June 19, at Taft hall, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of considering the question whether the chamber shall call a state convention to discuss the proper disposition of this valuable public property.

The recommendation of the committee is conveyed in the following letter from Hon. W. A. Wimbish, the chairman:

"Mr. Wilmer L. Moore, President Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, Atlanta, Ga.—Dear Sir: Your committee on the Western and Atlantic railroad has had several meetings, and begs to report progress.

"The disposition of the Western and Atlantic railroad upon the expiration of the present lease is a matter that your committee is unanimous in the opinion that public discussion would be of great benefit. The committee has formulated no plan, nor will it lend its influences to the promotion of any disposition or use of the road, or any of its properties, other than such as may be consistent with the highest and best interests of the state.

"The committee recommends the call for a meeting of the members of the chamber of commerce at an early date at which time it is suggested that a few gentlemen who have given thought to this subject, and who may entertain differing views concerning it, be invited to deliver brief addresses for the information of the committee and the public.

While Atlanta's interest is great, the larger interest of the state is paramount, and we, therefore, think that the consideration of the subject should be state-wide. With this end in view, the committee recommends that at its proposed meeting the chamber of commerce will issue a call for a convention of representatives of different interests and localities throughout the state to be held sometime early in July.

(Signed.) "WILLIAM A. WIMBISH, "Chairman W. & A. R. R. Committee."

Approved by Directors.

"The recommendation of the committee, in which I heartily concur, has been approved by the directors, and I respectfully urge upon every member of the chamber of commerce the importance of attending this meeting next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in Taft hall.

(Signed.) "WILMER L. MOORE, President Atlanta C. of C."

OFFERED $1,000 BRIBE TO U. S. SENATOR WORKS

Ercanbrach Admits He Wanted to Pay for Place as Postmaster.

Santa Barbara Cal., June 14.—C. Ercanbrach was arrested today on a federal indictment, charging him with an attempt to bribe United States Senator John D. Works. Ercanbrach wanted the appointment of postmaster here and is alleged to have written a letter to Senator Works offering $1,000 if the appointment was procured for him.

Ercanbrach's letter was turned over to the department of justice at Washington by Senator Works and sent to United States District Attorney A. J. McCormick here. An indictment was returned by the grand jury.

Ercanbrach is a carpenter, who is considered fairly well-to-do. No one thought he had political aspirations or wanted the postmaster's post. He was surprised when the warrant of arrest was served, charging an attempt to bribe a public officer. He admitted he had written to Senator Works, and added:

"But I didn't know it was a crime to offer to pay a congressman for getting a political job. I thought that was the common practice."

In his letter Ercanbrach gave banking and commercial references as to his responsibility. He was taken to Los Angeles tonight.

INSIDIOUS LOBBYIST KICKED FROM CAPITOL

Senate Employee Proposes to Help President in His Campaign.

Washington, June 14.—"An insidious lobbyist" who did not tell his name was literally kicked out of the senate document room today.

"I'll help the president get rid of insidious lobbyists,' was the exclamation of R. M. Cooper, assistant superintendent of the document room, as he booted a tall, recalcitrant man through the door.

The victim of the booting who fled down the capitol steps, had been abusing employes because they did not furnish him with some printed documents relating to indigo tariff rates printed only for the finance committee.

Assistant Superintendent Cooper said he ordered him to leave this morning.

"He rushed into the room," said Cooper, "and threw his hand back toward his hip pocket. Then I kicked him into the hall. That's one way to handle such lobbyists."

MISSILE STRIKES HEAD OF ANTI-HOME RULER

Leeds, England, June 14.—Sir Edward Carson, the leading spirit in the fight against home rule for Ireland, was struck on the head by a missile thrown by some unknown person while he was proceeding to the town hall tonight. A procession which was formed on his arrival met with considerable obstruction and resulted in disorders. The unionist leader was not seriously injured and will continue the campaign which he has begun in the provinces against home rule.

A woman captured the Union Jack which one of the anti-home rulers was carrying in the procession.

MARTIN PLUNGES DOWN ELEVATOR SHAFT TO DEATH

Former Mayor of Decherd, Tenn., Falls From Third Floor of Third National Bank Building.

FATAL FALL WITNESSED BY DAUGHTER AND SON

T. W. Martin Makes Vain Attempt to Save Father—Body Will Be Taken to Old Home for Interment.

W. W. Martin, aged 84, for many years mayor of Decherd, Tenn., and a prominent politician in that state, plunged to his death down the elevator shaft of the Third National Bank building yesterday afternoon before the eyes of his son, T. W. Martin; his daughter, Mrs. E. S. Center, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. E. H. Martin.

The party were ascending to the third floor, and the younger man was the first to leave the car. His father started to follow, according to witnesses, and the elevator door partly closed and the car got in motion. For an instant the aged man wavered and his son vainly grasped at his coat as he fell through the shaft beneath the car and dropped to the bottom of the shaft.

Death came to him almost immediately. The son, who narrowly missed being jerked through the opening, declares that his father was killed because of the negligence of J. W. Nichols, the elevator boy. Superintendent Durham, of the building, asserts that the affair was accidental.

The dead man is survived by the following children: Theo W. and Nathan E. Martin, of Atlanta; M. F. Martin, of Chattanooga; Clyde, E. H. and I. H. Martin, of McComb, Miss.; Mrs. E. S. Center, of College Park, and Mrs. J. W. Mason, of Decherd, Tenn.

The body will be taken to Decherd for funeral and interment, and services will be held there on Monday.

OLD GUARD PLANNING TRIP TO EUROPE NEXT

A mission of peace to Europe next summer is the latest scheme of the Old Guard of the Gate City Guard, who have just returned from their eminently successful trip to the cities of the north and east in the United States.

No definite plans, of course, have yet been made, but the members of the organization are discussing the idea, and believe it feasible.

Y. W. C. A. IS ADDRESSED BY MISS EMMA HAYES

Asheville, N. C., June 14.—Miss Emma Hayes, secretary of the New York Central Y. W. C. A., was the leader today at the sessions of the second annual southern conference of the organization at Black Mountain. She told the six hundred young women of the south of the great work being accomplished in New York by the Y. W. C. A., and the extensive plans under headway for the future. In the afternoon the visitors were driven over the George W. Vanderbilt estate at Blitmore. The conference will end with Sunday's sessions.

ASSEMBLY ROOM FOR WOMEN

The rooms in The Constitution building, used recently by the women of Atlanta and Georgia, who were interested in the publication of The Woman's Edition, have been converted into an assembly room, the use of which The Constitution extends as a permanent meeting place for the women of the city and state who may desire to hold meetings, large or small. The room will accommodate as many as forty people. The location is central and will prove useful for committee meetings when members are called from distant sections of the city and find a central place of meeting convenient, or in the case of individual women who may need a place to meet with others to transact business related to their various interests and activities.

J. M. Murphey Dies Instantly, and L. J. Hearn, John Christopher and A. W. Wofford Are Tossed From Automobile by the Shock of the Collision and Are Badly Injured.

HIS CAR NOT MOVING AT TIME OF ACCIDENT, DECLARES MOTORMAN

Fatal Accident Happens Near Dead Man's Curve—One of Victims Says the Eyes of the Driver of the Machine Were Blinded by the Glare of the Headlights, This Causing Accident.

One man was instantly killed and three others injured last night when a speeding automobile swept around dead man's curve on Peachtree road, and 200 yards away crashed into an outgoing Buckhead trolley car.

The victims were rushed into the city where the injured were removed to the Atlanta hospital. The body of the dead man, J. M. Murphey, 247 W. Third street, wa scarried to the Greenberg & Bond undertaking establishment. No other deaths, it is reported, are likely to result.

The injured are L. J. Hearn, of 10 Curran street; John Christopher, of 4 Lees avenue, and A. W. Wofford, of Tenth and Hampton streets. Hearn sustained only a broken arm and bruises about the body. Christopher's collar bone is believed to have been broken, and it is thought that Wofford received a fracture of the skull.

Murphey Instantly Killed.

Murphey was killed outright. He was dead when his form was dragged from the wreckage of the machine. The other occupants were tossed out of the car, falling in the road.

The machine was destroyed totally. It was a Ford touring car and was traveling in direction of Brookwood. The trolley car was badly damaged. No one aboard was injured either by the impact or the flying glass.

Wofford, the worst injured of the three men who were hurt, was rushed into town in the automobile of Dr. A. F. Elrod. Speeding at 50 miles an hour, Dr. Elrod dashed up Peachtree with the wounded passenger. Directly in front of the Georgian Terrace, a rear tire exploded and rolled off the rim.

The machine zig-zagged, threatening every moment to turn turtle. Fearing he was about to experience another accident, the semi-conscious occupant strove to leap from the imperilled machine. He was restrained by Dr. Elrod, who found difficulty in withholding the half-crazed man and saving his

MARSHAL IS ANXIOUS FOR HIS TERM TO END

"Spoils Belong to the Victor," Declares Walter H. Johnson.

Walter H. Johnson, for sixteen years United States marshal for the northern district of Georgia, is awaiting with growing impatience acceptance of his resignation, which was sent by him to his department headquarters some weeks ago with a reques that it become effective June 30, the end of the current fiscal year.

"You see," said Marshal Johnson, speaking of his resignation, "no one knows better than I that the spoils belong to the victor. I sent in my resignation so that my successor might be named in time to take over his work with the commencement of the new fiscal year. It would be much better for both of us if the change should come at that time. On June 30 the 1912 fiscal year ends and the next morning a new fiscal year begins. My successor will start anew and then it'll be up to me to make a clean showing to the end of my term."

Few Georgians are more widely known or more highly esteemed than Walter Johnson. A native of Georgia, Columbus being his birthplace, and the son of a governor of the state during its territorial days immediately after the war between the states, Walter Johnson was among the hard workers of the latter sixties to bring about peace at home.

In the middle nineties, sixteen years ago, he was named marshal for the northern district of Georgia and since then has shown himself one of the most efficient officials the national government has had in the south. As a governmental official he was thrown into the political life of the south and though alligned with the political minority, at home, he fought a clean fight for his party in control in national affairs. No presidential campaign was complete without the guidance of Walter Johnson and as a result he carried with him to every republican national convention the nominating vote for Georgia.

Marshal Johnson was among the first of the officeholders in Georgia to send in his resignation to President Wilson. "I would like," remarked Marshal Johnson in speaking of his retirement, "to return my most sincere thanks to every one in my office for the faithful aid they have given me. Without their assistance my record might have been less to my credit than it now shows."

FINAL TRIBUTE IS PAID TO JOSEPH T. RAGAN, SR.

Dawson, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—The funeral of Joseph T. Ragan, Sr., who died Thursday evening, was held this morning at the Methodist church. Services at the grave were conducted by Masons of which the deceased was a prominent member.

In the death of Mr. Ragan, Dawson has lost a most excellent and estimable citizen and one who could always be found on the side of right. He came to this city from Bronwood a number of years ago and has always been justly regarded as a capable and successful business man. For many years he occupied the responsible position of manager of the Southern Cotton Oil company at this place and was held in the highest esteem by the officials of this company. He attended the convention of the State Association of Cotton Seed Crushers held last week at Atlantic Beach, at the time he left home to go there he was far from well. On his return about a week ago, he was forced to take his bed and steadily grew worse until the end came on Thursday evening a little before 8 o'clock.

He lived long enough to rear to young manhood four splendid sons, Joe Jr., Ellis, Clarence and Terrell, and he has one little 3-year-old daughter, Dorothy. His wife, who survives him, was the youngest daughter of the late Dr. Charles R. Moore.

Archer Hurts Finger.

Chicago, June 14.—Catcher Jimmie Archer, of the Chicago Cubs, will be out of the game several days as the result of an injury suffered in yesterday's game with Brooklyn. A foul tip off Allen's bat dislocated and badly lacerated the second finger of his right hand.

"HOUSE ON THE SANDS" PACKS ATHENS THEATER

Athens, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Last night the old Colonial Opera house was packed with a really record-breaking audience to hear "The House on the Sands," a political drama written by Edgar B. Dunlap, of Gainesville, senior at the university this year, presented by the Thalians, the dramatic club at Georgia. The parts were well carried, the story seemed to hold the audience in intense attention, and the young author was called before the curtain by a splendid ovation to respond to the expressed appreciation of the audience.

This is the first time a play written by a member of the Thalians was ever put on by the club. There will be others in the years to follow and young playwrights as well as actors will be among the products of the university in coming classes.

ANARCHIST ARRESTED DISGUISED AS PRIEST

Rome, Italy, June 14.—Francesco Cocuzza, a leapolitan anarchist, was arrested in the Italian chamber of deputies today after having gained admittance in the disguise of a priest. The anarchist twice before had succeeded in entering the chamber, in 1906 and 1911, and on the latter occasion insulted Premier Giolitti before he was taken into custody.

The police suspected the man in priestly garb today, and an officer called him by name. When he turned to confront the policeman he was arrested.

Cocuzza said he simply wanted to renew his acquaintance with Premier Giolitti, and that he had disguised himself in an attempt to avoid arrest.

Naval Changes.

Washington, June 14.—Captain Louis S. Van Duser has been relieved from command of the New York navy yard by Captain William L. Howard, whose place as captain of the battleship Idaho will be taken by Captain George W. Kline, commandant of the naval station at Guantanamo. Captain Van Duser is ordered to command the battleship Utah in place of Captain William S. Benson, awaiting orders.

BARBECUE TO BOOST NORTH GA. HIGHWAY

People of Ellijay Plan July 4 Gathering—Highway to Open Up Beautiful Country.

By a big barbecue gathering that is planned for Ellijay, Ga., on the 4th of July impetus will be given to the proposed automobile highway from Atlanta through middle north Georgia, heralding to the country the scenic beauties and natural advantages of that prosperous section.

The proposed highway is to pass through Tate, Jasper, Ellijay and Blue Ridge and to reach to Murphy, N. C. Thus it will open up a section directly north of Atlanta that hitherto has been difficult for automobile travel, but which contains wonderful opportunities in the way of summer resorts that will have a peculiar appeal to tourists. The highway has been "talked about" for a long time and it has now actually been begun in Cherokee county. It is believed that the barbecue on July 4 will serve to bring still wider support from the people of that section and rush to a climax the plans for the complete highway.

Senator A. H. Burtz, of the forty-first district, and W. H. Shippen, of Ellijay, arrived in the city yesterday and immediately called on the Atlanta chamber of commerce to seek the cooperation of that body in boosting the highway. Among others who are working in the interest of the highway are F. Carter Tate, of Jasper, United States district attorney; Dr. E. W. Watkins, of Ellijay; W. B. James, representative from Gilmer county, Sam Tate, of Tate, Ga., and Thomas M. Pell, congressman from the ninth district.

The supporters of the highway plan to ask for state and federal aid in building the highway, as it is believed wide benefit will follow its construction. The people of Fanin, Pickens, Cherokee and Gilmer counties are very generally behind the movement, however, and will lend their own aid toward having the highway built.

RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT BREAKS WITH DUMA

St. Petersburg, June 14.—A breach has been opened between the Russian government and the duma. Members of the cabinet announced today that neither the ministers nor the heads of departments will appear in the house "until conditions are established under which representatives of the government will be secure from insult by the members of the duma."

The immediate cause of this decision was a remark made by M. Markoff, a reactionary member, during the debates upon the estimates. While the minister of finance was speaking, Markoff cried out, "Steading cannot be tolerated." The remark of his remark applied not only to the minister of finance, but to all the officials of the various departments of state. The ministers and officials left the house in a body.

Later at a meeting of the cabinet the minister of the interior spoke strongly in favor of dissolution of the duma. He was out-voted, most of the ministers arguing that the conflicts between the cabinet and the duma were personal rather than political. Many of the ministers expressed the opinion that the quarrel would prove only temporary.

PUSHING THE PROBE INTO FATAL WRECK

Stamford, Conn., June 14.—Much of the testimony at today's inquiry by Coroner Phelan to fix responsibility for the fatal wreck here Thursday on the New Haven road, had to do with the condition of the colliding engine before the accident.

Several engineers who had run the ill-fated engine on days preceding Thursday testified that they had no trouble with it. Engineer Charles J. Doherty, who is held in $5,000 bond under a technical charge of manslaughter, claims that it was the failure of the airbrakes to work which caused the collision.

J. F. Carroll, roadmaster of engines and instructor of engineers on the New Haven road, said Doherty was a good fireman and a good engineer, and no question was raised as to his efficiency when he took out his engine Thursday. Doherty was warned on Tuesday, as all engineers are at various times, to be very careful and to make safety the first consideration. Doherty had told him of running by stations at Bridgeport on Wednesday, but had said nothing about the brakes not working.

UNCLE SAM RESPONSIBLE FOR HIS INDIAN WARDS

Washington, June 14.—Uncle Sam is just as much a protector and guardian of the life and welfare of his Indian wards as a parent is of his child or a husband of his wife.

This principle of responsibility was proclaimed today by George E. Downey, comptroller of the treasury, in overruling the appeal of Robert W. Wooley, the new auditor for the interior department, for a reversal of the comptroller's previous decision approving a $900 bill of Georgs P. Sampson, of Winslow, Aris., for treating and nursing back to life a blind Indian who had been run over by a railroad train. Auditor Wooley, sustaining the position of his predecessor, thought the bill unauthorized and unreasonable.

Charley Walker, a blind Navajo, of Leuph, Aris., Indian school, and ward of the government, deserted by his guide and companion upon the approach of a train, was run over. Dr. Sampson, called to his assistance, amputated his left leg and right foot and cared for him for three months.

"This was an emergency if there ever was one; the Indian had to be cared for at once as a matter of humanity," said the comptroller in holding the bill just and reasonable. "Could a father escape liability for services rendered his child under similar circumstances? He could not."

Detective Goes to Pen.

San Francisco, June 14.—A sentence of five years in prison was imposed today on Frank Esola, a former city detective, for having aided Michael Galio, a "bunco" man convicted of fleecing a farmer out of $900. Efforts to lighten Esola's sentence to three years in return for pleas of guilty by the seven other officers indicted on similar charges, fell through and the seven will be on trial jointly. The maximum sentance is ten years.

FINAL TOUCHES COMING IN RAILWAY RATE CASES

Supreme Court Expected to Pass on All Questions Monday.

Washington, June 14.—Finishing touches to the supreme court's decision in the railroad rate cases from Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky, Oregon and West Virginia are believed to have been added today in secret conference. The decisions, with those in the other forty-nine cases before the court, are expected to be announced Monday.

Justice Hughes is picked by most lawyers familiar with the court procedure as certain to announce the conclusion of the court as he did in the Minnesota rate cases. In doing so, he will review the opinion of Judge Smith McPherson of the western Missouri circuit court. By a strange coincidence, Judge McPherson in that opinion commented upon "moral courage" of Justice Hughes, then governor passenger bill. Judge McPherson held passenger bill. Judge McPherson held the Missouri maximum freight rates and the two-cent passenger law confiscatory and enjoined their enforcement.

"The relations of a governor to proposed legislation and those of a court to legislation consummated," held Judge McPherson, "are entirely different."

The apportionment of value and expenses of the railroads on the revenue basis, as done in the Missouri cases by Judge McPherson was disapproved in the Minnesota cases. Their errors, Justice Hughes said, were not sufficient to change a return of 3.5 per cent into a remunerative rate.

In the Missouri cases, Judge McPherson held that the return from the freight rates would result in a deficit on the Hannibal and St. Louis and the Burlington, and a return not exceeding two per cent on the other sixteen roads concerned. The returns from the two cent passenger law, according to the judge, would show no profit on the Rock Island, St. Louis and Hannibal, Kansas City, Clinton and Springfield, and the Great Western; a profit of from three to four per cent on the St. Louis and San Francisco, four and five per cent on the Santa Fe, a fraction over two per cent on the Kansas City Southern and between three and four per cent on the Burlington.

In view of that finding many believe the supreme court will first consider whether errors in valuation and apportionment have been sufficient in the Missouri cases to convert a deficit or low return into a reasonable return. Many think the court may find the laws valid as to certain roads, and invalid as to others.

Several points no considered in the Minnesota rate cases are expected to be passed upon, either in the Missouri or the Arkansas rate cases. Among them is the question as to what return the roads are entitled on their property. In Missouri the court considered six per cent a reasonable return. In the Arkansas cases Judge Trieber declared the earnings should be six per cent and in addition an allowance of one and one-half per cent should be made as a surplus for "lean" years. On that basis he held the Arkansas maximum freight and two cent passenger law confiscatory, because he figured the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern would make a net earning of only three-quarters per cent and the St. Louis Southwestern 2.6 per cent.

WINDER LARGER THAN 109 COUNTY SEATS

This Will Be One Argument Advanced for Creation of Barrow County.

If Barrow county is created by the coming legislature, it will start in business with a county seat larger in population and from a business standpoint than 109 out of 148 county seats in Georgia.

In other words, Winder, which has a population of 3,000, seventy-five prosperous business enterprises, fourteen manufacturing plants, three banks, two railroads and three cotton warehouses handling nearly 20,000 bales a year, is a larger city than 109 other Georgia cities or towns at which courthouses are located.

Leaving out the larger cities of the state, Winder is larger than nine-tenths of the county seats of what are sometimes called the country counties.

Winder, with a courthouse and with the complications removed which now arise from its location in three counties, three senatorial districts and two congressional districts, its people say, would soon double its population and when the next census is taken would be classed among those counties with two representatives, instead of one, in the general assembly.

COLLEGE EDUCATION VALUED AT $25,000

Chicago, June 14.—A college education is worth $25,000, according to statistics compiled by the administration office of Northwestern university and made public today. In seeking to prove in dollars and cents the value of a higher education, the university took a census of the class of 1905, members of which have had ten years to get "settled."

The investigation showed that for the first five years out of school the average earning power of the graduates was $867, and for the next five years the earning capacity jumped to $1,862.

According to the United States census bureau the average earning capacity of the salaried man in Chicago is $1,202. An estimate of the total value of a college education was arrived at by finding the difference between the earnings of the graduate and multiplying the sum by forty, which the statistician considered a fair estimate of a man's years of service.

The cost of a college education at Northwestern is estimated at $2,400.

Prize Winner in Law Class Will Practice in Atlanta With Anderson & Rountree

After two years of close law study as a member of the Atlanta law school, from which he graduated last week with high distinction, George C. Osborne has begun the active practice of law in Atlanta with the firm of Anderson & Rountree.

Mr. Osborne was awarded one of the two Robert C. Alston medals at the law school commencement for his essay on "The Civil Rights Cases." During his law study he has been under the direct supervision of General Clifford Anderson and Colonel Rountree, making special preparation to enter his law practice with them. Hamilton Douglas, dean of the law school, speaks in the highest terms of the abilities of Mr. Osborne and the career that undoubtedly lies before him.

After graduating from the Atlanta Boys' High school in 1908, Mr. Osborne entered the University of Georgia, at Athens, taking on extra work in order to go through the course in three years. Upon his graduation in 1911, he returned to Atlanta, and for the past two years has closely applied himself to his study of law. He is well known in Atlanta, being the son of D. B. Osborne, of the Armour Fertilizer company, and hundreds of friends in the city are predicting a splendid success in his law career.

GEORGIA CRUSHERS GO TO CHICAGO SATURDAY

Preparations are being perfected rapidly for the special train which is to carry the members of the Interstate Coton Seed Crushers' association, living in Georgia, to the annual convention of that organization which meets in Chicago on June 23, 24 and 25. The members of the Cotton Seed Crushers' association of Georgia, who make up this party expect to leave Atlanta on Saturday, June 21, and arrive in the Windy City on Sunday preceding the opening of the convention. The Georgia delegation will be joined en route by large del-gations from Alabama and the Carolinas.

Especial interest is attached to the forthcoming meeting, in view of the fact that the president of the association is E. W. Ashcraft, of Florence, Ala., and it is the determination of the members from the neighboring states that in point of attendance the Chicago meeting shall be a record-breaker.

At the forthcoming meeting the legislative committee will make a report to the convention with reference to its appearance before the various congressional committees in charge of revising the tariff law so that the duty on camel hair press cloth will be removed. Heretofore, it has been taxed over 100 per cent ad valorem duty, and this has been a great tax on the cotton oil industry. It has been recommended for entire removal, and this most important item will be admitted, if the bill passes the senate, as it now stands, free from all duty.

The rules committee will meet in Chicago on Saturday, June 21. Former President E. F. McElwee, of the Georgia association, will represent the Georgia crushers.

Summer Evening Gowns and Accessories

To a gown of vivid raspberry crepe de chine has been added a striking girdle of black satin. The waist has the upper part of shadow lace over chiffon of the same color as the dress. The skirt drapery is looped at the back and caught beneath the boxplait, which lengthens into the train.

The gown on the right seems to be the embodiment of coolness in its color scheme of blue and white, and is therefore naturally appropriate for spring and summer evenings. It is of silk crepe panelled in shadow lace over white chiffon and is draped in self-colored liberty satin. The girdle of white satin is given a new effect by crossing it in the front.

Stories Of Collision Vary.

Stories of the collision vary. The most coherent account, however, is given by Hearn, who talked with a Constitution reporter while hospital surgeons bandaged his splintered arm. He was thrown from the wrecked machine several feet into the air and into a clump of bushes on the roadside.

The automobile was traveling at less than 10 miles an hour, he said, and was climbing the grade at "dead man's curve" on the way uptown. As the machine drew around the bend, the headlight of the oncoming car flashed over them, blinding the driver momentarily.

Before Murphey, who was driving the machine, could swerve from the trolley's course, Hearn said, there came a collision and he felt himself projected into midair.

Heroic assistance was given the injured men by passengers of the trolley car, many of whom were girls and women. Dainty hands helped drag the dead driver's body from beneath the twisted wreckage of his machine and helped revive the injured.

The trolley car was in charge of Motorman George Jones. A reporter for The Constitution was told that Jones had stopped his car at the time of the collision. Jones is an experienced motorman, has been in the street railway's service for years and is considered a reliable driver.

Car Stopped Before Crash.

He could not be reached for a statement. He told friends, however, that as he had rounded the curve he saw the lights of the auto's head lamps and jammed on the brakes of his car, stopping completely. When the crash occurred, he stated, the street car was not in motion.

The automobile was the property of the dead man. The party had been to Buckhead. Other than give a brief description of the accident, neither would talk further with reporters who questioned them at the hospital.

Each of the victims is middle-aged. Wofford is apparently 35. Christopher appears slightly younger. Hearn is probably 40 years old. Murphey was 43 years old.

Christopher's story was similar to the one told by Hearn. He was sitting in the rear seat of the machine. The last he remembered is the blinding glare of the trolley's headlight and the shock of the collision. Wofford, who was sitting beside him, was tossed from the car and thrown beside Christopher on the edge of the roadway.

The dead man's wife was prostrated upon learning of her husband's death. Throughout the night she required the constant attention of physicians and at one time grave fears were felt for her life. She is the mother of two children, a grown daughter and a son, aged 7 years.

Auto Was Recent Purchase.

Murphey was a shoemaker and conducted a plant at 347 Marietta street. He had been living in Atlanta for several years and was well known. The automobile was only a recent purchase and it was on a trial trip last night. It was a light Ford runabout.

Stories from eye-witnesses corroborate the motorman's version that the street car was at a standstill. Probably blinded by the gleam from the trolley's lamps, it is believed that Murphey lost his head upon realizing how perilously near he was to the car, for the space in the roadway was sufficiently wide for him to avoid the collision.

The body will remain at the Greenberg & Bond establishment. Mrs. Murphey was too grief-stricken last night to make funeral arrangements.

NEW FREIGHT ROUTE FOR LYNCHBURG TRADE

Lynchburg, Va., June 14.—Ernest Williams, of this city, president of the Durham and South Carolina railway, which completed physical connection with the Norfolk and Southern railway today at Duncan, N. C., announced that a freight traffic agreement was entered into last Tuesday in New York city between the Norfolk and Western, and the Norfolk and Southern systems, by which the western part of the Norfolk and Western will be enabled to compete with Richmond and Norfolk for business in eastern and central North Carolina. The new freight route to be known as the Lynchburg Dispatch will enable Lynchburg and Roanoke to seek North Carolina trade in a territory hitherto inaccessible on account of the lack of direct railroad lines. The agreement becomes effective July 1.

Huck Finn Went to Prison.

(From "Highways and Byways of the Mississippi Valley," by Clifton Johnson; published by MacMillan.)

The house Mark Twain lived in still stands in Hannibal and is much the same as it always was—a plain, stumpy, two-story, clapboarded dwelling close to the sidewalk. It is just off the main street, snugged in among other similar buildings. The senior Clemens had a printing shop upstairs in the L of the house, and as there were several children the living quarters must have been pretty well crowded.

"All the family was the nicest people you ever saw," I was told, "but they weren't very well off. The father died bankrupt when Mark was 12 years old."

On the next street lived "Huckleberry Finn," whose real name was Tom Blankenship. In the books this lad turns out to be quite an admirable character, but in actual life he and his relatives were a very rough lot, and when he left town it was to go to the penitentiary. The author's descriptions of Huckleberry's father fit the person who was "the town drunkard—old man Finn." His end could hardly have been more tragic, even in fiction. He was locked up one night in the calaboose, and in lighting a match to have a smoke set fire to the building and was burned to death.

The Huckleberry Finn house was always rude, but it has not yet succumbed to modern conveniences, and is ruinous, unkempt antiquity quite worthy of its associations. Two or three negro families now live in it, and I made free to look about and to see a few woman inmates who was sitting out in front and lunching on bread and a dish of greens.

"This is the Huckleberry Finn house, isn't it?" I inquired.

"It sholy is," was the reply, "an' las' year Huckleberry Finn and Mark Twain both was hyar to see us. dey come togedder in a two-horse coach, an' dey each one give me a quarter."

MACHINE GUNS ROARED FROM "DEATH SPECIAL"

train," said Calvin, "and when we got just above Paint Creek junction all of them began getting rifles ready. They tried to give me a rifle, but I told them I had no shooting to do. The brakeman came through the train and turned down the lights.

"He told us not to raise the windows, but to shoot right through the windows. I was leaning out of an open window and as we came up to Holly Grove I saw a stream of fire start out of the baggage car where the machine guns were mounted. The stream kept up as we went through Holly Grove.

"As we passed I saw three of four flashes of fire from the tents."

He did not see any shots from the tents before the shooting began from the train.

"I just heard the engine whistle, blow toot, toot, and the shooting from the train began," he said. "I am positive the shooting first began from the baggage car."

The witness said that Quinn Morton was on the train. When the train had passed the miners' camp at Holly Grove, he said Morton came running back through the car and shouted:

"Back up the train and we will give them another round!"

Senator Martine Shocked

"I think the sheriff told him something about there being women and children in those tents, and he wouldn't shoot," said the witness.

At this statement Senator Martine, of New Jersey, almost leaped from his chair.

"What sort of a man is this man, Paul Morton—I mean Quinn Morton?" he shouted. "Is he an ordinary American citizen that he could order such a thing?"

The attorneys for the coal operators were on their feet in a moment and for a time the committee was in confusion.

"Mr. Morton will be brought before your committee," shouted Attorney Jackson," and you will see him and talk with him."

"God help me, then," remarked Senator Martine.

The attorneys for the operators protested vigorously against Senator Martine's remarks, and after some argument they were told by the committee that they would be given an opportunity to cross examine Calvin and to call witnesses in rebuttal.

"The senator ought not to say that," said Mr. Jackson.

"I just can't help it," said Senator Martine.

Give Them Another Round.

Under examination by Mr. Belcher, the witnesses repeated the statement that "Quinn Morton came through the car hollering 'back up the train, and we'll give them another round.' He said that when the train reached Muckler just above Holly Grove, the men in the armored car remained there for three days, until after the last "battle of Muckler."

Calvin told the committee that he warned the company bookeeper, named Bobbett, who was killed in the battle, not to go up into the hills that day.

"I was there when they brought him back on a stretcher," he said, "him and the others who were shot in the battle."

The witness declared that Chesapeake and Ohio detectives had "slugged" him in a Charleston hotel, because he had quit the company.

Palefaced women and men who showed traces of years of arduous toil digging coal from the West Virginia mountains told the committee their side of the controversy.

It was a tale of a peaceful community, of happy, contented people, transformed into theater of war, and the members of the senate committee sat back, with startled glances, as witness after witness told the story of the strike.

The attorneys for the striking miners in presenting their case called about a dozen men and women of the hills to tell the committee of the attack on the strikers' camp at Holly Grove.

Advent of "Death Special."

The attorneys for the mine operators insisted they would show that the train was fired on from the town before the miners landed, or in the armored car were turned loose.

The advent of "death special," as the miners called it, or the "bull moose" train as it was called by the operators, was the principal subject of the inquiry this afternoon, following a formal condemnation by witness of the "mine guards" who were brought into the district by the operators and which Governor Glasscock said he considered the principal cause of the trouble, when he declared martial law.

A detailed description of the armored train was obtained from Harry Arthur, who was employed by the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad as a brakeman on the train. He described the steel sheeting which encased the baggage car of the train and the machine guns which were mounted so as to give the greatest possible range through the protected doors of the car.

Shield Children From Bullets.

Mrs. Annie Hall, who limped into the committee room, told the committee how she shielded her three little children from her by hiding them in the chimney corner of her little home at Holly Grove when the armored train made its appearance. She said she had been shot through the foot by a bullet which passed through the bible and hymnal on her parlor table.

W. B. Buzzard told the committee that a man with whom he was talking on a Cabin Creek train was shot from a closet on the car after an argument with a mine guard. No criminal action had ever resulted from the shooting, so far as he knew.

Sidney Byers, a miner said that the people in the strike district were "terrorized by the behavior of the mine guards," who paraded through the district fully armed. Ralph McNeil, of Eskdale, declared he had been mistreated by guards and Harvey S. Campbell, a former special agent of the C. & O., railroad, said that he had ridden on the "bull moose" train and had been ordered to shoot if stones were thrown at the train.

"If you shoot, shoot to kill, was our orders," he said. Romeo Bejett, another former special railroad agent, gave similar testimony.

Didn't Hear Orders to Shoot.

"Did the sheriff give any orders to shoot?" asked Mr. Byrne.

"No, I didn't hear him," said Calvin.

Senator Martine asked the witness whether the sheriff saw the men loading their rifles.

"Yes, he saw them," said the witness, "but he did not give orders either way."

Attorney Byrne endeavored to find out if it was not Calvin himself who said, "Let's go back and give them another round," after the train had shot its way through Holly Grove. The witness denied this flatly. Mr. Byrne concluded his cross examination without altering the original story told by Calvin.

Attorney Davis, for the Paint Creek Colliories company, then took up the cross examination. He went into the history of the witness and the reasons for his application for work at Muckler where he was put on as a mine guard. Calvin said he was originally looking for "construction work," but that Manager Hale at Muckler agreed to recommend him for a place as guard. He worked as a guard for about twenty days, he said. Mr. Davis' examination did not last long and the committee ordered Calvin to return on Monday.

The operators were allowed to put on two witnesses in advance of the opening of their case Monday. George Carney and Hilborn Price, of Masterson, after working in West Virginia mines for a time they went to the Ohio field which was unionized. Fines were imposed on them by the union, they said, for working in a non-union mine in West Virginia. The fines were not paid and they returned to West Virginia.

Mine Guards Caused Trouble.

"When the guards paraded up and down the creek with their rifles on their shoulders the trouble broke out," said Ed Brake, a grizzled old mountaineer, who, for nine years, as a deputy sheriff, preserved law and order on Paint Creek singlehanded.

Former Governor Glasscock told the committee that the principal complaints of the miners that came to him concerned the mine guards.

Mr. Glasscock made clear to the committee that he made two attempts to get an agreement between miners and operators to arbitrate their differences, in both cases he said, the miners were willing to arbitrate, but the operators declined.

O. D. Honaker, a conductor on the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad was today's first witness. He said that prior to April 30, 1913, mine guards in Cabin Creek rode on trains on passes. These guards, he said, were armed. Mr. Honaker said his train had been stoned three times during the year.

Glasscock is Re-Called.

Former Governor Glasscock was recalled to the stand and cross-examined by counsel for the operators.

FEDERAL BALL LEAGUE CRIES TO UNCLE SAM

New Organization Alleges the Western Union Treats It Unfairly.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 14.—E. E. Gates, a local attorney representing the Federal League of Baseball Clubs, departed for Washington tonight to lay before the interstate commerce commission a complaint that the Western Union Telegraph company refuses to carry the Federal league scores in its "ticker" service.

The attorney contends that the refusal of the telegraph company to carry the Federal league scores is a violation of the Hepburn act and demands an investigation. He declared tonight that the Western Union had been offered pay to carry the Federal league results, but had refused to take the business.

While in Washington Mr. Gates said he would confer with Representative Gallagher, who has a resolution before congress to investigate the National baseball organization to see if it is in violation of the anti-trust law.

Authors Write Their Lives.

(Arnold Bennett in the June Metropolitan Magazine.)

An inquiry into the career of any first-class novelist invariably reveals that his novels are full of autobiography. But as a fact, every good novel contains far more autobiography than any inquiry could reveal. Episodes, moods, characters of autobiography can be detected and traced to their origin by critical acumen, but the intimate autobiography that runs through each page, vitalising it, may not be detected.

11 LIVES ARE LOST AS SUBWAY CAVES

Thirteen Men Entombed Under Tons of Rock, and It Is Believed That Eleven of Them Are Dead.

New York, June 14.—Eleven lives are believed to have been lost in a disastrous cave-in eight feet underground on the new subway construction at Fifty-first street and Lexington avenue this evening, when thirteen men of a crew of thirty-two drillers and laborers were entombed.

At 10:30 o'clock six bodies had been recovered and five were reported still buried under many tons of rock and earth. Two injured men were rescued, but one of them probably will die.

Five hundred laborers were quickly assembled at the scene in an effort to dig out the buried men. According to the police and fire authorities it may be hours before some of the bodies are reached. There appears to be no hope that any of the men have escaped death.

Cause of Cave-in.

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the cave-in was due to a blast or the collapse of timbers. There are two levels to the subway construction at this point the upper one for express trains. It was the ceiling of the lower tunnel which caved in. A policeman who gave the first alarm following the accident, stated that he heard a loud blast and it was at once succeeded by the cries of wounded and dying.

Robert Ridgeway, engineer in charge of the public service commission, after an investigation, announced that the cave-in was directly traceable to a blast. The rock at this point is faulty, he said, and the shoring timbers gave away due to a distance of twenty to twenty-five feet.

Rock Fell On Men.

Firemen early on the scene discovered that a rock weighing several tons had fallen on some of the buried men. It could not be moved by the means at hand, and probably will have to be blasted before the bodies underneath it can be recovered. Three priests descended into the tunnel in excavation buckets to administer the last rites of the church if any of the men were rescued still alive.

Most of the dead whose bodies have been recovered were foreigns, and thir identification awaits the tallying of numbered brass checks found in their clothing.

U. S. YACHT COLUMBIA RELEASED BY JAPAN

Washington, June 14.—The American yacht Columbia, seized by the Japanese authorities for unlawful entry into the closed port of Nagahama, has been released and what threatened to be an international incident has disappeared.

The news of the yacht's release came to the Japanese embassy today in a cablegram from Tokio.

It was said that as the Columbia approached the entrance of the harbor at Nagahama she was met by the port authorities and warned against entry. The vessel, however, steamed up to a wharf and proceeded to repair.

Although not so stated in the dispatch, it is presumed that the Japanese authorities satisfied themselves either that these repairs were urgent, or that there was no intent of violating the law.

The Columbia is the property of J. Harvey Ladew of the New York Yacht club, and had just conveyed her owner and a party of friends across the Pacific to Japan from where they proceeded by rail to Europe.

Against Filipino Independence.

(Hon. J. Sloat Fassett, in Leslie's.)

Under the Spanish occupation it was variously estimated that between 5 and 10 per cent of the Filipinos could speak Spanish. The same percentage will cover all who today can speak or read, to considerable degree, Spanish or English. There are ten distinct tribes and many variants. There are forty separate dialects or tongues. There is a deadly hatred and fear between Moros and Christians, and a fear between the pagans and Christians, and a sensitive jealousy between Christian tribes, which in the absence of a strong central government would result in very unhappy conditions. For fourteen years these various peoples have been in contact with Americans. Previous to that, for 350 years, they were under Spanish misrule; previous to that, under tribal rule. So they have had small practice in any popular governmental arts or principles.

DODGE SERVICE FOR SOUTHERN POWER USERS

What You Want When You Want It.

Call "Dodge" on the Phone—Collect.

Quiet but consistent effort attained its final reward when the Dodge Manufacturing Company of Mishawaka, Indiana, successful manufacturers of power transmission, completed the last link in their chain of National Distribution. Covering the entire Southern States with a factory branch and warehouse at Atlanta, they have installed a service which nearly every southern power user of importance can be reached by their organization in double-quick time.

This well planned move to increase the delivery efficiency of the Dodge organization comes as a surprise to southern manufacturers and is appreciated by them to the greatest degree. They will no longer be compelled to impatiently await the manufacture and delivery of specially constructed machinery, inasmuch as the Dodge line constitutes standard equipment that meets every requirement for the mechanical transmission of power.

How This Feat Was Accomplished.

Long ago the Dodge Manufacturing Company saw the advantages to be gained by the standardization of power business; and by the location of stations throughout which such machinery might be placed within immediate reach of the consuming trade, under conditions which surrounded their own plants. A manufacturer, for instance, enormous loss in time and money arising from disabled power units, they set out to secure for themselves that one important factor of manufacturing—distribution.

Years of consecutive endeavor and stubborn planning were consumed in the perfection of such a system. It was necessary to first establish a base of supplies in a centrally located city of each section of the United States. This was comparatively simple, inasmuch as such base or warehouse was owned and controlled by the home office. The gigantic task came in the establishment of subsidiary stations so carefully arranged as to bring any point in a given section within six hours of the branch warehouse.

The most difficult and consequently the most sought after portion of the country was the great South. Sufficient railroad facilities, together with the inaccessible locations of many southern factories had for years baffled the builders of factory equipment. In consequence, power users in these localities have been very often occasioned heavy losses as the result of a break-down, not only producing an expense arising from lost time, but in some cases so delayed the shipment of goods as to materially decrease the prices obtained.

Only High Grade Agents Available.

Owing to the unusual quality of the Dodge Line, it was necessary to secure the highest class of agents to handle it, and therein laid an equally serious problem. With a perseverance that would defeat, they so continued their effort over a period of ten years, and today, the final link has been secured. Dodge is holding the key to the southern power situation.

S. L. Dickey, branch manager at Atlanta, says: "Dodge can give power users what they want, when they want it, and what's more, we want them to demand it. That we make good our deliveries—it keeps us on our toes to feel that we must maintain the reputation that has been established.

"In case of a break-down—or a repair—the Dodge manufacturer should call our local Service Agent—chances are he can fix him on the spot—but in a case of emergency, and that often happens, he should take down his receiver and say 'Central, give me Dodge-Atlanta—Collect,' and right then, day or night, Dodge Service for that user is put into action.

"And when a man buys a piece of machinery with the name Dodge stamped on it, he gets more than the mere machine. He is buying the ability, the accuracy, the knowledge of thirty years of successful manufacturing."

Southern power users should avail themselves of this service at once. They should impress on their engineers and their superintendents that nowhere in the South or in the United States, can they secure such valuable assistance in their problem of manufacturing efficiency.

Dodge-Atlanta is located at 28 S. Forsyth St. Their 'phone is Main 4121, but at night the call should be made to West 196.

SLASHING GIVEN STEEL SCHEDULE

All Iron and Steel Raw Materials Go to Free List—All Finished Steel Products Also Reduced.

Washington, June 14.—The transfer to the free list of the tariff bill of iron and steel raw materials, with an estimated dutiable value of more than $600,000 a year was approved today by the majority members of the senate committee. This increased the senate's additional to the Underwood free list to an aggregate annual loss of $2,000,000 in revenue making the total estimated annual revenue loss from the free list about $27,000,000.

After an entire day spent on the subcommittee's report of the metal schedule Chairman Simmons announced it had been widely cut, nearly every item of the schedule being reduced. To the free list were added pig iron, ferro manganese, steel blooms, slabs and billets. On all finished steel products an average reduction of 10 per cent was made from the Underwood rates, lead, zinc and aluminium were left unsettled to be disposed of Monday.

Aluminum will be changed from an ad valorem to a specific tariff basis and the duty will be reduced, but it will not be transferred to the free list as many had advocated. Aluminum ex-pects will be called in Monday to go over the committee's proposed specific rates.

All Structural Steel Cut.

All structural steel which was made dutiable at 12 per cent in the Underwood bill has been reduced compensatory the free listing of raw materials the average rates being about 10 per cent ad valorem. The raw materials were placed on the free list largely because they are controlled by the United States Steel Corporation.

Senator Simmons said the administrative features of the bill which have presented such a problem would be acted upon Monday or Tuesday and that the bill would be ready for the caucus by Wednesday or Thursday. It was agreed by many of the democratic senators that it would have been well had there been no attempt made at this session to revise the tariff administrative regulations.

Inasmuch as the house bill has made changes and the senate has considered the subject for many weeks, it finally was determined that the revision task should be completed. All democrats of the finance committee, however, make no secret of their wish that it would have been possible to retain the Payne-Aldrich bill administrative privileges until a commission could make a thorough study of the subject.

On Monday the committee will take up the agricultural sundries schedules and the free list. It is predicted the caucus will make few changes and that debate on the measure can begin in the senate by Wednesday, June 25.

HE SUED FOR $75,000 AND GOT SIX CENTS

New York, June 14.—Thomas B. Harned, a Philadelphia lawyer, won a verdict today of six cents damages against the International Magazine company, publishers of the Cosmopolitan for libel. Harned brought suit for $75,000 on the ground that he had been injured by publication in the Cosmopolitan of articles relating to the "sugar trust."

NEW GERMAN CRUISER STICKS ON THE STOCKS

Hamburg, Germany, June 14.—The great German battle cruiser hitherto known as "T" was to have been launched this afternoon, but refused to move from the stocks after she had been christened the Derfflinger by General August von Mackenzen.

The general made a patriotic speech and broke a bottle of champagne on her bow. The cruiser stuck fast, however, and attempts to start her were abandoned.

JUBILEE OF THE KAISER GETS IN FULL SWING

All Germany Celebrating Twenty-Five Years' Reign of William III.

Berlin, June 14.—The jubilee festivities in conection with the completion tomorrow of the twenty-fifth year of Emperor William's reign are getting in full swing throughout the German empire.

The Berlin newspapers print columns of dispatches today regarding celebrations being held in the cities of Germany and abroad.

Amnesties have been granted by the sovereigns of the various German states and endowments amounting to millions of dollars have been bestowed on philanthropic institutions.

The general emphasis laid upon the peaceful character of the German emperor and his reign is the striking feature in a year of a billion mark military bill. This was summed up in a speech made by President Johannes Koempf at a commemorative session today of the reichstag which was attended by the imperial chancellor, Dr Von Bethmann-Hollweg, and all the ministers.

The speaker referred to Emperor William eminently as "the peace prince," who, having in his hand the mightiest instrument used it not to pluck martial laurels, but to preserve the peace of the Germans and the world.

At noon today the emperor received the Turkish ambassador to Germany, Osman Nizami Pasha, and Cardinal Von Kopp, who respectively presented to his majesty the congratulations of the heads of the Mohammedan and Catholic worlds.

Andrew Carnegie, J. G. Schmidlapp, and E. S. Brookings, representing American peace societies, arrived here today. They will be received by the emperor tomorrow or Monday.

President Cables Kaiser.

Washington, June 14.—In recognition of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the accession of Emperor William to the German throne, President Wilson today sent the emperor the following message:

"In the sincere hope that a long continuance of your majesty's beneficent and peaceful reign may bring the great German people increased blessing, I offer to your majesty the cordial felicitations of the government and people of the United States, on this twenty-fifth anniversary of your majesty's accession, and my personal good wishes for your majesty's welfare."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, participated in the ceremonies.

The usual patriotic exercises were held at the little house at 239 Arch street, in the wholesale business district, where Betsy Ross made the first American flag 136 years ago.

GREAT FUNERAL PARADE FOR MILITANT "MARTYR"

Miss Davison, Killed at English Derby, Interred by the Suffragettes.

London, June 14.—Suffragettes, militant as well as non-militant, came from all parts of England today for the funeral of Miss Emiline Welding Davison, who met her death while interfering with the king's horse in the derby on June 4.

A special train brought the body of the "martyr" from Epsom to Victoria station, where a procession of 6,000 women was waiting to escort it across the city to St. George's church, Bloomsbury, where the service was held.

Crowds gathered early in the morning in the vicinity of the militant suffragette headquarters where the blinds were down and a huge banner hung at half mast. Many detachments of women arrived from the provinces to participate in the parade. They were dressed in white with purple sashes. Twenty brass bands furnished the music for the procession.

Great Display of Banners.

There was a great display of banners, bearing such legends as "right and God will give thee victory" or "unconquerable and not afraid."

The train bearing the coffin left Epsom station soon after 11 o'clock. The coffin was covered with a purple pall and was accompanied to London by Miss Davison's brother and a suffragette guard of honor.

The funeral procession started from Victoria station at 2 o'clock. The coffin covered with flowers, was in an open hearse drawn by four black horses.

Enormous crowds surrounded the station, making progress difficult.

The parade was divided into eleven sections. The suffragettes marched in fours, all carrying flowers.

The coffin was in the middle of the procession and the clergy of St. George's church, Bloomsbury, marched at the head. The rector of the church, Dr. Baumgarden, had issued a statement that he was not a sympathizer with the woman's militant tactics.

With the exception of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who was rearrested today, and "General" Mrs. Flora Drummond, who is ill, all the leaders of the militant organization occupied prominent places in the procession.

Owing to the density of the crowds through the procession moved very slowly.

Some Slight Booing

There was some slight booing here and there, but the crowds were for the most part orderly and sympathetic.

The procession, which was three-quarters of a mile long, took an hour to pass Piccadilly circus.

A number of youths cheered the women as they passed through Shaftsburg avenue, and this mark of disrespect nearly led to a conflict among the spectators.

It was 4 o'clock when the body reached St. George's church and the crowds in the vicinity were so great that all traffic was stopped half an hour before the arrival of the hearse.

It was noticed when the coffin was being carried from the hearse into the church that the purple pall had broad arrows worked in white in either side. The broad arrow is the government mark stamped on the dresses of prisoners.

At King's Cross station the crowds were so large that the police barriers were broken in the tremendous crush. The coffin was quickly transferred to the funeral train, which started about 3:40 p. m. for Morpeth, Northumberland, where the body will be buried tomorrow.

Budapest, Hungary, June 14.—A memorial service for Miss Emily Wilding Davison was held here today by Mrs. Anne Cobben-Sanderson, one of the leaders of the British delegation, in order to enable the delegates to the International Women's congress to pay a tribute to the woman who died for the cause.

At the conclusion of the service a resolution was adopted expressing admiration for the "heroic martyrdom of Miss Davison, who has given her life as a protest against the denial of justice to women."

WILSON TO MAKE FIGHT FOR CURRENCY REFORM

Washington, June 14.—President Wilson still expects the legislation enacted at the present session of congress and will bend every effort to accomplish it. The doubt raised by utterances of senators close to the administration that they were opposed to currency reform during the present session was cleared when it became known that the president planned to write his currency message to congress today. It will be presented about June 23 or 24.

It also was announced today that Secretary McAdoo and Chairmen Owen and Glass, of the senate and house banking and currency committees, respectively, had reached an agreement on the main features of the currency bill they have been drafting for two months.

The president, it is understood, however, will not go into detail in his message, preferring to back the Owen-Glass bill as an expression of his ideas. His argument will be along the lines of his letter recently to Senator Tillman, in which he declared that "in loyalty to the country" currency legislation was necessary during the present session of congress, "so that any attempt to create artificial disturbances after the tariff shall have become law may be offset by a free system of credit, which will make it possible for men, big and little, to take care of themselves in business."

HE PREFERS HIS GIRL TO CHECK FOR $10,000

Sioux City, Iowa, June 14.—An offer of $10,000 if he would give up the girl he loved and enlist in the United States navy, apparently has been turned down by Charles Jason, son of a wealthy rancher near Niobrora, Neb.

Two weeks ago the elder Jason left a check for $10,000 at the recruiting station here to be turned over to his son the moment he enlisted in the navy. The son said he would think it over, but he has failed to return, and recruiting officers do not believe he will claim the prize. He is believed to have gone to St. Paul, where his sweetheart lives.

M'REYNOLDS STUDYING NEW DISSOLUTION PLAN

Washington, June 14.—Attorney General McReynolds returned to Washington today and immediately began considering the proposal of the Union Pacific railroad made to the United States court at St. Paul to exchange $38,000,000 of Southern Pacific stock for the Pennsylvania railroad's holdings of Baltimore & Ohio.

Such an arrangement, incidental to the dissolution of the Union Pacific merger, the attorney general said, did not, on the surface, present a situation to which the government could object, but he was studying the interrelation of the roads and seeking advice to determine whether the transfer could be regarded as obnoxious.

With the present holding of Union Pacific in Baltimore & Ohio, the proposed tranfer would give to the Union Pacific 38.2 per cent of the entire outstanding stock of Baltimore & Ohio, according to the attorney general's advises. By acquiring $38,000,000 of Southern Pacific stock the Pennsylvania would control 38.2 per cent of the entire outstanding stock of the Southern Pacific.

So far the attorney general has not found any indication that competition would be suppressed.

NORFOLK AND WESTERN FIGHTS TWO-CENT LAW

Washington, June 14.—The Norfolk and Western railway today appealed to the supreme court from the decree of the Kanawha circuit court of West Virginia holding constitutional as to this road the 2-cent passenger law of 1907. The railway claims its net earning upon the capital invested in the interstate passenger business in West Virginia will be only 38-100 per cent under the 2-cent law. The supreme court is expected on Monday to pass upon the constitutionality of the act as applied to the Chesapeake and Ohio railway.

As Investment Diamonds Have Paid 10% Per Annum for Years

This fact is easily shown by tracing diamond history from 1897, since when diamonds have more than doubled in value.

Reasons for these advances are obvious. Fewer stones are being found, and finer stones rarer. Mining machinery has become obsolete on account of the greater depth of the mines. The native miners have recognized their value, and are demanding higher wages, and a radical increase in wages has been demanded and obtained by the diamond cutters.

In December, 1908, we begun calling attention to the probable rapid increase in diamond values, since when there have been several material advances, and during last few months, the Diamond Syndicate made advances on rough diamonds, which increased the value of the finished product about 12 per cent.

Anticipating this advance, we made large contracts with the cutters during the early summer season, and we are giving our customers the benefit of these prices, though it will be necessary for us to increase our prices after our present large stock is exhausted.

Exclusive Diamond Merchants, our whole time is given to the one idea of value. Our large purchases enable us to buy direct from larger cutters of the world, and our careful grading and classing, together with our positive guarantee of cash return and exchange value assures your investment.

Our mail order department is a perfect system, and your business and correspondence will be given the most careful attention.

We will be glad to mail you our Diamond Books Set No. 5 upon request.

Walker, of the First Presbyterian church, and the only attendants were Miss Eloise Gay and Miss Nannie Gresham. Mr. Gay gave the bride away.

The bride was lovely in her going-away gown of dark blue silk with white Irish lace collar and cuffs and white hat trimmed with white aigrette. Her flowers were a corsage bouquet of lilies of the valley and pink rosebuds.

The bridesmaids wore white lingerie gowns with yellow sashes and carried daisies.

An informal reception followed the ceremony. Mrs. Gay wore a white lingerie gown, and Miss Lois Fleming presided at the punch bowl.

Mr. and Mrs. Maddox left for Macon, where they will make their home.

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

If you use a simple toilet preparation and it proves to be worthless, you only lose money. When you use a questionable depilatory, however, it is a very serious matter because you not only lose money, but you take the grave risk of permanent disfigurement.

If You Value Your Face

use De Miracle, the one safe, perfected hair remover of proven merit. Remember, the injury caused by the use of doubtful hair removers will either result in permanent disfigurement or cost you many dollars because it will take months or possibly years to gain control of hair growths which have been stimulated by the use of such preparations.

De Miracle

Only Real Hair Remover on Earth

De Miracle contains certain ingredients which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality. Therefore, you must eventually use it to retard and gain control of growths which have been caused by the unwise use of questionable depilatories. Is it not safer and wiser to begin using De Miracle now, before the growth gets beyond control?

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours. If your dealer will not supply you with De Miracle, send $1.00 direct.

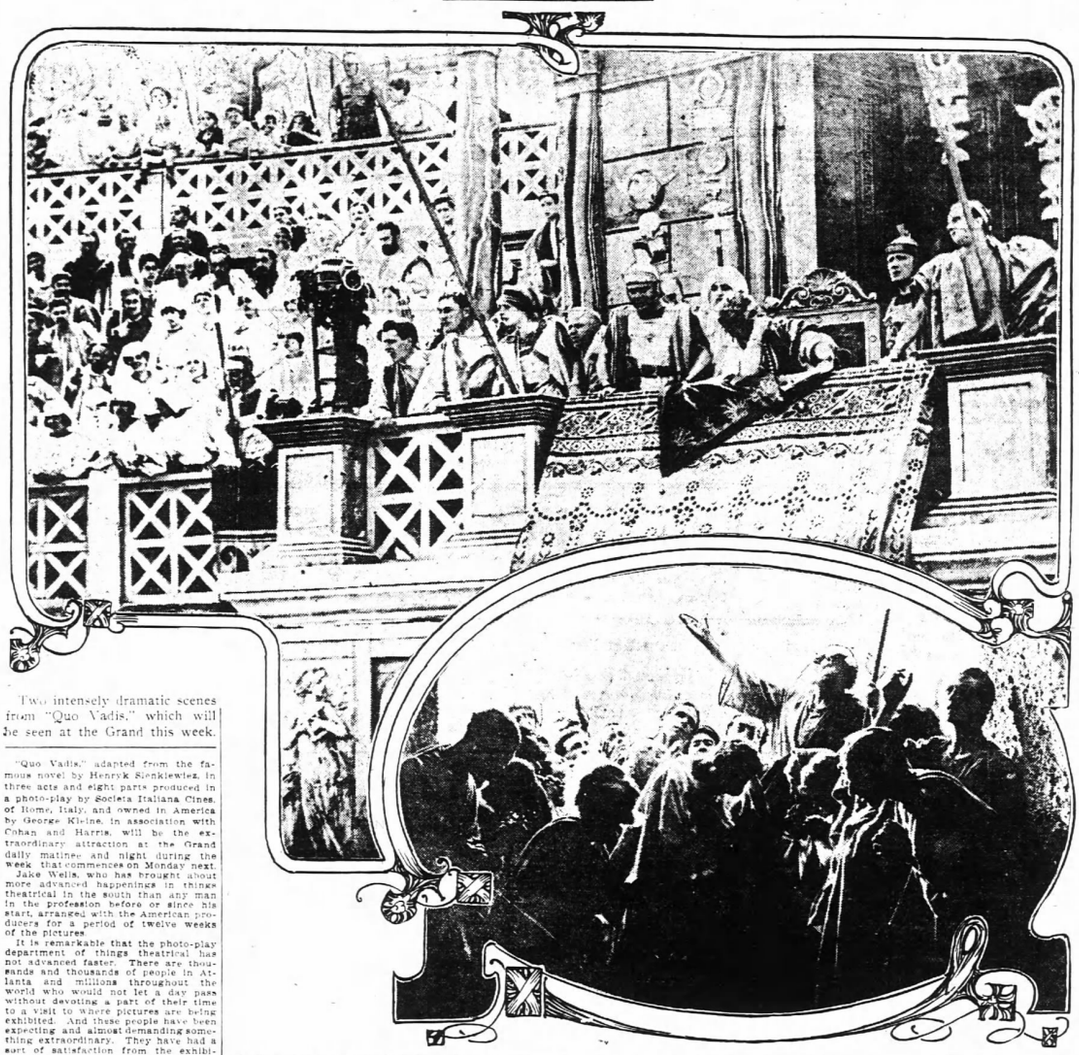
Real, Honest-to-Goodness Lions Took Part In the Making of the Quo Vadis Pictures



Two intensely dramatic scenes from "Quo Vadis," which will be seen at the Grand this week.

"Quo Vadis," adapted from the famous novel by Henryk Sienkiewicz, in three acts and eight parts produced in a photo-play by Societa Italiana Cines, of Rome, Italy, and owned in America by George Kleine, in association with Cohan and Harris, will be the extraordinary attraction at the Grand daily matinee and night during the week that commences on Monday next.

Jake Wells, who has brought about more advanced happenings in things theatrical in the south than any man in the profession before or since his start, arranged with the American producers for a period of twelve weeks of the pictures.

It is remarkable that the photo-play department of things theatrical has not advanced faster. There are thousands and thousands of people in Atlanta and millions throughout the world who would not let a day pass without devoting a part of their time to a visit to where pictures are being exhibited. And these people have been expecting and almost demanding something extraordinary. They have had a sort of satisfaction from the exhibition of feature reels, but until the production of "Quo Vadis" there has been still the atmosphere of the picture show. So grand, so great, so wonderful in every detail is "Quo Vadis" that people forget that the silent actors are not real beings performing, and that the details are not real, but simply photographs. The scenes live, the the action is intense, the details realistic.

Not Property Animals.

The wonderful series of "Quo Vadis" pictures as projected by the Kleine-Cines company was not obtained through resorting to tricks of the camera. Every foot of it is as near the "real thing" as a reasonable consideration for the safety of life and limb allowed. The beasts that appeared in the pictures were not "property" animals, but living, breathing creatures fresh from their native jungles, and the men, woman and children who faced them in the arena were real people, who actually took their lives in their hands while enacting the parts.

As a matter of fact one of the actors was crippled for life by a lion's claw. Another was badly mangled, and a third had the narrowest escape from death before the photographing of this scene was completed.

Everything shown in this remarkable film is exactly what it seems with the exception of the scenes where the animals are devouring the remains of the Christians. In this, of course, deception had to be practiced, but it was so cleverly managed that only an expert would discover it.

Actors Were Excited.

The actors who participated in the making of this wonderful reel of pictures were merely all French and Italians, and their natural excitability reached the boiling point as they faced the prospect of having to play their scenes with only a perpetually few feet of Italian atmosphere between them and a horde of savage beasts.

The Burning of Rome.

The orgies given in honor of Nero are re-enacted with the greatest precision. The burning of Rome is a thrilling part of the story, and the realism with which it is accomplished in the film fairly brings the onlooker into the conflagration as part of the fugitives trying to escape the grasp of the leaping flames, a sight in itself never to be forgotten.

The chariot races, the Christian martyrs being thrown to the wild beasts, the struggle between Ursus, the giant slave, and the savage bull, and the human beings burned alive, are among the scenes that have been enacted over again from history.

"Quo Vadis?" is a spell-binding story, and this film tells it minutely, correctly and most impressively to the accompaniment of incidental music composed to fit its many dramatic moments. The engagement at the Grand will commence with matinee on Monday afternoon, and will continue with matinee performance each day at 2:30 o'clock and evening performances at 8:30, during the week. Seats will be on sale at the box office, and reservations can be made in advance, without additional charge. Precisely the same system that is used for a regular performance will be followed during the "Quo Vadis" engagement.

At the Local Theaters

Bud Fisher at the Forsyth, and one of the Girls at the Bijou in "The Duke of Durham."

"The Duke of Durham."

"The Duke of Durham" will be the attraction at the Bijou this week, matinee and night, two daily matinees on Monday and Saturday and two performances every night. This is another of the splendid musical comedy vaudeville-tabloid attractions that has given new life to the popular family theater, and indications point to a week that will be a record-breaker for attendance.

"The Duke of Durham" is presented by a company of twenty-five people, including a chorus of pretty girls and a cast that is thoroughly capable of its assignments. It has been playing the tabloid circuit with real success, and out in the great west where it was organized and where it was a favorite offering, managers are asking for return engagements. The show was built for the one purpose of making people laugh, and it has not failed in the task. There are roaring comedy lines and situations, and there are the sort of musical numbers that win attention and repeated encores.

Lou L. Shean, the German singing comedian, is the star of the company, and plays the leading part. Shean is just the sort of fun-maker that will be popular with the Bijou patrons. He lives for fun and has fun. He is a laugh producer with original ideas and could command a position with any of the big comedy musical offerings. He has been in the tabloid department of things theatrical for all the time the tabs have been alive, and when he left vaudeville his place was not filled.

Callahan and Klein will offer a specialty during the show that will be one of the hits of "The Duke of Durham." These comedians are clever and original, and with the star have helped make the merry little play a popular attraction.

There will be no advance in regular Bijou prices and no change in the time of performances.

Bud Fisher Coming.

(At the Forsyth.)

Bud Fisher, famous the world over as the creator of "Mutt and Jeff" and other cartoons that appear in the daily newspapers, will make his second visit to Atlanta, comencing an engagement of one week at the Forsyth, starting with matinee on Monday, and the management has surrounded the famous star with a combination of Keith vaudeville of the sort that will keep things humming at the busy theater.

Bud Fisher is one of the most famous of famous people. He started his professional life away out on the Pacific coast, and his talents soon attracted the publishers of newspapers, who assigned him to some of the first comic sections that were used. He came into Chicago with a reputation any young man could be proud to possess, and then landed in New York with "Mutt and Jeff" as the star of all the funny artists. His stage experiences date from only a few years ago, when he was induced to appear in public at one of the New York vaudeville theaters, and then followed a short tour taking in the principal cities. His appearance at the Forsyth last summer was one of the events of the season, and it is believed he will establish one of the big weeks of attendance during the week he will appear at the busy theater this season. Bud Fisher is going to show just how he makes "Mutt and Jeff" and he is going to make the two famous characters perform some unusual stunts. In addition he will make other sketches and a rare good act is promised.

"The Lawn Party," is an act of unusual novelty. There are ten youngsters in the combination, who have become expert in impersonations. They are going to be seen in a number that is full of music and comedy, and will faithfully impersonate noted stage stars, including Eva Tanguay, Irene Franklin, Fay Templeton and the wonderful Caruso. The act has been staged by one of the most skilled stage directors, and the youngsters will surely become favorites with every gathering.

There is a good deal of interest centered in the engagement of pretty Pauline Welch, who was seen at the Forsyth last summer with George Spink in one of the best singing and dancing acts ever staged at the popular playhouse. Miss Welch has in a year become one of the most sought for singing comediennes. She has the exclusive use of a series of songs written for her, and will introduce the newest of the lot. It will be recalled that it was Pauline Welch who introduced "Everybody's Doing It" in Atlanta, and she says she has a song that will eclipse that hit. The Three Leightons are on the bill, and this trio of funmakers will run somebody a mighty close second for the honors of the week. The three young men have never done anything that is not original. They are to be seen in a hotel sketch, introducing a traveling salesman, a bellhop and a negro porter. They are faithful in their character work, and as singers and dancers there are few people in the profession who have become so popular.

Karl Emmy's Pets have been placed on the program as a special treat for the ladies and the children. Emmy is the owner of the best troupe of trained dogs in the stage world. He makes up a beautiful stage setting and his really remarkable performance has attracted attention all over the world.

Adonis, a gymnast of remarkable ability, will present a beautiful act, in which he is assisted by a dog that is nearly human, and Whitefield and Ireland in a comedy offering will make up the bill.

Theatergoers have not forgotten the wonderful successes at the Forsyth last summer, when the Keith attendance records registered by a local theater were marked up, and some great acts were shown here. The theater has started out this season to eclipse all other records, and with such shows as the one that has just concluded a week and the show that is coming, headed by Bud Fisher, there is a big chance to out-do the success of the past.

A woman thinks more of her figure and complexion than a man does of everything he pays taxes on.

The average man's notion of fine music is the sound of his own voice.

MONEY OF GEORGIA POURED INTO WEST FOR BUYING GRAIN

Cordele, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—According to an authentic report three of Cordele's banks paid out for imported feed stuffs from the west between January 1 and May 1 of this year a total sum of $600,000. By good authority it is also stated that approximately $2,000,000 was paid out from the banks of Albany during the same length of time for the same purpose.

Bringing to light these figures has created a great deal of discussion, opposing the too commonly practiced rule of the farmers of this section of making cotton the chief crop. It is argued by business men and a number of farmers that this drain of money from this section each year is almost wholly responsible for the tightening up in financial circles in some parts of south Georgia during the summer. These facts and figures seem to be a revelation to the farmers themselves, and will doubtless prove a great influence in developing more generally the "live at home" plan, and the production of more corn and other grain crops.

In discussing this situation, one prominent farmer, who states that he learned years ago that the "live at home" plan was the most profitable, said:

"Why the section has escaped bankruptcy is a tribute to the innate, or natural resources, or productiveness, of the land rather than to the wisdom of the man. There should be no demand here for the purchase of imported feed stuffs. No part of the south can surpass this in grain growing, and it is the lack of it upon a systematic basis on almost every plantation that is responsible. It is high time that something was being done to break the dominion of the usurper, 'King Cotton,' and solve the problem by a division between this and other crops on the farm for home consumption."

Hitting Our Inventors.

(Gilbert H. Montague, in Leslie's.)

The Oldfield bill proposes that whenever any patent has been used in connection with any combination in restraint of trade, the patent may be condemned and forfeited; and further that "such restraint shall be conclusively deemed to have been or to be unreasonable" and in violation of the Sherman law, if the vendor of any patented article does any of a number of acts. None of these acts are forbidden to manufacturers or dealers in unpatented articles. Only those who have spent their time and money advancing progress and the arts by developing and introducing new and useful inventions are subjected to this wholesale outlawry. But every manufacturer and dealer in patented articles becomes a criminal if he tries to secure a year's business as a condition of selling to a dealer; if he tries to hold the dealer to his agreement to buy his patented goods exclusively or to a certain extent; if he tries to hold the dealer to his agreement to maintain a standard price on the patented goods; if he licenses the use of a delicate patented machine on condition that it be used only with specially prepared supplies or in continuity with specially adapted machinery necessary to insure the perfect operation of the patented machine; if he limits the licensee's line of business so that he may license to others the exclusive use of his patented machine in other lines of business; if he agrees with a retailer in a town to sell his patented goods to no one else in the same town or to sell to other retailers only on less favorable terms, in consideration of which the retailer shall push the sale of the goods; of if he sells his patented goods in any particular territory at a less price than he sells elsewhere.

The penalty for doing any of these things is the forfeiture of the patent, a fine of $5,000 and a year's imprisonment, and the payment of three-fold damages and the costs of suit and attorneys' fees to anyone who comes in within three years thereafter and proves any damage. But manufacturers and dealers in every other form of property are left absolutely free to do any or all of these things.

The Prudent Farmer to His Love

(From Judge.)

Come, live with me and be my love,
And I'll buy thee a new cook stove;
Then, summer, autumn, winter, spring,
You'll feel your every wish a thing.
I'll buy thee, too, a chair that rocks,
While you may sit and darn my socks;
And for your needle's little eye,
A deep content shall fill your soul
That it is you who sit there rocking,
And no one else may darn my stocking.

A mattress made of shucks and hay
Shall rest you at the close of day;
A clock with loud alarm shall warn
Your sleeping head when night is gone.
I'll buy these, too, a muslin gown,
To wear some sundays into town.
I'll give you damaged corn to feed
The chickens, and if you succeed
Well with the egs and fowls and milk,
I'll give you somewhat toward a silk.
If all these promsed joys can move,
Come, live with me and be my love.

Solving the Problem of the Summer Linen Wardrobe

How the Mother of Three Daughters Manages

THE morning after Mildred returned home from her commencement day visit, we three grown-ups sat down—Ruth only sits down to eat—and talked over our Summer outfits. After considering various fabrics for our church-going costumes, we decided that foulards would prove most serviceable. Also that Mildred needed a washable pattern on frocks. Linens is simple enough about costume and I sometimes wish I could be worn all day in the morning if I did not feel like changing to lingerie. Then we started to three separate directions to buy our materials. We have done this a week or two later so as not to influence each other by voicing opinions. The result is quite amusing. Mildred is most delighted, and can Blame only herself, and no one can say "I told you so."

Mildred bought linen canton crepe in black patterned with clover and white rings scattered with enormous dots, and when I arrived in the room she had a two-piece affair in front of the mirror. It is the simplest possible thing. Four inches of the skirt is turned over to the right side and gathered into a tight waist line. With a straight seam the skirt is left wide on

BEST LEGISLATURE IN YEARS IS VERDICT OF WISE ONES

Present General Assembly May Be Counted On to Do Real Work and Not Spend Time on Freak Measures.

MANY OLD LEADERS FAIL TO COME BACK

However, Their Places Will Be Filled by Capable Men Who Can Be Counted On to Be Heard From.

By T. B. Conner.

What is the legislature going to do this summer? That is the question that a great many people in Georgia will be asking each other during the ten days that intervene between now and the time that the house and senate will gather in their respective halls in the capitol for the annual grist of laws.

Judging by the conduct of some of our past legislative bodies, there are a lot of people doubtless who will prefer to frame the question: "What fool thing will the legislature do?" They have acquired the habit, whether justly or not need not be considered here, of looking to the solons to furnish a fair quota of their summer amusement, to put some spice into the dull days of the heated season. It is not unlikely that those who are looking for this are going to be doomed to disappointment.

Not a "Fool" Legislature.

In forming an estimate of what any legislative body, or any other body of men for that matter, will accomplish, two things need to be considered. First, the personnel of the body; second, the subject matter of its deliberations. In other words, what sort of men have you? And what are you going to give them to do?

In answer to the first of these questions, it may be said that, if the character of its make-up is to be taken as any criterion, the in-coming general assembly will not be a "fool legislature, a comic opera crowd whose chief function is to furnish public amusement. Political observers of long standing who are well qualified to judge in such matters have pronounced it the best all around legislature that has gathered in Georgia in more than a decade. Whatever may be the attitude of the public towards it, it may be stated with every expectation of certainty that this general assembly is going to take itself and its work seriously.

Less Factionalism Than in Years.

It may be considered of particularly good omen to the business interests of the state that this legislature will be much freer from the spirit of faction than any legislative body that has met in Atlanta since 1907. Of course, there are a few extreme partisans who may take occasion to vent their spleen as the session develops, but generally there will be a forgetting of the animosities of the past and a disposition on the part of members to devote themselves to measures of constructive legislation for the good of the whole state.

The truth is that this is the first time since 1906 that the general assembly has met that the state has not been either in the very heat of a bitter factional contest or suffering from the wounds inflicted by one just past. No such condition exists this year. The gubernatorial campaign of 1912 was a one-sided and so nearly exempt from the angry charges and recriminations heretofore indulged in by candidates and their friends, that is not at all likely that Governor Slaton will meet with the factious opposition to the legislation he recommends which confronted Governor Brown throughout his incumbency in office.

About Usual Percentage Returned.

An error has been largely current among the people and has been repeated a number of times in some of the newspapers of the state to the effect that this legislature is, to a very much greater extent than usual, made up of new men—men without previous experience or parliamentary training. It is true that a number of the most prominent members of the last house will be missed in this, but it is hardly fair to those members of the present general assembly, who have done the public much service, and whose names are associated with some of the most important legislation placed on the statute book in recent years, to say that the legislature as a whole is an untried body, made up largely of new men. The fact is that the number of men returned from the last general assembly is about up to the usual average.

To begin with the house, the most numerous branch of the legislature, there are more than fifty representatives in that body who have had previous experience in making laws for Georgia. Thirty-seven of the members of the previous house have been returned to this. Eighteen of the house of 1909-10 are representing their respective counties this year, eleven of them serving for three consecutive terms or longer, and eight who were not members of the last house. Two members of the present house, T. W. Oliver, of Quitman, and J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter, were in the senate last year, and three, W. H. Burwell, of Hancock; W. F. Slater, of Bryan, and L. R. Akin, of Glynn, were in the senate of 1909-10. At least three of the present house, R. B. Blackburn, of Fulton; B. J. Fowler, of Bibb, and Garnett A. Green, of Wilkes, saw legislative service prior to 1909.

Fullbright a Leader.

Among the first men in influence in the house this year will be Henry J. Fullbright, of Burke county. Mr. Fullbright made his mark as a leader on his first entrance into the house and he now has several terms of consecutive service to his credit. He was chairman of the second general judiciary committee last year and had other prominent committee assignments. He was at one time in the race for speaker, and he would have made a good race undoubtedly, but he was withdrawn. It is not unlikely that he can have almost his choice of committees, and he will have a very large say in putting measures over this summer. He is very much interested in compulsory education and in abolishing the office of solicitor general.

When it comes to making up the state's budget for the two ensuing years and raising the revenue therefor, W. F. Slater, of Bryan, will have a large voice. Mr. Slater was chairman of the senate committee on finance when he was a member of that body in 1909-10. He is also remembered as the author of the bill providing for biennial sessions of the legislature, for which a hard fight was made, and which will probably be again an issue this year. He is very much in favor of some new tax legislation, and has prepared a bill to tax collateral inheritances.

Dibb's Representatives.

A man of infinite jest, but also very capable of handling serious matters, who comes back to the house, is Minter Wimberly, of Bibb. Mr. Wimberly is remembered as the author of the fish and game law enacted by the last general assembly, and if the birds had any way of expressing their gratitude they would join in giving him a grand concert when he returns to Atlanta this year. Mr. Wimberly's colleagues, B. J. Bowers and Wallace Miller are able men too, the former having served in the house of 1907-08, while the latter still has his spurs to win. His friends are confident that he will make his mark in the house this year.

Of the six big counties in the state, Muscogee will unfortunately have the least experienced delegation. Only one of her representatives is a new man, E. H. Swift. Two of them, J. J. Slade and Ed Wohlwender, were not only members of the last house, but of the house before that, and one of them, Mr. Slade, a veteran of the Civil War, will be the Nestor of the legislature, he having been coming to the house from Muscogee from a time when some of the younger members were in swaddling clothes.

Of the four remaining big counties, Bibb, Richmond and Chatham send only one each of their last year's delegation back, namely, S. F. Garlington and Joseph McCarthy. Both are serving their third consecutive term in the house. The former will probably score a record this year in the introduction of local bills, he having been regarded as the spokesman of union labor in the legislature. The other two big counties, Fulton and Floyd, have each an entirely new delegation. Two of their representatives, however, will not be without previous legislative experience. Will Hill Hall, of Floyd, was a representation in 1909-10, and although one of the youngest members, he won a reputation for eloquence almost equal to that of his father, the redoubtable Seaborn. R. B. Blackburn, of Fulton, is also no new hand at the legislative game, but it will take another paragraph to tell what may be expected from him this year.

Bob Blackburn a Power.

Mr. Blackburn was a member of the house years ago with Governor-elect J. M. Slaton, whom he helped to make speaker. He will be a new man to most of the members of the present body, but if they presume on that fact to regard him as a fledgling in legislation, they will mighty quick find themselves mistaken. Bob Blackburn cut his wisdom teeth before most of the members of the present house were born, and for acuteness and skill in manipulating delicate matters of legislation, it is doubtful whether he will have an equal in the body.

Coming back to the house this year from Marion county after an interval of two years is E. H. McMichael, well known to all the teachers of the state as author of the McMichael law, which has almost wrought a revolution in our system of education. Mr. McMichael will stand a good chance of being the head of the house committee on education this year, as he was in 1909-10, but whether he is or not his influence will be a large factor in any legislation with regard to schools.

With Fight for Cheap Books.

Like McMichael, there will return, after an interval of two years, C. R. McCrory, of Schley, who has declared war to the bitter end on the so-called school book trust. Mr. McCrory proposes that the state should itself undertake the editing and printing of the text books used in the public schools of the state, thus, by doing this, and by selling the books to children at actual cost, the parents of the state will be saved $600,000 a year in this item alone.

Of the men who made their mark in the last house and who will undoubtedly be heard from in this, is O. T. Gower, of Crisp, the author of the new law regulating the business of insurance. Mr. Gower has been giving much study of late to the problem of tax revision and he will undoubtedly be heard from on that subject this summer.

Representing particularly the growing business interests of the extreme southern portion of the state will be L. R. Akin, of Glynn. Mr. Akin served a term in the senate several years ago and was one of the most influential members of that branch of the general assembly. He will be heard from on a plan he has to drain the low lying river lands of southeast Georgia, which he claims may be done at a moderate outlay and which will add enormously to the taxable values of the state.

Business Interests Represented.

Special business interests and the various professions will not be unrepresented Lawyers, of course, will predominate as usual, with farmers second, but there will be a good sprinkling of men from other vocations. Dr. A. S. J. Stovall, of Elbert, an experienced legislator, and Dr. L. S. Ledbetter, of Polk, will speak for the medical and dental professions. Tinsley Ragsland, of Talbot, will be heard when the traveling men make their annual kick for longer sheets and cleaner towels at country hotels. E. D. Cole, of Bartow, may be expected to stand up for the drug and soft drink industries.

Few Extremists.

As has already been indicated, there will be few extremists in this house. There will be progressives a plenty, but not many ultras. If anyone could be singled out as representative of the extreme left along this line, it would be J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter. H. J. Strickland, of Pierce, is regarded as the special friend and in a sense the spokesman of Tom Watson. D. C. Pickett, of Terrell, is not to be classed as a radical by any means, but he is known to favor some pretty thorough legislation affecting the entire judicial system of the state.

Among the new members of the house who may be expected to make their mark before the session is over mention should be made of J. F. Rhodes, of Clarke, former mayor of Athens; Shelton Mack, of Chatham; C. M. Methvin, of Dodge; J. B. Clements, of Irwin, and J. M. Spence, of Mitchell. All of these men have already attained a more than local reputation and they will very likely be counted among the leaders before many weeks of the summer have passed.

Edmondson the Youngest.

No account of the new members of the house would be complete without special reference to C. C. Edmondson, of Brooks, the youngest and most ambitious of them all. He has proposed for himself no less a task than the revision of the state's fundamental law by a constitutional convention. Not a bit discouraged by the practical unanimity with which the lawyers of the state turned down his proposition at Warm Springs recently, Edmondson knows that he can afford to look to the future and he is confident that the time is not very far distant when there will be a very general demand in Georgia for a new constitution.

Speakership Candidates.

As they will be much in the public eye anyway between now and the opening session, it has not been thought necessary to single out for special mention the three men who are trying for the speakership. All of them are men of extensive legislative experience, two of them, W. H. Burwell, of Hancock, and J. B. Sheppard, of Sumter, having served in both house and senate in previous years, and R. N. Hardeman, of Jefferson, having a long period of continuous service in the house to his credit.

Turning to the other branch of the general assembly, the senate, it may be said that while, owing to our habit of passing the senatorships around among the various counties that make up the districts in turn, we have this year in the senate an entirely new body of men, not one of them having served in the last senate, they are by no means inexperienced, a large proportion of them than usual having been tried out in one or the other of the houses of former legislatures.

More Experienced Men in Senate.

To say nothing of the men who are making it worth while for each other in their chase of the presidency of the body, namely, Randolph Anderson, of the First district, and J. T. Allen, of the Twentieth, both of whom have already statewide reputations gained in the legislative arena, the former in the house and the latter in the senate, there are no less than thirteen other members this year who have had the benefit of previous parliamentary training. Thus it will be seen that the senate has a considerably larger percentage of experienced men than the house.

South Georgia will have fully her share of the strong men of the senate. W. L. Peacock, of the Second, a wealthy business man of Valdosta, goes from the house where he has just served several terms to the smaller chamber on the other side of the capitol. He may not be heard from very often in debate, but he will be a power in the committee room and will have much to say in the shaping of legislation.

W. M. Oliff, of the Fourth, made some reputation as solicitor of the city court of Folkston, and, while a new man in the legislature, is ambitious and forceful and will likely be one of the leaders before the session is many days old.

G. Y. Harris, of the Twelfth, is the only man in the present senate who served as a senator so recently as the general assembly before last. How he manages to get one of the counties of his district to forego its turn in the senate in order to send him back has not been explained, but there are doubtless good and sufficient reasons.

Atlanta's Senator.

Atlanta's senator is G. M. Hule, of Clayton county. Mr. Hule has been sent by the people of his county to represent them in the house several times and it was very likely on his past record as a representative that they considered him worthy of standing for the chief city in the state in the senate this year.

The interests of agriculture will be the special care of John W. L. Brown, the senator from the Forty-second. Mr. Brown is a former president of the State Agricultural society and is probably better known to the farmers of the state than any other man in either branch of the legislature.

The cities of the state that have men in the senate this year are Savannah, Columbus, Macon and Athens. Atlanta and Augusta had to give way to one of the country counties in their districts, after having enjoyed the privilege of sending their men for two terms each.

City Men in Senate.

Everyone knows that Savannah will be represented by Randolph Anderson. The other city members are not at all well-known as Senator Anderson, but are all able men and two of them are men of previous parliamentary training. B. S. Miller, of the Twenty-fourth, who hails from Columbus, has been in the senate before, while the Athens senator, R. T. DuBose, of the Thirtieth, was a member of the house last year. The Macon senator, W. D. McNeil, of the Twenty-second, has never served in the legislature before, but he is one of the best known criminal lawyers in the state, and will probably make his mark as a legislator.

While there is the usual percentage of men with no parliamentary training in both branches of the general assembly this year, it is also true that a large number of the leaders of last year and of recent legislative sessions in Georgia will be absent.

The Absent Ones.

Gone will be Joe Hill Hall, of Bibb, the old warhorse, who while in the house constituted himself as the special guardian of the constitution and watchdog of the treasury; gone are W. R. Jones, of Meriwether, and Walter McElreath, of Fulton, both of them former chairmen of the house committee on appropriations and leaders in debates; gone is Hooper Alexander, of DeKalb, the spectacular, who had so much to say every year about what the state should do with the Western and Atlantic railroad, and now that the legislature will likely do something with that property, he will be away; gone are both the Tippinses, about one of whom so much was heard last year in connection with the effort then made to draw tighter the net of the prohibition law.

Other prominent leaders are gone, too, and new men will be advanced to take their places, but all these old leaders are not gone and the indications are that from the raw material sent to the houses this year new leaders will develop. Sadly as some of the old leaders will be missed, there is no occasion to fear that this legislature will be weaker either in leadership or in patriotism than those that have immediately preceded it. With the political calm now prevailing in the state, the chances are decidedly in its favor.

EXPERTS ARE WANTED TO VALUE RAILROADS

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(Special.)—The interstate commerce commission, in preparing for the physical valuation of railroads, under the Adamson-La Follette act, will make quite a large number of appointments within the near future. All of these positions are under the civil service and will almost exclusively be filled from persons who have had actual experience and technical knowledge in connection with railroad work.

The civil service commission has announced examinations on July 21 for the following positions in connection with this service: Senior civil engineer, senior structural engineer, senior inspector of motive power, senior railway signal engineer, senior mechanical engineer, senior architect.

The commission also announces an examination on July 23 for the following positions: Civil engineer, structural engineer, inspector of car equipment, electrical engineer, inspector of motive power, railway signal engineer and mechanical engineer.

Examinations will be held at the following places in Georgia: Atlanta, Athens, Augusta, Macon, Savannah and Thomasville.

The examinations are only open to males. Anyone desiring to take either of these examinations should write to the United States civil service commission, Washington, D. C., for form 2059.

VARDAMAN IS WORKING FOR MRS. LONGSTREET

Senator Wants Blot of Inefficiency Removed From Her Record.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, June 14.—(Special.)—Before Mrs. Ham is confirmed as postmaster at Gainesville, Senator Vardaman, of Mississippi, wants some action taken that will remove from Mrs. Longstreet's record any blot of inefficiency.

The question of her confirmation came up yesterday, and Senator Vardaman stated his opinion that the post-office department had not really meant to charge that the conduct of the office had not been satisfactory. He will seek to secure a statement from the postmaster general himself to that effect. He will also ask that Mrs. Longstreet's statement before the sub-committee of the senate committee on postoffices and post roads be printed for general distribution. The record would fill several hundred printed pages, as Mrs. Longstreet spoke for four hours, and read into the record a large number of letters and testimonials.

Representative Bell has ont had anything to say about the defeat of his nominee, A. S. Hardy, and will not do so until after the case is settled and Mrs. Ham is confirmed. Then he promises to make a statement reviewing the whole situation.

Watch Your Baby These Summer Days

Little Stomachs Get Out of Order Easily in Hot Weather.

During the hot months mothers should look very carefully to the condition of the bowels of babies and young children, and, for that matter, it is very important in the lives of people at all ages. Care should be taken that the water is pure, the milk wholesome and the fruit ripe (though not over-ripe), and that not too much of anything is eaten.

When trouble results it is usually in the form of constipation or of diarrhoea. If the child loses appetite, is fretful or languid, and complains of headache, you may look for constipation. Give it a small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at night on retiring, and by morning this pleasant laxative will have acted and the child will be its normal self again.

At the first sign of a summer cold also give Syrup Pepsin, as the cleaning out of the bowels will usually be sufficient to break the cold. Summer diarrhoea can be stopped in the same way by ridding the bowels of the poisons and germs that cause the trouble. This opinion of the value of Syrup Pepsin is shared by thousands of people like Mrs. Ella Denzel, 124 Nichols Ave., Stafford, Conn., who uses it successfully herself and gives it to her two little boys; and Mrs. C. C. Allen, of New Monterey, Cal., who finds it in every particular just what she and the family need.

Avoid giving children cathartics, purgative pills or powders, as they are too harsh. Confine yourself to a gentle laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You can obtain it of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter being the family size.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

STAY-AT-HOMES WILL GIVE A BIG DINNER

Feast at Durand's Saturday Prepared for Lately Returned Members of Old Guard.

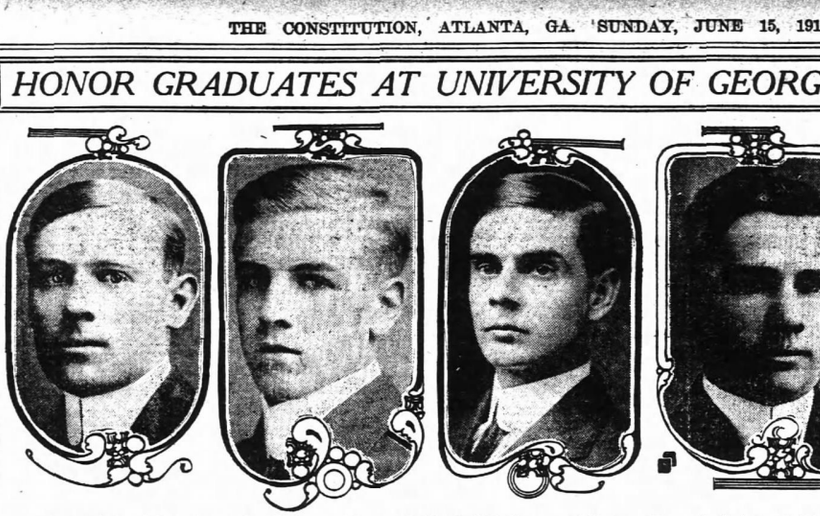
Arrangements have just been completed for a big dinner which the stay-at-homes of the Old Guard are going to give to those who went on the recent trip north. The dinner will be at Durand's restaurant next Saturday night, and will be such an affair as to show the Atlantans who went abroad to advertise their city to the people of "Yankee Land" how their work was appreciated by those who could not go.

George M. Napier has been selected to act as toastmaster. Those who will respond to toasts will be announced later. The following committee has the details of the arrangements in hand, and they can be depended on to make the dinner a success in every way: George M. Napier, W. L. Hancock, Edward L. Whyte, Dan Carey, General A. J. West and Colonel Fred M. Paxon.

The printing of the official program, which it is intended to make a handsome souvenir of the northern trip, will be attended to by Captain C. P. Byrd.

The following guests of honor will be invited to be present: Governor-Joseph M. Brown, Governor-elect John M. Slaton, Brigadier General R. K. Evans, commander of the department of the gulf and his aide-de-camp, Colonel A. Van Orsdale, Colonel E. E. Pegmeroy, of the Fifth regiment Georgia National Guard; Clark Howell, J. R. Gray and Foster Coates.

HONOR GRADUATES AT UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA



From left to right: George L. Williams of Lawrenceville, R. Hill Freeman of Newnan, Ernest L. Jackson of Athens and Mark W. Fitzpatrick of Jeffersonville. On Wednesday morning the above-named young men will be graduated from the University with honors, each having achieved distinction in every subject during the entire college course of four years. This is considered one of the greatest honors to be attained at Georgia. The four will occupy important places on the program commencement day.

SON OF ENGLISH LORD TO GET OUT OF PRISON

Leavenworth, Kan., June 14.—Frederick Grey, who is to be released from the federal prison here Monday, makes the claim that he is the son of "John Grey, Lord Deruthyn," of Lancashire, England. When the prisoner made this claim today in the presence of the deputy warden his attention was called to the fact that the books of peerage did not contain the name of his father, but of one Cecil Talbot Clifton, Baron Deruthyn. Grey still insists upon his claim and said:

"Baron Deruthyn is of another branch of the family."

He handed the warden to have mailed a letter addressed "Hon. Lady Grey, Ruthyn, Lancashire, England," and declared this was to his sister.

Grey was sent to prison from Washington, D. C., March 9, 1911, upon conviction of misuse of the mails in connection with the exploitation of 80,000 acres of Mexican land. His sentence was for three years, but because of good behavior he has gained advantage of the three-fourths rule. His release calls for deportation as an "undesirable citizen," but instead of being sent to England, Grey will be allowed to go to Mexico to look after business affairs.

COL. F. J. PAXON RESIGNS FROM BOND COMMITTEE

Colonel Fred J. Paxon has sent to Mayor Woodward his resignation as a member of the bond committee, and the mayor has referred the matter to Councilman Albert Thomson, chairman of the committee.

Explaining his resignation, Colonel Paxon says that he will not be able to attend the sessions of the committee because of the press of business. Chairman Thomson has not named his successor. Sam Brady has been named to succeed Jerome Jones, who resigned because of ill health.

The committee has been called to meet at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of organizing and discussing the advisability of a bond issued and the projects which are necessary, and will be carried out in the event the people vote the money. Chairman Thomson believes that at least $1,500,000 should be decided on to relieve stringent money conditions.

Chairman Thomson says he will ask the special committee to give the project its undivided support.

"We will have to start a campaign of education to let the people know just what is needed by the city government," he said. "It will be necessary to get the support of Mayor Woodward, but I am informed through the press that he is opposed to the issue. It is certain that improvements must be done, otherwise the city will not make much progress."

It is rumored that Alderman J. H. Harwell, of the first ward, has in contemplation a resolution urging council to authorize increasing the taxes to $1.50 instead of $1.25, and eliminate the sanitary tax of $3. It is estimated that the increase will yield approximately $400,000, while the elimination of the sanitary tax will cut about $120,000 from the revenue of the city.

"UNCLE JOHN" ROSS TO REST IN WEST VIEW

Simple funeral services at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Barclay & Brandon's chapel, preceding the interment at West View, will formally mark the passing of "Uncle John" Ross, one of the most unique and lovable characters who ever served time at the federal prison.

The man who started out in life as a sailor from Nova Scotia, and finally killed a man in a drunken brawl, in Yokohama, Japan, had been in prison for 13 years. At the federal prison he had become converted and at his death was president of the prison Christian Endeavor society. He was beloved alike by men and guards and numbers of the latter will attend the services over his body.

CHINK AND FILIPINO AMONG ARMY PLEBES

West Point, N. Y., June 14.—One hundred and sixty-four cadets or "plebes" were today sworn in at West Point. They are the men who passed examinations held throughout the country during April and May of this year. Among the number reported was a Chinaman and a Filipino.

The cadets will live in barracks until after July 18, when they will move into camp with the battalion.

ATLANTANS PRAISE BALTIMORE AD MEN

Home-Comers Are Enthusiastic Over the Treatment at Convention.

Members of the Atlanta Ad Men's club are not likely to forget, at least for some time to come, that Baltimore—spelled with a capital "B"—is some burg.

The Gate City delegates returned, some marching in Friday and a few stragglers coming in Saturday, each bubbling over with enthusiasm over the convention just ended, and telling of the great banquet at Gwynn Oak, in which more than 4,000 ad scribblers took part.

J. R. Holliday, who happened to be the first of the delegation spied by a reporter, could talk of nothing but the banquet—six hundred quarts of Apollinaris water used to wash down the delicious chowder and deviled crabs. Of course, there were other brands of water, pure and fine, but Mr. Holliday is authority for the statement that Apollinaris was the real thing.

Here is what he says was required to feed 4,000 famished ad men:

Sixty-five hundred dollars.

Two hundred chickens.

Six thousand rolls.

Three hundred and fifty boxes of crackers.

Fourteen thousand pieces of silver.

A quarter of a ton of beef.

Four thousand crabs.

Three hundred and twenty-five gallons of soup.

Two hundred and fifty gallons of coffee.

Four hundred and fifty bottles of olives.

Six hundred bottles of Apollinaris.

One hundred pounds of lump sugar.

Seventeen thousand five hundred dishes.

Six hundred yards of table cloth.

Two hundred waiters.

Twenty cooks, working for more than the eight hours.

Seventy dozen tomatoes.

And to carry the food to Gwynn Oak from town, forty drays, making a dozen trips were required. No estimate could be hazarded at what the whole weighed, but the curious may be able to figure it out from the above statistics.

"The dinner was the largest, in point of attendance, ever given in Baltimore," Mr. Holliday said. "It was some task to feed 4,000 people, especially when 4,000 have well developed appetites."

Other members of the Atlanta delegation were loud in their praises of the entertainment of the Baltimore ad men. They say that everything was done to make the visitors happy and comfortable.

Washington, June 14.—Senator Vardaman declared today at the regular session of congress, beginning in December, he would try to bring about a congressional investigation of the causes of railroad wrecks.

ILL HEALTH CAUSES WOMAN TO END LIFE BY DRINKING POISON

Zebulon, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Mrs. Bush, wife of J. B. Bush, who lives about three miles from Zebulon, committed suicide this morning by drinking carbolic acid. Ill health is thought to be the cause of her rash act.

She was about 35 years of age and besides her husband leaves four children.

GIDEONS PUT BIBLES IN HOTELS OF THE CITY

One thousand pounds of Bibles were placed in Atlanta hotel rooms yesterday by the Gideons—one Bible to the pound. One year ago this order of Christian traveling men began this work, and Saturday's work practically completed it.

Promptly at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon the first Bible was placed in the Southern Hotel. And then the rounds with the Bible laden auto truck began, nine hotels being supplied.

There were many pathetic incidents, as well as humorous ones, which occurred when the little band, under President C. H. Burge of the Atlanta camp, made the rounds of the rooms.

"Wound you mind placing this Bible on your dresser, ma'am?" the Gideon asked.

"You bet your boots I will, and mighty glad to have it here," a deep masculine voice answered.

At each hotel visited the utmost consideration was shown the Gideons by the house authorities. The dispatch with which the work was carried out is shown by the fact that 78 Bibles were placed in that number of rooms within fifteen minutes at the Georgian Terrace.

The hotels supplied, and the number of Bibles placed, were: The Winecoff, 200, in charge of management until hotel formally opens. Georgian Terrace, 75; Ansley, 300; Kimball, 35; Completing last year work; Imperial, 120; Piedmont, 50, completing last year's distribution; Southern, 55; Britains, 60; Dakota, 45, and the Marion, 60.

FIGHT WILL BE MADE ON COMMERCE COURT

Washington, June 14.—The opponents of the commerce court in the house are prepared for a good fight in the democratic caucus on June 25 on the proposal to abolish that tribunal. Chairman Adamson and Representative Sims, of the interstate commerce commission, object to any continuance of the commerce court, and are prepared to oppose it as useless and destructive of the efficiency of the interstate commerce commission. They believe its duties should be performed by courts of justice, not "commerce." Representative Broussard, of Louisiana, is ready to urge the need of such a tribunal.

The caucus under the present plan will consider the question of continuance with an appropriation of approximately $30,000 in the urgent deficiency bill, to carry the court along until the next session.

SICK WOMAN RESCUED FROM BLAZING BUILDING

Unnamed Heroes Save Mrs. Oscar Touchstone From Flames in Macon Home.

Macon, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Fire which destroyed the home of Mrs. Oscar D. Touchstone, 912 Orange street, this morning, came near costing the lives of Mrs. Touchstone and W. C. Holt, who occupies the upper story of the house.

Mrs. Touchstone has been critically ill since the tragic death of her husband a few days ago, when a Central of Georgia freight train fell through a trestle over Beaver creek and this morning the fire had gained a good headway in her home when two men burst into the room and lifting her from her bed carried her to safety. Mr. Holt, who was sleeping upstairs, was dragged from his bed just as the roof gave way and fell into the room with a crash.

The fire spread to the adjoining houses on each side, they being occupied by B. F. Anderson and T. L. Walton. The roofs were burned from each.

The Touchstone residence was practically destroyed, the loss amounting to about $3,000.

Rolston county canning agent and she will have charge of the instruction of the members of the girls' canning clubs during the summer months. Mrs. Rolston has recently completed a course at the State College of Agriculture and it is her plan to organize the girls into community groups. There are 159 girls in Bibb county who are members of the canning clubs who will compete for prizes this summer at the state fair.

30 Days for H. S. Jackson.

Macon, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Judge Speer this morning, acting on the recommendation for mercy from the jury which tried Henry S. Jackson, former postmaster at Williamson, in Pike county, for embezzlement, sentenced Jackson from the above statistics. "The dinner was the largest, in point of attendance, ever given in Baltimore," Mr. Holliday said. "It was some task to feed 4,000 people, especially when 4,000 have well developed appetites."

Other members of the Atlanta delegation were loud in their praises of the entertainment of the Baltimore ad men. They say that everything was done to make the visitors happy and comfortable.

For Railway Wreck Probe.

THOUSANDS OF CATTLE SHIPPED INTO WEST AT GEORGIA'S LOSS

Albany, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Albany people were again forcibly reminded yesterday of the activity of western cattle men in buying up the beef cattle of this section for shipment beyond the Mississippi, there to be fattened and resold to the south at fancy prices. A recent dispatch from Albany told of the shipment of several hundred head of cattle from Mitchell county to the 101 ranch, near Kansas City, the shipment being temporarily held up by the federal authorities because the cattle had not been sprayed for the cattle tick.

Yesterday a drove of 400 Piney woods steers was driven through several Albany streets from the River bridge to the Central freight yards, where they were placed in cars for shipment to Missouri. The owner of this bunch of cattle, Dan Miller, has been buying them up throughout this and neighboring counties for several weeks, and he stated he had more than a thousand head, in addition to the four hundred shipped today.

An Albany business man jocularly called the man to task for taking this section's cattle away in such large number. He replied that the people of this section did not seem to be able to appreciate their opportunities and advantages, and that if the steers could not, or would not, be fattened in southwest Georgia, they might as well be sent where they will be fattened.

The incident serves to call attention to the movement being agitated in several southwest Georgia counties looking to the establishment of at least one up-to-date slaughter house with adequate cold storage facilities. A number of the big farmers of this section have declared that if Albany, or any other town in this part of the state, will provide the packing house, enough cattle and hogs to make it profitable to its promoters will be guaranteed.

MIMS GETS 4 YEARS IN PEN FOR SENDING THREATS TO MOTHER

Macon, Ga., June 14.—Thomas H. Mims, of Elko, Ga., was today sentenced by Judge Emory Speer in the United States court to serve four years in the Atlanta federal prison for sending a threatening letter to his mother. Mims demanded a sum of money and the demand was accompanied by a threat.

His mother placed the letter in the hands of the postal authorities and Mims' arrest and conviction followed.

WAR CORRESPONDENT TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

New York, June 14.—Angus Hamilton, former war correspondent in the Balkans for the Central News association, of London cut his throat and killed himself in his apartments at an uptown hotel today. He had been here but a short time, lecturing on the Balkan war. At the outbreak of hostilities he was assigned to accompany a detachment of the Turkish army. He was captured by the Bulgars and imprisoned as a spy, but made his escape.

Mr. Hamilton, who was one of the most widely known war correspondents of modern times, was 43 years old and a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London. His book on Korea is generally regarded as a standard. He was a stepson of Sir Arthur Pinero the playwright. It is supposed that the failure of his Balkan war lectures in Canada and this city led to his act. The management of the hotel where he resided had this morning demanded the payment of his bill.

GEORGIA MAY ESTABLISH SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM

Athens, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—A resolution was introduced by Judge Nat E. Harris, of Macon, head of the board of trustees of the Georgia School of Technology, and member of the board of trustees of the university, calling for the establishment at the earliest practical moment of a school of journalism at the university. The matter is in the hands of the proper committee.

It is more than likely that a bureau of alumni activity will be established employing a man for the work of disseminating to the alumni information about the college and keeping track of all the former students. Harrison Jones, of Atlanta, and Tom Connally, of Atlanta, appeared before the trustees urging this bureau and while the committee had not reported it is pretty certain that the new organization will be endorsed and instituted.

GENERAL STRIKE CALLED AND THEN CALLED OFF

Milan, Italy, June 14.—A general strike of the workmen of all trades was proclaimed here today as a protest against the condemnation to prison of eighteen workmen who were arrested for various offenses during the recent strike at the iron works.

The authorities have taken energetic measures for the maintenance of order. Thus far quiet has prevailed. A party of strikers last night cut the gas pipes in one district.

The strike was called off at noon and most of the men returned to work.

Three Men Who Have Made a Wonderful Success

Their Store Has Been Remodeled and Enlarged Twice Since Commencing Business Eight Months Ago

J. L. SATTERWHITE.

MAX NEY.

M. COMMINS.

These gentlemen are responsible for the wonderful success of the Empire Furniture company, at 129 and 131 Whitehall street.

Starting in business just eight months ago, they adopted a policy of small profits to produce quick sales. That policy, backed up to the letter with honest values and depending as it did upon the public and the accounts of 2,500 purchasers. Nor is this list confined to Atlanta purchases. The reputation of this store has spread far beyond the bounds of Atlanta and Fulton county, as is attested by the tremendous out-of-town business done every month.

And even though this concern is yet in its infancy, the increase in trade and necessarily, in its stocks, has necessitated twice remodelling and enlarging its quarters. The store is clean and inviting, and the tremendous display of elegant, highgrade furniture, rugs, draperies, pictures, pleases to visit it, even if you do not buy.

SOCIETY

Summer Visitors.

Battery Park Hotel, Asheville, N. C., June 14.—(Special.)—Quietly as is his custom, Governor Locke Craig, of North Carolina, arrived at the Battery Park hotel Monday, and for the next six weeks will transact only such official duties as are absolutely imperative at his office at this hotel, for the governor is here for a rest. Mrs. Craig came on a day ahead of her husband, and arriving in the early morning hours, decided to remain in her private car until later in the day. The governor motored from Raleigh as far as King's Mountain, and from there came to Asheville by train. He was enthusiastic over the condition of the roads throughout North Carolina for motoring, and during his stay here he will make many short trips by automobile to near-by towns. The governor and Mrs. Craig are accompanied by their two sons.

The arrival of governor and Mrs. Craig was ushered in with a ball at the Battery Park hotel, about sixty young people participating, this being the first large dance of the season, the official opening ball inaugurating the summer gaiety will occur on July 4, when the hotel will be filled with guests. Invitations will be sent out by the management to the society people of Asheville, who always share in the festivities given at this resort during the summer.

The fame of the many attractions to be found in "the Land of the Sky" has spread not only throughout this country, but abroad and consequently many guests from foreign countries come here yearly. A distinguished visitor sojourning here now is Mrs. D. de F. Ward, of England, who was a guest at the Battery Park last summer, and so thoroughly enjoyed her sojourn, that she crossed the water to spend the next few weeks here. She was joined later by Mrs. Frank Scrivener, of Baltimore.

That Mr. and Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt will return this month from their extended European visit is now almost certain and their palatial estate, Biltmore, so long untenanted, will once more be the scene of many delightful festivities while the Country club members are looking forward eagerly to having Mrs. Vanderbilt again a member of the club, for she is one of the most enthusiastic of the golfers.

Thomas W. Raoul has returned from a trip to Atlanta, where he went to attend the marriage of his brother, Loring Raoul. Mr. and Mrs. Raoul will spend their honeymoon in Asheville.

Atlanta guests who have registered recently at the Battery Park hotel include A. A. Alexander, W. H. Rymer, W. S. Jones.

J. L. Moore left last week for a visit to Atlanta.

E. F. Porter left Sunday for a short visit to Atlanta.

Miss Faulconer Entertains.

Miss Minnie Faulconer entertained her club and eight other friends at a card party one afternoon recently.

Top score was made by Miss Helen Woolbright, who was presented an embroidered apron. The consolation was won by Miss Corine Heard, a bouquet pin.

Nasturtiums and sweet peas, and a wealth of daisies decorated the parlor and reception room, and in the dining room the handsomely appointed table had its centerpiece of nasturtiums.

After the game ices were served.

The members of the club were, Misses Ladye Grace Rowlett, Wilhelmena Eichman, Marie Mae Landrum, Donaldson, Corine Heard, Nellie Landrum and Mrs. Callaway.

The other guests were Misses Myrtle McClain, Beatrice Spell, Helen Woolbright, Annie Jett, Ethel Spell, Mabla Acker, Millie LaFontaine and Norma McClain.

Miller-Copeland.

A beautiful wedding and one of widespread interest throughout Georgia and Alabama, was that on June 11, of Miss Maude Miller, of Fort Valley, Ga., and Dr. Henry Moss Copeland, of Atlanta, at the Methodist Episcopal church of Fort Valley. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

At 9 o'clock the wedding party was announced by a double quartet of beautiful voices, singing Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus."

First to enter were eight young girls, bearing in their hands lighted tapers. Following were the four ushers, Messrs. J. C. Greenfield, W. F. Miller, Harris C. Neil and O. F. Jones, who encircled the altar.

The bridesmaids, Misses Beasie Smith, of Atlanta, Carol Dean, of Gainesville, Ga., Telete Scott, of Canton, Ga., and Janie Culpepper, of Fort Valley, were gowned in white meteor crepe, with pointed trains, carrying white sweet peas. The groomsmen were Dr. Richard R. Daly and Mr. F. L. Wilson, of Atlanta, and Mr. William Wright, of Fort Valley.

Mesdames W. F. Miller and H. C. Neil were matrons of honor, the former very beautiful in dress of crepe de chine and duchess lace, while Mrs. Neil was stately in her wedding gown of charmeuse satin and duchess lace, both carrying white sweet peas. Just before the bride, came two dainty little flower girls, Marjorie Brown and Margaret McMillan, scattering rose petals, who entered with her father, Mr. Frank Osborne Miller.

The out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Copeland and Mrs. Clarence Heath Cowart, of Troy, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Greenfield, Mrs. M. C. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Lanier, Judge and Mrs. John R. Wilkirson, all of Atlanta; Mrs. Dave Massee, of Jackson; Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Weir, Mr. and Mrs. Custis Nottingham, and Messrs. Robert Sparks and W. A. Dozier, all of Macon.

Ladies' Auxiliary.

The Ladies' auxiliary of the R. M. A. was delightfully entertained by Mrs. H. A. Sigman at her suburban home in Ormewood.

The living room was bright with daisies and the feature of the afternoon was an animal contest, Mrs. Weaver being th elucky prize winner.

Refreshing punch and a delicious salad course were served, Mrs. Sigman being assisted by her mother and sisters in entertaining her guests.

Piano Recital.

The pupils of Mrs. Clara Boroughs' piano class gave their recital Tuesday evening, June 10, at the Cleveland-Manning music hall. Those in the higher class receiving medals were Miss Marie Smith, Miss Ray Coleman and Miss Ruby Chesnut. Miss Annie Cooper was awarded the medal for theory. Miss Hetta Rowlett and Miss Nellie Shilling each received a medal for their rapid advancement in music.

Robert-McLeod.

Mid-June Sales In All Departments At Allen's

Corset Lectures By Mme. Dean

The Mme. Mariette Corset Company, of Chicago, whom we represent exclusively in Atlanta, sends to us Mme. Dean, with her finished knowledge of Corsets and how they should be worn to advantage, to talk to you about this vital subject.

Almost every woman has worn a corset of some sort since she was grown up. The "sort" she was not very particular about in every instance. The way she wore it gave her little concern. But that was when she was too young to know, or when all of us knew little enough about corset making, corset fitting or corset wearing.

The course of time has developed wonderfully for better health and better figures for women, the making of corsets, and the Mme. Mariette Corset is a result of this expensively acquired knowledge.

The corset you wear will "make or break" your figure. Mme. Dean will tell you the "why and wherefore" of the art. She is not here to simply demonstrate Mme. Mariette Corsets. She is here to instruct in the proper adjustment of the corset to best advantage for your health and your figure's sake. She will tell which model you should wear, which will give you the lines that suit your build, and which is for your physical improvement.

Mme. Dean will be with us all week and will lecture every morning between 10 and 12 o'clock in our corset department on the second floor.

Brassiers and undermuslins pertaining to the perfect fitting of corsets are sold in this department.

Every corset we sell is perfectly fitted.

Women's $5.00 Pumps At $3.50 At ALLEN'S

We have repriced 17 styles of our regular $5.00 pumps in gun metal, patent, tan Russia calf and white buckskin. The season of the year is approaching when we must discontinue a style or reorder it. As it takes us about six weeks to have sizes in shoes like we carry made up, we have decided, instead of reordering our regular $3.50 and $4.00 shoes, to reduce the price of these $5.00 styles. We do carry some shoes at $6.00, that are a little more expensively trimmed or have more ornate buckles, etc., but the shoe making and the quality of the leather in our $5.00 pumps makes them practically the best ready-to-wear shoes obtainable.

To buy them at $3.50 a pair means one of the biggest money saving opportunities that has ever been offered the shoe wearers of Atlanta this early in the season. The sizes are practically intact in most styles, here and there you will not be able to get exactly what you want, but we have a good substitute for it, no doubt. We will also offer eight styles of white canvas and white buckskin $4.00 pumps tomorrow and next week at $2.45 a pair, together with the remaining sizes of gun metal, patent, tan and black satin pumps which were on sale last week at $2.45 a pair.

We should dispose of every pair of them in the next two or three days, so come in early in the week and as early in the morning as you can before the best styles are picked over.

J. P. ALLEN & COMPANY

When the stranger within our gates is lugged about town to be shown the "points of interest" there are always two items that the Atlantan never thinks of omitting.

One is the smooth, easy highways that wind their way off over the rolling green hills of Fulton county and by the palaces and skyscrapers of the city.

The other is Decatur stret, where the negro flourishes as not since the day of his forefathers in far Africa.

The exploiting of the one is born of civic pride; the other the satisfaction of unrolling before the eyes of the uninitiated an eighth wonder of the world.

Bump and Brawl Are Related.

Few stop to consider that there is a very intimate connection between a Decatur street brawl and a bump more or less in the pavement over which the sightseer's automobile takes its luxurious way.

There is, however, a very vital relationship. For the Ephraim Johnsing, erstwhile Decatur stret gunman, is just as surely the embryo Ephraim Johnsing, constructor of public highways, as Judge Br'yles is the nemesis of all the gunman's ilk. Henchmen to the gunman are the "blind tiger" and the "dope" fiend. The same rule applies to the trio.

For the sake of convenience let's combine the trio into one very, very "bad nigger," for such a combination is by no means an infrequent customer of Decatur street.

With nine inches of blue steel on his hip he ambles up and down the great black way, skulking in the shadow of the Washington street viaduct sometimes to make a deal in "white lightning" or "snow," which, know ye, are the trade names on Decatur street for liquor and cocaine, illicitly sold, and again he swaggers in the open. He escapes the police for weeks, for months, maybe, but sooner or later he will be heard from. And incidentally the "sooner or later" usually comes on Saturday night.

In the dives and on the corners where the loiterers congregate our friend Ephraim becomes known as a "bad nigger," and greatly is his pride flattered thereby.

But beneath the "snow" slumber the dreams of a fiend and preserved in the "white lightning" is the nerve to make them real.

Cry of Bell Spells Danger.

So, by and by, one Saturday night the telephone rings in the call officers' booth at police headquarters, and the sharp cry of the bell spells danger.

"Dis heah de police station?" comes through the receiver.

"Yes."

"Mister, dat doggone nigger up yondah in de saloon on de corner done shootin' up de whole place! Yo' better hurry!"

Our friend Ephraim has been heard from!

A pair of officers grab their coats and swing them on as they pass to the courtyard where their motorcycles are waiting. Then, like a brace of wild geese, they rush, honking, upon the street and, twin streaks of light in the night, they are on their way to the "saloon on de corner."

It is usually the call officers upon whom falls the brunt of the task of looking out for the "bad nigger." For the bad "bad nigger" waits until the policemen on the "heat" are out of sight before he starts trouble. Then it remains for someone who thinks his hide is in danger to call the station-house.

No One Saw The Trouble.

In a jiffy the call officers are in the saloon. There are a dozen negroes loitering around, but, passing strange, there is not one of them who saw the trouble! Every one is vastly ignorant of what has happened.

By this time the men on the "beat," attracted by the shooting, have arrived. Questions are asked, but no intelligent answers are forthcoming.

A buck negro stands on the outskirts of the crowd and listens, saying nothing. Watch him!

The officers begin to fell around in the pockets of the negroes for evidence.

This is the cue for exit for the buck negro on the outskirts of the crowd. He reaches for his hat and "beats it" as fast as his feet can carry him. Around the corner he darts, bounding like a deer up the dark side street.

An officer takes shelter behind a lamp post in the wake of our fleeting friend and opens fire. Does the "bad nigger" show fight?

Not just yet. Give him half a block more.

Suddenly he swings on his heel and lets fly the six chambers of his revolver and throws the smoking weapon in the gutter as he continues his flight.

This is what the officer has been waiting for. The negro has disarmed himself, and the officer drops on one knee, levels his six-shooter over the crook of his arm and fires one time. If his aim is good there is a howl of pain and the bad man drops in his tracks.

"Gunman" Now Hors Du Combat.

Oh, no; he is not dead; only winged. The call policeman has hit him in the leg and put an effectual end to his flight.

By the time the officers reach the wounded negro he is not thinking a great deal about his punctured leg, but he greets them with a tale of woe and great injustice.

"Naw, sir, boss, yo' done got de wrong nigger. Dat good-fer-nuthin' nigger what was shootin' at yo' done gone on 'roun' de corner. He sho' did pass me flyin'. Honest ter goodness, I couldn't hardly see dat nigger go by me, he was goin' so fas'!"

It is an old story when the mighty have fallen on Decatur street, though, and in due time "the wrong nigger" is bundled in the patrol and taken to the right place, which is police headquarters.

The desk sergeant takes his name and address, and, incidentally, whatever else he may have except his clothes, registers "D. D." after his name, which, being translated, is "drunk and disorderly," meaning anything from one drink too much of "nigh-beer" to suspicion of triple murder.

If our "bad nigger" is much hurt he is bundled back in the patrol and carried to Grady hospital for treatment, but the chances are that the physician at the police barracks can take care of his wounds. In the latter case he is tucked away in a cell, which, according to eminent authority, is the best place in the world to do "clear thinkin'."

But to make a long story short, he goes before the almighty Judge Br'yles, is bound over to Judge Andy Calhoun's court, where in the natural and legal course of events he gets his thirty or sixty days, and is transferred to Bellwood or one of the other county convict camps.

While he is here if there is anything of the "good nigger" in him it is brought out. He learns what it means to work steady and hard all day long, to keep clean, to get regular sleep and plenty of it, and to eat wholesome food at regular intervals.

By the time he has repaved Peachtree street about three times his term is up, though, and the chances are that he leaves the Fulton county chaingang with a mighty yearning for the fleshpots of Decatur street. Experience to him has been no school at all, and the "thirty days" that at first struck terror to his soul has but proven the paradoxical panacea for his fears, and he is once more back in the old haunts.

And here's where the rub comes.

If—if he could only stay away, his chances for becoming a substantial citizen would be good. But Saturday afternoons and Saturday nights on Decatur street come along and the old hankering awakens in his heart again.

In his ears is a persistent call—the call of the raucous music of the picture show pianos, of the idle twanging of a ragged black's guitar, of the wonder of the black art of the patent medicine man on the corner, the odor of frying fats, beer and the wares of the delicatessen man; the hubbub and brawlish laughter of the jostling crowds, the lure of garish lights and lurking shadows, the "click-click" of dice and ivory balls! And soon also comes most of all the call of the "white lightning" and "snow," and the longing for the old-time, self-confident swagger born of the nine inches of blue steel in the hip pocket!

And when this comes Ephraim Johnsing is once more en route upon the lifetime circle of Decatur street and the chaingang!

A Workingman's Views.

(W. W. Phillips, in Leslie's.)

The agitators of the present day ask nothing better than a revolution in this country. The workman of the present day has the shortest hours, the least objectionable labor and the highest pay of the workman of any age since the birth of history. Does he get enough? That is a question that I unhesitatingly answer no. I am myself a workman and that may make me slightly prejudiced, but I base my opinion on facts. The workingman produces all things of value. When I say workingman, I do not mean simply the man who wears dirty clothes. I mean every man that is a producer.

The highest paid workmen in the world are the men the railroads employ. The railroads employ the largest number of men, too. And then the profits of the railroad companies, in spite of the excellent management of most roads, are as low as, if not lower than, those in any other business. Why condemn the business that employs more men at a larger salary than any other business in the world? It's very peculiar. I do not understand it. I think if anybody in the world ought to present a solid front against the attack on railroads it is the man who gets the most out of it—the workingman.

Now look at the man that is the object of universal pity—the farmer. Everything that he raises has advanced in price more than 200 per cent—nearly everything is more than 200 per cent higher than it was ten or twelve years ago. A railroad company will take a man and pay him say $100 per month for shoveling coal into a firebox. It certainly requires very little intelligence to do that. Now what would the farmer pay the same man for work as hard, longer hours, outer edge of the right jaw until you feel the beating of the artery directly under your finger, the same as the pulse in your wrist; then press the finger hard upon it, thus getting the little fellow in a tight place between your finger and the jawbone. The result will be that not a drop of blood goes into that side of the face while the pressure continues; hence the nose instantly stops bleeding for want of blood to flow, and the ruptured vessels in the nose will probably by that time contract, so that when you let the blood into them they will not bleed. Bleeding from a cut or wound anywhere about the face may be stopped in the same way.

There are two little arteries which supply the whole face with blood, one on each side. These branch off from the main arteries on each side of the windpipe, and, running upward toward the eyes, pass over outside of the jawbone, about two-thirds of the way back from the chin to the angle of the jaw, under the ear. Now, suppose your nose bleeds by the right nostril; with the end of the forefinger feel along the

Dear Cousin Lue—

Large bodies move slowly but sometimes they head the procession. Herr Deutschmeyer was leading it until the ship rolled and his nerve went with his appetite. I never missed a fire, but this one was a false alarm. So is Herr Deutschmeyer.

A hero must never lose his grip but because the sailor gave him the "water cure" Herr Deutschmeyer lost his head and when you lose your head you lose everything, even your hatbox. The sea makes some people sick and to see them makes you tired.

Wishing you the same,

Sammy.

STEEEL TRUST RULED BY MORGAN'S SPIRIT

Bacon Says That Judge Gary Is Following Ideas of Dead Financier.

New York, June 14.—Robert Bacon, a director of the United States Steel corporation, former ambassador to France and former member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., testified today as a witness for the defense in the hearings in the case of the government suit to dissolve the corporation.

Mr. Bacon was a director of the Illinois and Federal Steel companies before they were acquired by the corporation and figured in organization of the parent company. He resigned from its directorate in 1905, he said, and was re-elected in 1912.

The witness described negotiations which led up to formation of the corporation and corroborated the testimony of Judge Gary that the idea of obtaining a monopoly or suppressing competition was not discussed by its organizers.

"Mr. Morgan said that under no consideration would he take part in an organization that would restrain competition or be considered a monopoly," said the witness. "Mr. Morgan believed that if he could take part in the organization of this corporation it would be the greatest and crowning achievement of his business career. He believed that the effect of the corporation would be tremendously beneficial to the industrial fabric of this country.

"Judge Gary, chairman of the corporation, has carried out Mr. Morgan's ideas. He has changed the old methods. He has abolished the old order of warfare and destructive competition and has been responsible for new conditions in other industries as well as in steel.

"I'ive Mr. Morgan who took part in the formation of the United States Steel corporation take part in the formation of the Northern Securities company?" asked Henry E. Colton, of counsel for the government, on cross-examination.

"Yes."

"And you were in the formation as a director?"

"Yes."

"And the Northern Securities company was dissolved?"

"Yes."

Mr. Bacon admitted that the maintenance of pools was "probably" not contrary to the policy of Charles M. Schwab and William N. Corey, former presidents of the corporation, but insisted that the policy of the corporation itself and that of Judge Gary was emphatically against them.

Forest Fires Raging.

Detroit, Mich., June 14.—Forest fires are fast assuming serious proportions in northern Michigan, and unless rain comes soon the flames may prove disastrous. Serious fires already have been reported in Presque Isle, Kalkaska, Iosco and Emmet counties, but no lives have been lost and but few buildings destroyed, the damage having been principally confined to land and timber.

I WAS BADLY BLOATED

I Could Not Get My Shoes on, My Feet and Legs were so Swollen.

Mrs. Jennie Randall, Dropsy is usually caused by organic disease. It may be the heart, or liver, or kidneys. Sometimes the lungs. But there is a form of dropsy that is caused by thin blood. The serum of the blood exudes into the tissues, causing dropsy. It is a very serious condition sometimes, but there is much room for relief, since there is no organic disease behind it. The blood is thin for want of proper assimilation of food. The digestion may be poor. In these cases Peruna is a very excellent remedy.

Read what Mrs. Randall says:

"I have been a sufferer from Bright's disease nearly six years; also chronic catarrh for a much longer time. One doctor said there was no help for me.

"Then I wrote the Peruna Medical Department. My body was badly bloated and my feet were so swollen and sore I could not get my shoes on. Now the swelling is gone and I can wear my shoes with comfort all the time. At the time I first wrote them, when I stepped on my feet it felt as if there were pins entering the instep of them. I suffered excruciating pain and ache in my back and limbs. Since taking Peruna and Manalin I have been greatly benefited, and shall not cease to recommend Peruna whenever I have an opportunity."

Friends Remember Col. and Mrs. F. J. Paxon; Receive Many Handsome Wedding Presents

Colonel and Mrs. F. J. Paxon were the recipients of a number of handsome presents last week at the hands of their many friends. The gifts were in the nature of wedding presents, as it will be remembered that their marriage was a very quiet and private affair, owing to the recent death of the mother of the colonel and the ill health of Mrs. Paxon's mother, who is at a sanitarium in Florida.

Immediately after the marriage, the couple went on a trip north and last week was about the first time that their friends had to let them know in what esteem they were held. It was just like a wedding all over again. Almost every day there was a messenger at the door of their residence on Capitol avenue bearing a gift from some friend or body of friends.

The members of the governor's staff, of which Colonel Paxon has been chief ever since Governor Brown has been in office, sent a handsome silver service. A beautiful and expensive chest of silver was the gift of the officers and directors of the chamber of commerce, who took this occasion to let Colonel Paxon know how greatly they appreciated his services as former president of the chamber and also as a director.

Governor and Mrs. Brown sent a handsome silver plate as a token of their esteem. Colonel and Mrs. Robert J. Lowry remembered the recently married pair with a splendid loving cup.

Colonel and Mrs. Paxon were quite overcome with gratitude for the many fine tokens of remembrance they received from their numerous friends

SUGAR LOBBYIST GAVE $20,000 YEAR

Oxnard Tells of Activity for Beet Industry — Declares Money Was Not Spent Illegally.

Washington, June 14.—Henry T. Oxnard, the millionaire vice president of the American Beet Sugar company, testified today before the senate lobby committee that he estimated he had spent on an average of $20,000 a year in Washington for the last twenty-three years in behalf of the beet sugar industry.

He declared not a cent had been spent illegally. Each year when he was at his home in Washington he declared, he came to the capitol to watch legislation and see his friends among the senators.

Senator Reed demanded that the witness give the name of senators who were his friends.

"Most all the senators," replied Mr. Oxnard.

"You need not include me in that list," declared Senator Reed.

"Well, I call Senator Overman one of my friends, and Senator Cummins there and—I don't know as much about Senator Nelson," said the witness.

Senator Overman promptly asked Mr. Oxnard if he had ever called upon him at his office or house, or if he had ever attended Mr. Oxnard's entertainments.

Mr. Oxnard replied in the negative.

The committee adjourned until Monday without finishing the examination of Mr. Oxnard.

Sugar Trust Spent $750,000.

Mr. Oxnard informed the committee that "Havemeyer or some other person connected with the sugar trust," informed him that the sugar trust spent $750,000 in the Cuban reciprocity fight. Mr. Oxnard suggested some of it may have been spent "in subsidizing newspapers."

Mr. Oxnard declared he had sold most of his stock in beet sugar companies because of fear of free sugar. He and his brother had owned jointly $4,000,000 of beet sugar stock in companies, and now had $1,400,000 invested in cane sugar in Louisiana.

John A. Carroll, of St. Louis, attorney for the Hill system of railroads, was the first witness. His only tariff activity, he said, was the filing of a brief for the Great Northern and Burlington roads, dealing with creosote oil.

"I want to say that the so-called Hill railroads have no one in Washington trying to influence legislation," said he.

Anselm Wold, the senate printing clerk, testified about the orders for printing "Sugar At a Glance," an antifree sugar document prepared by Truman G. Palmer, representing beet sugar interests and circulated free under the franking privilege of Senators Lodge. The committee has developed testimony as to whether Palmer was permitted to change the document after the senate had ordered it printed.

"Monkeying With Orders."

Turning to Senator Overman, Wold referred to a previous conversation about the incident, and added:

"I told you then somebody had been monkeying with orders here, and I still think so."

Wold could not throw much light on the situation, and other senate employees may be called.

When F. R. Hathaway, of the Michigan Beet Sugar company, took the stand hostilities broke out again between Senator Reed and Senator Nelson. Reed insisted on having the witness answer in one way, and the witness persisted in answering another. The Minnesota senator finally quit his place and took a seat with the audience.

Senator Nelson returned to the table after Reed ended his examination and called H. W. Wallace.

Hathaway read several letters that passed between himself and W. H. Wallace and H. W. Wallace, during which they understood the position of President Wilson to be on sugar before the election.

Douglas Wallace knew that on September 20, 1912, he had seen Mr. Wilson and that he had been assured that sugar interests need have no fear.

"You need not be one bit afraid of me, sir," Douglas quoted the president as saying.

Fiction Made Easy.

(From the London Globe.)

"Ernest," said Ann, "know how to write an original racing story for the magazines. Well, Ernest, to begin with, don't make an outsider win a thrilling struggle by a nostril. A handsome young owner watching the race with haggard eyes and a brave smile, which hides the fact that he is ruined, knowing that victory means a large fortune and the beautiful girl, while to lose means a steerage ticket for Canada. Let an odds-on favorite have an easy win and make it the property of a middle-aged American with a numerous and costly family. A digestion that is worth $5,000 a year to his medical adviser, and so much money that he gets brain fag every time he tries to reckon up what he is worth. That isn't romance, Ernest, but we are open to bet you any reasonable amount that it is original in a racing story."

Vice in New York.

(Charlton B. Strayer, in Leslie's.)

To Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., belongs the credit of inspiring a new form of vice crusade, characterized by permanency, scientific accuracy and business efficiency. No mere reform wave this, but the most relentless attack ever made upon the strongholds of commercialized vice. Mr. Rockefeller's interest was awakened in connection with his work while he was acting as foreman of the special grand jury which in 1910 investigated the white slave traffic in New York city. At the close of its labors one of the recommendations of the jury was that a public commission be appointed to study the evil. Those interested, became convinced, however, that a public commission would be short-lived, as had been the case with similar commissions, and that its work would soon be dissipated. Mr. Rockefeller, accordingly, effected two years ago the organization of the bureau of social hygiene, and under the title "Commercialized Prostitution in New York City," the bureau has just issued the first of four volumes giving the results of the studies of its investigations. Mr. Rockefeller has written the introduction to the first volume, and in the closing paragraph expresses the purpose of the whole undertaking. "In conclusion it should be stated," he says, "that the spirit which dominates the work of the bureau is not sensational or hysterical; that it is not a spirit critical of public officials; but that it is essentially a spirit of constructive suggestion and of deep scientific as well as humane interest in a great world problem."

When all the facts are in which these successive volumes will bring to light, the time will then be ripe to decide upon needed legislation, police reorganization and other features of a campaign designed to stamp out commercialized vice. A comprehensive, permanent crusade against prostitution has never yet been evolved. The scientific studies conducted by the bureau of social hygiene give promise, for the first time, of accomplishing this result. No transient reform wave is this, but a fight to the finish.

EXEMPTION OF LABOR STRONGLY OPPOSED

United States Chamber of Commerce Objects to Sundry Civil Bill.

Washington, June 14.—By a heavy majority, the constituent members of the chamber of commerce of the United States, in referendum votes announced tonight, opposed the exemption of labor and agricultural organizations from prosecution under the anti-trust law, as provided in the sundry civil bill, and favored, practically unanimously, the establishment of a permanent tariff commission.

The appropriation in the sundry civil bill for enforcement of the anti-trust law, is made with the prohibition that none of the funds shall be used for the prosecution of labor or agricultural combinations. The bill is about to go to President Wilson for his signature, and the result of the business men's vote on the subject will reach him about the same time that the bill does. The business men contend that an offense against the provisions of the anti-trust law are no less an offense when committed by combinations of labor or agriculture, than when committed by business combinations, and that a prohibition of the use of funds appropriated for prosecuting offenders of the law amounts to a form of absolution from penalty for violating laws that are unrepealed and unamended on the statute books.

The business men, through the organization federated in the chamber, voted with practical unanimity for a permanent tariff commission, which would be bi-partisan in character, nominated by the president and confirmed by the senate with authority to gather information, but without power to make recommendations, except when called for by the body having power to institute tariff legislation.

The referendum had been forty-five days in process of development.

This Invention For Rupture Sent On 60 Days Trial

Won't Cost You A Cent If The Two Months Test Doesn't Prove All Our Claims

Away With Worthless Trusses Like These

You can make a thorough PROVE-IT-TO-YOU test of this GUARANTEED RUPTURE HOLDER without laying out a single cent.

We'll send it to you for SIXTY DAYS TRIAL—practically LEND it to you that long—just to let you see for yourself how it takes all the misery out of being ruptured.

If it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out or bothering you in any way—in spite of any work you do or any other strains—then it won't cost you a penny.

The Only Thing Good Enough To Stand Such A Test

A mere truss—like an elastic stocking—can't possibly prove whether a truss or anything else for rupture is going to do any good.

Neither is just a few days' trial a safe test. A truss may seem almost the first week or so and then prove utterly worthless.

But you can't possibly make a mistake after SIXTY DAYS' TRIAL.

And there is only one thing of any kind for rupture that you can get on such a long trial—only one thing GOOD enough to STAND such a long and thorough test—

That is our wonderful NEW PATENTED RUPTURE HOLDER—the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss.

Made On New Principles

The Cluthe Truss is so radically different from everything else that the United States Government received EIGHTEEN SEPARATE PATENTS. Made on a modern, simple-to-wear principle—no more like a truss.

It has so thoroughly proved its merits in nearly 800,000 cases that surgeons in the U. S. Army and Navy and physicians in all parts of the country recommend it instead of advising operation.

Will Save You From Operation

A rupture can't possibly be relieved—can't even be kept from growing larger—unless protected against all strains and constantly kept from coming out. Just as a broken bone can't "knit" unless constantly held together.

And that is the curse of wearing elastic or spring trusses—not one in twenty ever holds successfully—they sooner or later cause operation absolutely necessary instead of preventing it.

But remember the CLUTHE Truss is GUARANTEED to hold—and won't cost you a cent if it doesn't.—And in ADDITION it PROVIDES THE ONLY WAY EVER DISCOVERED FOR OVERCOMING THE WEAKNESS which is the real CAUSE of rupture.

It does that entirely automatically—without any attention whatever from you. And has brought complete recovery in thousands of cases that seemed almost hopeless, and has saved thousands of people from having to risk their lives under the surgeon's knife.

No Belt. No Leg-Straps. No Springs

The Cluthe Truss does away entirely with the curse of wearing belts, leg-straps and springs. People who have tried it say it is so comfortable as their own skin. And it is waterproof—will hold in the bath. Also perspiration-proof. Easily kept clean.

Get World's Greatest Rupture Book

Don't send any money—don't take any risk. Just write for our free book and find out all about it. This sensational book—cloth-bound, 96 pages, 20 separate articles, and 23 photographic illustrations—is full of facts for the ruptured never before put in print.

It shows why elastic and spring trusses are a crime—how they are the ruptured man's worst enemy—why the law should stop their sale.

It exposes the humbug "appliances," "methods," "systems," "plasters," etc.

It shows why operations for rupture ends in permanent weakness or death oftener than in complete recovery.

And it tells all about the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss—gives names and addresses of many people in all parts of the country who have tested it and have voluntarily endorsed it—tells how you can get it on sixty days' trial, and how little it costs if you keep it.

Simply use the coupon or say in a letter or postal "Send me your book" and that will take it. It costs you and may save you from paying out a good many dollars and save you from years of misery.

CHIEF OF DETECTIVES BEFORE GRAND JURY

many other such letters have attacked the detective and police severely.

Not a Torture Method.

Chief Lanford, in his talk, averred that the public has the wrong conception of the "third degree," and naturally pictured it as a torture method. This is wholly wrong, he declared, and utterly at variance with the explanation which he gave to the grand jury.

"The third degree," he told the jury, is one of the most valuable assets of the detective department, and without it many of a city's most glaring crimes would go forever unsolved. He admitted that in one era of police history the method had been barbarous, but declared that in the present day science and skill had replaced the torture of the past.

In Conley's case Chief Lanford told the jury the negro's confession had been secured through clever detective work in confronting him with damaging discrepancies in his stories of innocence. The method employed with him is a popular one and is a plan which has served successfully with negro criminals.

"It is worked in this manner," the chief said. "Only two men operate the scheme. They study their subject thoroughly by preliminary conversations, learn his traits of character and his weak points. Then they warm up to the real work—clamp down the screws, so to speak.

How Confession Is Secured.

"The first detective begins to taunt and deride the prisoner. He confronts him with all incriminating evidence gathered against him, pictures the form of punishment to which he is liable and vividly illustrates the fate of others in predicaments similar to the prisoner's. The detective's attitude is threatening and belligerent. When the subject is worked up into a state of fear the belligerent examiner leaves the room in an assumed fit of anger.

"The second detective, who has quietly watched his fellow sleuth's operations, during which he has looked on, disinterestedly, takes up the 'degree' where the other left off. He affects an entirely different attitude. He soothes the prisoner, encourages him and offers sympathy. His partner tells the prisoner, in quick of temper and is easily prejudiced.

"The prisoner is warned that the detective who has failed to convict and is prevailed upon to confess in order to save himself from the vengeance of the sleuth who has just left the room. With assumed sympathy, encouragement and advice, the second detective almost invariably captures a confession from the 'third degree' subject."

Different Treatment Needed.

With white prisoners the method is different. They are credulous and prejudiced against detectives and are keen to divine the false attitude of sympathy which wins so easily over the negro. The whites are subjected to an incessant volley of questions for many hours.

These methods are calculated to frazzle the nerves and drive the subject into admission. The duration of the "degree" is generally the most effective phase of the entire examination. Under the severe mental pressure created by the constant necessity of having to meet the bombardment of questions with plausible answers and the accompanying physical strain the guilty prisoner frequently reaches a point of exhaustion which forces confession.

The innocent subject is seldom forced to endure such methods. His innocence is easily divined by his frankness, his corroborative answers and his story. Guilt is quickly detected in even the shrewdest and most experienced of crooks. Even the best of rehearsed stories are often broken down under the strain of constant examination.

Series of Examinations.

As explained by Chief Lanford, the "third degree" is merely the last of a series of examinations. In the first degree the prisoner is allowed to tell his story without cross-examination. He signs a written statement, following which the detectives "run it down," finding whatever discrepancies they may and obtaining corroboration. The second degree is for the purpose of confronting the subject with the fruits in his tale and the evidence unearthed against him. If he fails to confess in this stage of the examination he is forced to remain in solitude and confinement for hours, to meditate over the situation, sum up the probability of conviction and to consider the strain to which he will be subjected in the following degree, of which he has been made vividly aware during the previous examination.

The queries put to him by the grand jury, says the chief, were of a nature meant to ascertain whether or not the police methods were tortuous and whether or not they often resulted in prisoners making false confessions in order to escape suffering. The chief declares he informed the jury that the methods were not barbarous and that it was only the guilty who suffered and that they experienced suffering only through the mental strain which attended the necessity of having to answer volleys of questions with faked answers.

So far as is known the jury has taken no action regarding their investigation of police methods. Lanford expresses belief that they were pleased with his explanation of the "third degree" and that they have learned definitely that it is only a method of science and not torture.

NEW COUNTY MOVEMENT IS OPPOSED IN JACKSON

Farmers' Union Opposed to Giving Up Territory So Winder May Be County Seat.

Jefferson, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Many people of Jackson county, especially the farming class upon whom the burden of high taxes falls heaviest, are up in arms against the movement to create a new county above Winder.

At a regular meeting of the Jackson County Farmers' union, held Saturday, at which a large number of farmers were present, strong resolutions were unanimously passed against having the county being cut at any point. From the farmers this resolution will have great weight, as there are few counties in the state in which the Farmers' union is so strong a factor as in Jackson.

The senator an drepresentatives are urged to make every effort possible to prevent the symmetrical shape of the county being disfigured, and the cutting down of the number of representatives.

Winder is just thirteen miles from the courthouse with two daily trains both ways, and is also on the national highway from New York to Atlanta.

Winder has made two other efforts to secure a county with that place as a county site.

ALLEGED BIGAMIST AGAIN CAUGHT AND TAKEN TO PERRY

Cordele, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—After escaping from the Taylor county jail at Perry, Fla., L. P. Mashburn, who is held on a bigamy charge, it being alleged that he induced Miss Bessie Peterson, of Cordele, to become his second wife, has been recaptured at Clinton, Ala., and returned to Perry.

Mashburn's case is proving a rather puzzling one to the officers at Perry. Though stating that the young boy and girl, who brought about his arrest when he went to Valdosta for them, are the children of himself and the woman who claims that she is wife No. 1, Mashburn declares that he was never married to this woman. However, wife No. 1 avows that they were married by the ordinary of Heard county, Georgia, and that the marriage record was destroyed some years ago when the courthouse in that county was burned.

Miss Peterson, or Mrs. Mashburn No. 2, of this city, declares that she still dearly loves Mashburn, notwithstanding the charge of stealing her. It develops that her father deeded them a lot on which to build a home in Cordele, which she states he promised to do when she consented to become his wife. During his short freedom from jail she received several letters and sums of money from him.

Plumbers Go to Convention.

A delegation of master plumbers, representing the Georgia branch of the association, left Atlanta at noon yesterday over the Seaboard Air Line, to attend the annual meeting of the National Association of Master Plumbers which convenes Monday in Philadelphia. In the delegation are W. S. Oliffis, state president; L. J. Melson, president of Atlanta branch, Ed Ford and others.

Eyes of the Gray and Blue Pointed Toward Gettysburg

By GENERAL A. J. WEST, Commissioner from Georgia.

The attention of the world is again being drawn to Gettysburg.

This beautiful mountain city, nestling in the shadow of the Blue Ridge mountains, whose events in 1863 shook the world, is to be the scene, beginning July 1, of the largest assemblage of men on the American continent since the close of the war.

The gathering of 400 acres on the ground over which Pickett charged, providing room for 60,000 men, there being 10,000 tents, Electric lights and sanitary bubbling drinking fountains and every other convenience will be ready.

One thousand cooks and 1,000 assistants and 800 field cook ranges will be required to prepare the meals. The first meal will be supper Sunday night, June 29, and the last meal breakfast Sunday morning, July 6. The very finest meats, freshest vegetables and the very best bread, coffee, etc., will be served, all being under the inspection of government experts. The exercises will be immensely interesting and all veterans will be entertained free of any cost after reaching Gettysburg. Forty thousand union soldiers have made applications, as have 10,000 confederate soldiers. Virginia will send 1,000, Maryland 490, North Carolina 500, Mississippi 400 and Texas 500.

General Robertson, of Texas, says, in a letter to me, that the confederate and union soldiers will meet at Fort Worth and will go in a body, carrying confederate flags and wearing confederate uniforms.

Five hundred and fifty have registered from Georgia. Seventy-five will go from Atlanta, including Cap. J. W. English, Dr. E. L. Connally, Colonel John W. Lindsey, whose brother was slain in that battle, and Judge George Hillyer, who commanded a company, and ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel, who was desperately wounded in that battle. Camp Walker, headed by Sheriff Mangum, its commander, will carry twenty men in full gray uniform.

Judge Reid, of Eatonton, will head a company from that city and Judge Williams, ordinary of Harris county, will carry a crowd from Hamilton.

On July 2 Governor Tener, of Pennsylvania, will preside. Georgia has been honored by having her governor placed on the program on the day for an address, but as Governor Brown goes out of office on June 26 and Governor Slaton goes in the same day, it will be impossible for him to be at Gettysburg on account of the legislature being in session. Therefore the honor has been confided to me to speak for Georgia.

On July 4 Chief Justice White, a confederate soldier, will preside and President Woodrow Wilson will deliver an address.

Four routes are open to those who wish to go. They are as follows:

By way of Cincinnati, by way of Knoxville and Shenandoah valley, by way of Seaboard and Richmond and by way of the Southern. Round trip railroad rate from Atlanta $18.30.

SLATON GIVES BOOST TO GEORGIA CORN SHOW

Makes First Pre-Inauguration Promise, Turning Over Capitol to December Exhibit.

The first and only official promise that Governor-elect John M. Slaton has made in connection with his approaching administration, was given yesterday, when he agreed to turn over the state capitol during the first week of December to the 1912 Georgia corn show.

"My friends all know that I have been rather chary about making promises prior to the inauguration," said Governor-elect Slaton, "and this is one thing which I unhesitatingly commit myself to. I am in favor of the Georgia corn show as one of the greatest influences now at work in upbuilding the state and helping it achieve its splendid agricultural destinies.

"I am in favor of the corn show because it teaches Georgia farmer boys, and their fathers, too, how to get fully self-sustaining from the part of their land with practically no additional expense.

"I am reliably informed that since 1909 there has been an increased production of corn in Georgia sufficient to give every man, woman and child, of every color, one peck of meal out of every corn crop. This means that the Georgia corn clubs are performing the greatest possible economic work that any person, or association can undertake—teaching people to become self-sustaining.

Influence of Corn Clubs.

"The influence of the corn clubs extend beyond the planting of this one particular crop. It teaches the advantages of intensive farming, which has been the solution of agricultural and economic questions in all countries. The corn club work is a work that goes on quietly from year to year, without sensationalism, but with cumulative effect of tremendous power.

"I am glad to see that the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce corn show committee has already taken up active preparations for the 1913 show, and I understand that keen interest is awakened in all parts of the state.

"The 1912 corn show covered the entire lower floor of the capitol, with 1,800 exhibits, and the second floor was used for the purpose of giving the chamber of commerce dinner to the corn club boys who came to Atlanta for the show. This year, it is estimated from reports already received through State Agent J. Phil Campbell, that the exhibits of the corn clubs and the exhibits of clubs will completely cover both the first and second floors of the capitol, and possibly encroach on the third floor now occupied by the state museum.

FOR FEDERAL DRAINAGE OF OVERFLOWED LANDS

Washington, June 14.—Secretary Lane today submitted a recommendation to congress for a law authorizing the drainage and reclamation by the United States of public swamp and overflowed lands in any state or territory.

While the proposed measure is designed primarily for the reclamation of public lands, it authorizes incidental drainage projects, under specified conditions, of state or privately owned swamp land continuous to the public land or located in the same drainage basin.

Secretary Lane said today that the enactment of the measure into law would be a notable step in the reclamation of public lands and in the establishment of homes and farms upon areas now uninhabitable and worthless."

REV. J. W. LYNCH URGED FOR PRES. OF MERCER

Athens, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Friends here are urging the consideration of Rev. James William Lynch, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church at Athens, for the presidency of Mercer university. He has recently rejected an offer to head a southern female college and last week turned down a call to the Seventh Baptist church in Baltimore. He came to Athens from Wake Forest and has been pastor and teacher in several Kentucky and Carolina college towns. It is not known whether he would allow the consideration of his name or not, but friends are presenting his name to the trustees if he will permit them.

EAGLES OF AUGUSTA WILL GO TO "JACK"

Augusta, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Members of the drill team and a delegation of the Augusta aerie, No. 1197, Fraternal Order of Eagles, numbering about seventy-five persons will leave on a special train Monday night for Jacksonville to attend the annual convention of the Southeastern district of this order, which convenes there Tuesday for a three days' session. The Augusta drill team will compete with teams representing Savannah, Macon, Charlotte, N. C., and Jacksonville.

ECLECTIC PHYSICIANS CONVENE ON MONDAY

Fortieth Annual Meeting of the Georgia Association Will Be Held at Aragon Hotel.

The fortieth annual meeting of the Georgia Eclectic Medical association will be in session June 16 and 17 in the assembly room of the Aragon hotel. This is expected to be the most important, interesting and profitable meeting in the history of the association. In addition to the many instructive papers to be read by many members from all parts of the state, several eminent visitors from other states will participate.

The Georgia Eclectic Medical association is one of the strongest in the union as one of the leading medical institutes of this school of medicine is located in Atlanta. Large classes are graduated yearly and the number increases each year. The state of Georgia is one of the few states where a full and complete separate board of medical examiners is maintained by this school of medicine. Many eminent physicians are members of this association, and it will no doubt be an intellectual treat to physicians to participate in this meeting. In addition to the scientific advantages there will be social feaures and entertainments.

The Georgia Eclectic association is a member of the National Medical Eclectic association, which represents to the eclectic physician what the American Medical association does to allopaths. Many members of the Georgia association are expected to attend the National Eclectic Medical association which convenes in Dallas, Texas, June 19 to 21.

BUILDING OWNERS WILL MEET NEXT IN DULUTH

Atlanta lost to Toledo in the contest for the 1914 convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, by the small margin of six votes.

The following telegram conveying this information has been received from C. F. Wilkinson, president of the Atlanta Association of Building Owners and Managers, who led the fight for Atlanta which was made at the 1913 convention in session last week at Cincinnati:

"Cincinnati, O., June 13, 1913.

"Atlanta loses to Duluth by six votes with assurances of 1915. Greatest convention we have ever had and made remarkable showing.

SOLICITOR DORSEY GOES TO NEW YORK

Grand Jury Will Probably Take Up the Dictagraph Probe While He Is Away.

With the departure of Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey for New York yesterday afternoon, whither he declares he is going for a week's rest, and the announcement of Foreman L. H. Beck, of the grand jury, that only routine criminal business will be taken up at the meeting on Tuesday, comes a peculiar situation, as hitherto the solicitor's presence has been considered necessary for the indictment of the regular class of criminals, and only when investigating on their own accord does the grand jury usually dispense with his services.

The assurance is continuously given out that the grand jury must finish its routin business before it can enter into a general investigation such as a renewal of the vice probe or an investigation of the Felder-Beavers dictagraph row, despite the apparent pressing need for clearing up the tangle that has grown from the affair.

It appears that the members of the grand jury intend to take up at their meeting this week some investigation or other work in which the solicitor will not be needed and the general impression is that the dictagraph row will be probed.

This would be in keeping with the vice probe which both the solicitor and the foreman attempted to veil in secrecy until the very day upon which it was started, and their actions upon this occasion strengthen the belief that further investigation will occupy the grand jurors at their next meeting.

On top of this comes the announcement from an apparently responsible source of the resignation of Colonel Thomas B. Felder that the body probe the dictagraph affair, and the refusal of both the solicitor and the foreman of the jury to discuss this matter, or even to admit having received such a communication.

Solicitor Dorsey gave out officially that his visit would be one of personal recreation and that he might possibly spend a few days at Atlantic City before returning home.

Piano Recital.

The students of Miss Mabel D. McIver's music class entertained their parents and friends at a studio recital on Friday evening.

The program was a pleasing collection of both violin and piano numbers, all of which were creditably rendered by the young performers.

Especially worthy of mention was the work in violin and piano done by Miss Marie Carlton.

The gold medals offered for improvement in music were won by Misses Mabel Price, Annie Garrett, Ruth Smith, Mary Kidd, Lala Hirsch and Master Joe Brenner.

Others taking part were Misses Greta Agricola, Dorothy Saul, Dorothy Lester, Rosalind Witter, Rose Flynn, Lillie Mae Robinson, Sophie Zilling, Evelyn Cone, Mabel Carr, Christie Holmes and Masters Darlton Wilkins and Manuel Saul.

Barnett-Small.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Barnett, of Athens, announce the marriage of their daughter, Lydia, to Mr. Arlie Small, Jr., of Macon, at their home on Milledge avenue, June 13, Rev. E. L. Hill, of the First Presbyterian church, officiating.

Owens-Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Owens have recalled the invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Charles, to Mr. Edw. R. Hall, of Morristown, N. J., which will take place tomorrow night.

On account of illness the original plans for a church wedding have been changed and the ceremony will take place quietly at home in the presence of the family party and a few intimate friends.

The only attendants will be Miss Marion Goldsmith, maid of honor; Mr. Winter Botham, best man; Oswald Owens, and the little nieces and brothers of the bride, Theodore Owens and Anna Harriet Shewmake, John and Donovan Owens. Dr. Hirschfield will be the ministers officiating.

To Miss Francis.

Mrs. J. W. Morrow, Jr., will entertain at bridge Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Sidney Hogerton will entertain at luncheon Tuesday, the 24th.

The same week Mr. and Mrs. William Shroder will entertain and Miss Lula Dean Jones will give a tea at the Driving club.

To Mrs. Ingersoll.

In compliment to Mrs. Royal Ingersoll, of the navy, who is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Van Harlingen, Mrs. Charles E. Donovan, of Birmingham, entertained a few friends delightfully at cards yesterday.

Mrs. Frank Cundell will entertain at bridge Tuesday afternoon and Lieutenant and Mrs. Ingersoll are being entertained with other informal courtesies.

To Miss Buckner.

Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va., the guest of Miss Helen Hill, is a pretty visiting belle at the summer gayeties.

She was the center of a motordrome party yesterday, and a number of informal courtesies are planned for her this week.

Bridal Dinner.

The dinner given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell King was a beautiful affair and a compliment to Miss Martha Francis and Mr. Claude Southall, Miss Anne Lyle and Mr. Marion Harper. The party included their attendants.

The pretty new home of Mr. and Mrs. King on Peachtree road had artistic decoration in feverfew and shasta daisies from the garden, while the elegantly appointed dinner table brought sweet peas into effective use. The table centerpiece was a large basket of pink sweet peas, the handle tied with pink tulle, and at each end were smaller baskets of the same flowers. Little individual pink baskets held the bonbons, and the places were marked by old-fashioned bouquets of pink sweet peas in paper holders, and the candles and ices were pink.

Mrs. King was a beautiful hostess, her gown of shadow lace draped with pink chiffon. Miss Francis wore a charming shadow lace gown draped with blue crepe de chine. The skirt flounces were put on with blue satin ribbon caught with pink rosebuds and the corsage was finished at the neck with little pink and blue roses. Miss Lyle wore blue brocade satin draped with lace, its girdle of pink satin.

Gilder-Johnson.

A wedding of cordial interest to friends in South Carolina and Georgia was that of Miss Elizabeth Gilder, of Newberry, S. C., and Mr. Oliver Johnson, of this city, which took place at the home of the Dr. and Mrs. James K. Gilder, the bride's parents, in Newberry, Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock, in the presence of a large company of friends.

The handsome home was beautifully decorated throughout. Mantels were massed with palms and ferns as a background for sweet peas and lilies of the valley. About the apartment palms and ferns were grouped and bowls of sweet peas and valley lilies were artistically placed.

The ceremony took place on the broad front veranda, which was made into a tropical garden with growing plants and flowers. About the platform, where the bridal party was grouped, palms and ferns and valley lilies were banked, and on either side were tall pedestals draped with smilax and flanking each pedestal was a large basket filled with Easter lilies. Miss Pauline Gilder was her sister's maid of honor, and Mr. Alonzo Johnson, of Atlanta, was his brother's best man. The bridesmaids were Miss Kate Nichols, of Spartanburg, S. C.; Miss Butler Fant and Miss Sarah Housal, of Newberry. Mr. Burton Clarke and Mr. Lewis Grear, of Atlanta. Mr. Paul Gilder and Dr. J. K. Gilder, Jr., of Newberry, were groomsmen. Misses Pauline Fant and Nancy Fox were ribbon-bearers, and little Miss Katherine Fant was flower girl. The bride was given away by her father, and the orchestra played the wedding music. The maid of honor was gowned in white satin brocade and carried an armfull of Easter lilies. The bridesmaids wore white accordion chiffon gowns over white satin and carried baskets of pink roses. Owing to the outing being during the holidays and a cheap rate being in effect during that date, a large gathering is expected. Besides the local orders, those from a distance will be welcomed, and it is the object of those in charge to make a gala day of the occasion. The management at Warm Springs has arranged to take care of a large attendance and exceptionally cheap rates will be allowed for those attending. It is hoped that all the sisters of the order at a distance who can come will arrive at the Springs the night prior to the date set so as to be present at the anticipated banquet.

In due time notice will be sent to each member giving the final date and information as to rates, etc.

MENDING THE TAX SYSTEM.

The men who, for years, have fought a courageous but futile fight for fair taxation in Georgia may take heart. Indications are that their battle is nearer victory at this moment than at any time since its inauguration. State Treasurer Speer in a recent interview with The Constitution declared he saw on the political horizon every sign of approaching revision. Of equal significance is the fact that Representative Slater, of Bryan, and Swift, of Muscogee, announce intention to introduce in the approaching legislature bills providing a tax on inheritances.

Speaking for itself, The Constitution would not be averse both to inheritance taxes and to general tax revision. An inheritance tax might temporarily relieve the state of its annual, and disgraceful, financial embarrassment. But it would still leave untouched the no less disgraceful lack of uniformity in general taxation which, if permitted to proceed uncorrected, would eventually return the treasury to its present dilapidated condition.

This paper is already on record with regard to an inheritance tax. We believe it to be thoroughly just. It works no hardship on the living. It subtracts a fraction from estates only after these estates have lost power to harm or help their makers. It takes from the living only a modicum of the fortune which they never really possessed. It returns to society a very small portion of the fortune that the collective energies of society and the protection afforded by government helped to pile up. We do not favor a very low minimum on inheritance taxes. The man who leaves an extremely small estate should not be penalized.

As to general tax reform, no intelligent and disinterested Georgian will put in a disclaimer. A former legislator, in conversation with The Constitution the other day, illustrated the true state of affairs and of popular sentiment. He was asked what chance revision now had in Georgia. "Excellent," he replied. "When I was in the general assembly a few years ago, I thought sentiment was not sufficiently awake. I asked the representative of one of the counties least liable to be suspected of favoring revision his opinion. He told me he believed his people were ripe for it. They had, he said, grown tired of the spectacle of farms side by side and of equal value standing their share of taxation unequally."

We hope so. For the case of inequally returned farms is only an illustration of the same thing in communities, in individuals in all walks of life and in counties. One man, with a conscience, pays his full share. Another dodges. And the man who pays carries on his back the man who dodges. The county that pays carries on its back the county that dodges; frequently, a county adjoining and equally as rich and populous.

Georgia's finances appear sick and inefficient because of this miserable tax system justly denounced by Judge John Hart as "passing round the hat." The system is responsible for the yearly scandal and farce of college presidents and heads of eleemosynary institutions having to resort to positive mendicancy to obtain appropriations about half large enough for upkeep and expansion. Back of this penalizing of the coming generation, denying to them the opportunities gladly given by poorer southern states, is the wretched and makeshift taxation of Georgia.

The friends of tax reform must be careful not to confuse the issues and jeopardize their fight. That has been done before in the history of this same movement. If they cannot get both a tax on inheritances and general revision at this session, let them temporarily drop the former. General revision is more urgent. We believe if they are everlastingly vigilant and if they guard against a division of their forces, public sentiment in Georgia will fight behind them for victory.

WHILE WE PAUPERIZE OURS.

In the north and east they are in the midst of the season of endowments. In other words, in these sections commencement at colleges is synonymous of the announcement of the tremendous endowments and other financial acquisitions obtained or promised during the scholastic year now closing. Princeton is a case in point. President Hibben has just announced that Mrs. Russell Sage had given $100,000 toward a new dining hall and that during the year about $600,000 had been received for endowments and about $212,000 for current expenses.

We have a commencement season in Georgia, but the conferring of degrees is about all it develops in common with the commencements north, east and west. Georgia's college heads, and the heads of the southern colleges generally, for that matter, are rarely able to announce with a glow of pride that endowments have taken a big upward bound, or that the contribution to current expenses is large and gratifying. Instead, they admit dolefully to their intimates that they don't know how they are going to provide next year for the inevitable growth of their institution and the enlarged demands upon it.

The Constitution has several times recently cited the University of Georgia and the Georgia School of Technology as illustrating victims of the pauperizing system of education. The university is compelled to waste money and imperil life by an antiquated heating system, because the legislature has during several sessions refused to make the meager appropriation for a central heating plant. Tech is compelled to decline handsome gifts from enthusiastic friends, because the legislature says Georgia is "too poor" to meet such donors half way. Georgia and the Tech are simply typical of the other educational and eleemosynary institutions of this state. Each one suffers from financial cramp. The head of each has to become a mendicant every year before the legislature and then go home with a fraction of what was asked for legitimate expenses. "Too poor" is the explanation.

We're not "too poor." Where we really are "too poor" is in the fact that we can't afford, if we were only awake, to stint the institutions that are equipping the Georgians of tomorrow. Counting in the potential value of the state road—though that property is not, of course, for sale—and reckoning the vast agricultural, commercial and industrial wealth of the state, Georgia is among the richest commonwealths of America. It is cheating tomorrow, it is thwarting destiny, when with the hypocritical cry of poverty it robs youth of its educational opportunity. And tomorrow is going to exact a merciless accounting.

The legislature and sluggish popular sentiment are not the only parties culpable. Our men of wealth are likewise at fault! Our institutions cannot, of course, aspire to the huge endowments of the eastern universities. But there are enough private fortunes in Georgia and other southern states to proportionately put our colleges and universities beyond the annual need of beggary. Many rich men have already given generously. But southern wealth generally—and we say it candidly—needs in this vital respect a wholesale baptism of patriotism and intuition.

PROTECTING OUR CREDIT.

The unaccounted for bankruptcy of the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad will not have been without its compensation if the pending probe by the interstate commerce commission shall make repetition of such affairs difficult or impossible. The senate has passed the Kenyon resolution empowering the interstate commission to proceed with a thorough investigation. Fortunately, that body is ideally equipped from standpoint of knowledge and incorruptibility to conduct an inquiry of the propert sort.

The credit of the United States both at home and abroad is among its most precious possessions. And that credit seems to rest under a cloud by reason of the 'Frisco affair. A road that can go into bankruptcy less than two months after its promoters, with fair words, sold $3,000,000 worth of its securities to confiding foreigners, requires investigation. The method whereby a receivership was secured needs also to experience the light of day. It appears now that the court granted the prayers of the petitioners by the use of that piratical device, the ex parte hearing. A property worth hundreds of millions, and representing the investment of thousands of people, was thrust into the courts without one word of hearing from either domestic or foreign security holders.

We are not too far from the nightmare era of railroad wrecking to forget its lessons. Georgia and the south has a vivid memory of the penalties of that day, and have no desire to return to or countenance a revival of it. It is not as yet known whether there was a conspiracy to wreck the 'Frisco. But the circumstances are sufficiently suspicious to demand the revelation of the truth.

The railroads and corporations generally should be among the first to clamor for an unsparing investigation. They are finding it increasingly difficult to borrow money. When they do succeed they pay an exorbitant price. How can they expect easier borrowing conditions, or how can they expect to borrow at all, if American financial integrity rests under the cloud now visible in this unfortunate case?

THE OLD BODYGUARD.

What pen can adequately tell of the loyalty and service of the old negro bodyguard of the confederacy? His tribe and a noble one it is, was vividly recalled by a recent story in The Constitution. Therein was set forth a petion from twenty-eight of these old negro suttlers and bodyguards. They had served throughout the war with their masters. They had lived a law-abiding and useful career since the curtain rang down at Appomattox. And now, pressed upon by misfortune, they asked aid of the white people of Georgia.

Georgia and other southern states should care for these faithful old darkies. They are the flower of a regime as strange and as dramatic as any that lines American history. And when the historian of the negro race shall finally come to his task with vision cleared and passions purified by time he will appraise these gallant old negroes as of the stuff from which the traditional hero is made.

The negro bodyguard had all to lose and nothing to gain by the victory of the seceding states. If his master triumphed it meant indefinite bondage for the slave and his descendants. If his master were defeated it meant emancipation and a new free life. Yet it is to be doubted if any of the body servants of that era weighed these considerations seriously. By the thousands they accompanied their owners to the front. As the petition states, they were frequently as near death as the master. It was their province to forage for him, to tend his personal wants, to insure his comfort as far as exigencies permitted. Frequently the bodyguard helped perform the office of burial. Frequently upon him fell the melancholy duty of returning to the old home with the news of the death of father, husband or brother. He never wavered in his devotion. When the expiring months of the war brought upon the confederate troops privations beggaring description the negro bodyguard cheerfully shared the lot of his master, often sacrificing his own appetite that the master might be strengthened for the combat. With the close of the war the old bodyguards, and the faithful class they represented, were one of the main influences in the redemption of the south; give them credit for that. They formed the backbone of the labor supply, the few negroes not too independent or too drunken with newgained freedom to aid in the titanic task of reconquering the devastated acres.

It is over this type of negro, the bodyguard and those who with him exemplified the virtues of gratitude and loyalty among the negroes, that the south of today expends many sighs. For their kind is passing, and in their place come others whose ignorance of the virtues of the old bodyguard portends the south's greatest problem.

ATLANTA IN THE CRUCIBLE.

With the assistance of three experts connected with the Russell Sage Foundation, the city of Atlanta is taking stock. These specialists are Shelby M. Harrison, director of the department of social survey and exhibits; Zenas L. Potter and Franz Schneider, Jr. They are here upon the initiative of the social survey committee of the chamber of commerce and their work is of a part with the campaign, now several years old, for acquainting Atlanta with the things she needs to perfect her status as an up-to-date city.

Mr. Potter instructively defined the purpose of a municipal social survey as follows:

> If a business man who doesn't take his stock in asort sighted, isn't a city equally so which doesn't follow suit? Many cities the country over are asking themselves that question, and they are answering it by undertaking a social survey. Along with the many advantages of industrial and commercial progress and population increase certain evils creep in. What are they? How can we eliminate them and keep the good? It is to answer these questions that a social survey is undertaken. A social survey is a stock-taking of active life; its work, its play, its crime, its courts, its health, its housing, its industry and its community efficiency.

The final report of these experts will show Atlanta to herself as she appears to the eyes of unbiased and keen-eyed outsiders. They will see all our disadvantages as well as our advantages. They will prescribe remedies and suggest ways in which progress may be hastened and efficient government stabilized. If memory serves us correctly Atlanta is the first city in the south to recognize the importance of a social survey and to subject herself to the process. It is really equivalent to putting the city in a crucible for purposes of cold-blooded and detached analysis. When we see the completed picture we must be prepared not to flinch at whatever things of an unflattering nature it may indicate.

The classic social survey of the twentieth century is that of Pittsburg, conducted also by the Russell Sage Foundation. Revelations then made not only astounded the country, but also aroused Pittsburg to teeming defects all around her, and eventually to a new and broad municipal outlook.

It is, of course, impossible that the specialists should uncover in Atlanta conditions even remotely approximating those at Pittsburg. But they will show us plenty of defects in need of correction, defects that are now hidden save to the expert eye and the presence of which militate against municipal progress and well-being.

In every bout the lobbyists take the count, but rise for another round.

Politicians in the log rolling business are not of the tall timber variety.

And for her dear sake
Love, self-denying,

For Love the lowly sod;
Rose-wreaths for her forehead,
For Love the chastening rod;
The darkness be his portion—
Hers be the light of God.

The Hodgenville Herald says that while the grand jury was investigating a crap-shooting game one of the jurors asked a negro witness:

"Now, Sam, tell us just how you deal craps?"

The negro's mouth opened and his eyes rolled. The juror repeated the question:

"Tell us just how you deal craps."

The boy scrambled down from his stool and, making for the door, said to the foreman:

"Lem'me outen heah, boss; fust thing you know dat white man gwine ask me how you drink a ham sandwich!"

The hurry, the worry of life will be gone
As soon as they settle the tariff.

Shattered to pieces in country and town;
Senators—congressmen—hand 'em a crown
Soon as they settle the tariff!

Satan at Campmeeting.

I.

Parson was a-preachin' 'bout the place where sinners go—
Where they ride in fiery chariots an' there's not a chance for snow;
The sinners, all a-trembilin', saw the fire on the blaze,
An' the saints above a-feastin' on the milk
an' honey days.

II.

'Twas at the old campmeetin' in the sizzlin'
summertime,
When the roses are afire an' the melon's

When the corn blades are a-wiltin' an'
we're thinkin', one an all,
Of the jingle in our pockets from the cotton in the fall.

III.

"Red hot, an' still a-heatin'," was the line
the parson took,
Flashin' all the fire he could get at in the book;
When suddenly a blizzard—like lightnin'
on the run,
Made saints an' sinners shiver an' blotted out the sun!

IV.

Says the sinners to the parson: "You're sure laid in the shade
Better warm yer hands now at the fire that you made!"
But quick the parson answered: "No time for you to smile;
"Satan coaxed the blizzard to cool him off a while!"

JUST FLIES!

A Bulletin Issued by the Georgia State Board of Health.

You have probably heard the story of the "barker" at the circus side-show, who said, "Ladies and gentlemen, we have inside of this tent an African zebra. The zebra is an interesting animal from the fact that he has ninety-nine stripes upon his back and no two of them are alike." Well, flies differ from the stripes on a zebra's back in a great many respects. In the first place there are only about twelve varieties of flies, and all these different kinds are just alike; that is, in the respect that they all carry disease. Of course, some of these twelve varieties of flies carry more disease than others for the reason that there are more flies belonging to that variety. For instance, the kind known to the scientists as musca domestica, and commonly called the house fly by ordinary individuals, and by various other names of the bald-headed man, comprises about 98 per cent of the flies found in garbage cans, dining rooms, stables, kitchens, closets and so on. The remaining 2 per cent is made up of blue-bottle flies, sometimes called blow-flies or meat-flies, the cluster fly and so on. But we all know there is nothing in a name—a fly by any other name would carry disease just the same. So we won't name them—we will just let the bald-headed man do that, and we can spend our time studying some of their habits.

The fly is a busy thing. As he is one of death's advance agents he keeps on the move. He is so busy, in fact, that he don't care where he gets his meals. He had just as soon have cake as meat, and he had just as soon have some nauseating and unspeakable kind of filth and refuse as to have the cake and meat—and there is just where the trouble lies. The fly, or flies, as the case may be, will light on refuse that may have been expelled from the body of some sick person, and maybe in just a few minutes after, unless you keep him from it, he will light right on your jam or rice pudding or on the baby's bottle and wipe his dirty feet right off on it, and leave the disease germs he brought from the filth. Unfortunately, you can't see these germs on your food and you will go ahead and eat it, germs, filth and all, and so you are made sick, have to quit your occupation, have to pay a lot of bills when you get well or your family will have them to pay if you don't get well, and so the sad story goes.

Hens Vs. Flies.

For a hen to lay two hundred eggs during the course of three hundred and sixty-five days is considered pretty good, but for a fly to lay one hundred eggs during the course of one day is nothing extra. In fact, it is stated by the United States government expert that a fly lays on the average of one hundred and twenty eggs at a time, and that each female fly lays four such batches. This expert also states that these eggs hatch out into maggots and become full grown flies in ten days labore. He sold the property and pocketed the commission. This was a low down trick, Mrs. Jamesworthy, contrary to all business ethics, and to the peace and dignity of the state.

"An ordinary man would have called upon Skirving with a typewritten list of blistering adjectives, and applied them to him. But I am not an ordinary man. When vengeance is called for I watch and wait until the crucial hour arrives, and then get in my work. I continued to greet Skirving with sunny smiles. I bought five cent cigars for him ever and anon. But all the time I was looking ahead to the day of retribution.

"For three long years I waited before that day came. Then I read in the paper that Skirving's daughter, Beryl Ysobel, was going to take a leading part in the graduation exercises at the opera house. She was going to recite 'Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight.' Skirving had the idea that Beryl was the queen bee of all elocutionists.

"The fateful night came. Skirving and all his relatives were in a private box overlooking the stage, their faces wreathed with smiles of happiness. They were sure Beryl would score a great triumph. I had a seat well up in front and I sat there waiting for Beryl to do her stunt. Presently she appeared on the stage in snowy raiment, and I turned loose a ghastly, sardonic smile that would have frozen the blood of a crocodile. She saw that smile the first thing. She couldn't help it. It was meant for her. She seemed fascinated. She couldn't take her eyes off that corpse-like grin. She tore her eyes away for a minute and began reciting, but she had to look back again, and that livid smile finished her. She gave a shriek and rushed from the stage. When I looked at Skirving, all wilted up in his private box, I felt that I had been repaid for all the anguish I had endured."

ON "GOINGUPAGAINST IT"

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

"Going up against it" is the United States way of describing a head-on collision between man and misfortune.

"It" in this case means trouble in all of its hideous varieties. When a man goes up against "It" he meets trouble in a narrow road, with no room in which to side step and he has a very good chance to examine trouble's shining fangs and to look down its red and hungry throat about three miles.

There are as many kinds of "It" as there are of trouble. In Alfred the Great's case "It" consisted of a hostile army, which was hunting him with an obituary already prepared, while he had nothing left with which to fight it but a battered harp. George Washington was up against "It" at Valley Forge, and "It" consisted of several thousand appetites in the patriot army with the nearest lunch counter in possession of Cyrus Field. Field was up against "It" when his third Trans-Atlantic cable failed and the investors invited him to go chase himself when he tried to finance the fourth one.

Everyone goes up against it in one way or other at some time in his life. For some this means ruin, while to others it is merely a pastime. When some men go up against it they crumble up like an egg-shell, like Charles the First, who fought a short war and abandoned himself to the headsman, with a sigh of relief. When other men go up against it they merely continue on through. The careers of Lincoln, Washington, Caesar, Thomas A. Edison and U. S. Grant were marked by the ruins of "its" which they went up against. When a man has nerve, energy, determination and a will that is made of Vanadium steel, it is a very foolish thing for trouble to get in his road with the hope of stopping him.

Now and then a sound of lamentation and despair can be heard curdling up the busy atmosphere. This is generally produced by some man who thinks he is going up against it. But he isn't. He is generally backing away from it.

ORDER.

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Constitution.)

The great business of this world is the creating of Order. We are all at it to some extent. And it is upon the proportion of our efforts toward the total Order of the Universe that we are judged as big or little men and women.

The business of each man and woman is to eliminate Dis-order from the earth.

The smallest effort that you put forth today is sure to cut down just that much the total existing Dis-order. For every act you perform has its effect on Society as a whole. You may think that your small work in the great day counts for little or nothing, but in the summing up it may mean growth affecting countless numbers.

All great men and women have been earnest workers for Order. Their very life Results blaze the fact forth.

One of the great keys to the Character of people is the place where they work. The Desk in Order, the Office neat and with a place for every article, the home "spick and span," tasteful Clothes—these are revelations into secrets that tell bigger truths than tons of letters of recommendation and testimonials.

Carlyle says that every man is born an enemy to Dis-order. It is a great thing to live up to our Capabilities. Order is one of the most important of them. You have Today in-which to make it real.

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON,
The Famous Prose Poet

GETTING EVEN.

"You look as though you had a corroding grief concealed about your person," said Jamesworthy.

"I feel hurt and offended," replied Mrs. Jamesworthy. "Mrs. Terwilliger is going to have a lawn party tomorrow evening, and has invited all the women in the neighborhood except me. I don't know why she should treat me that way. But I'll get even with her. I'll give a party that will make her's look like a pauper funeral, and she will be the only woman in this end of town who won't be invited."

"Don't do anything so foolish. Have some diplomacy about you. If you follow that that program you give yourself away the worst kind, and advertise to the whole neighborhood that you are sore. Just ignore the Terwilliger party, Mrs. Jamesworthy. Let on that you don't keep cases on the trifling amusements of the proletariat. Learn to labor and to wait. Everything comes to the lady or gentleman who waits. Make up your mind that you will get even with Mrs. Terwilliger some day and then just wait for your opportunity. It will come as sure as the assessor.

"Don't let Mrs. Terwilliger think for a moment that you care three whoops because you were not invited. Treat her with more cordiality than you ever showed her, and lull her suspicions to rest, and then when the day of retribution comes she will hit the ground all the harder.

"In the clanging mart I often meet men who do me dirty tricks. I pass it off with a smile at the time, but I do not forgive or forget. I treasure up all slights and injuries in my memory, and the day comes when I get even. I'm never in a hurry. I wait and watch. He also serves who only stands and waits, Mrs. Jamesworthy.

"One day Skirving, the real estate man, took a fall out of me. I had a piece of property for sale and had been on the trail of a customer for weary days and weeks. I had that customer almost worked up to the buying point, and was figuring on a fat commission that would make my account in the trust company look less like a hole in the ground. Skirving saw what was doing and he went to the owner of the property, with nods and becks and wreathed smiles, and induced him to take it out of my hands and turn it over to him for sale. Then Skirving went to my customer and took advantage of my arduous labors. He sold the property and pocketed the commission. This was a low down trick, Mrs. Jamesworthy, contrary to all business ethics, and to the peace and dignity of the state.

"An ordinary man would have called upon Skirving with a typewritten list of blistering adjectives, and applied them to him. But I am not an ordinary man. When vengeance is called for I watch and wait until the crucial hour arrives, and then get in my work. I continued to greet Skirving with sunny smiles. Deputy Insurance Commissioner Goes With Southern States Life

No insurance event of many months is of such widespread interest as the announcement made taday tha tH. W. Laird, deputy insurance commissioner of Alabama, has been secured by the Southern States Life Insurance company, and after July 1 will make Atlanta his home. Mr. Laird has been appointed to the position of assistant to the president, and in his new connection in Atlanta will be closely identified with the executive work of Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Southern States Life.

Mr. Laird is well known in the south for his journalistic as well as insurance work, and his coming to Atlanta, accompanied by his charming wife, will be a distinct acquisition from a social standpoint. Many friends in this section have already expressed delight at the news of their coming.

Speaking of the resignation of Mr. Laird, Hon Cyrus B. Brown, secretary of state and insurance commissioner of Alabama, said:

"In the retirement of Mr. Hervey W. Laird from the position of deputy insurance commissioner, which is announced today, my office loses a valuable man and the state a conscientious official.

"Since coming into the service Mr. Laird has had almost exclusive control of the insurance department, my connection being confined to advisory relations, in the main. He has shown good judgment, established as a policy of the department one of construction and service to the companies as well as careful safeguarding of the public interests, and at all times kept in mind the importance of realizing the maximum in the matter of the law's demands. As a result the revenues have largely increased each year and the understanding that no company will be allowed to overlook any attention to which the state is entitled.

"I release Mr. Laird to the service of the Southern States Life with the conviction that he is going with a strong and growing company, and thereby bettering himself in a material way. Our relations with the officers of this organization have been such as to give us a very high regard for the integrity, ability and courtesy of each one of them.

"Mr. Laird will finally sever his connection with the department on June 30. In the meantime he will assist me in closing up the many details of his desk and instructing his successor in the duties that will be imposed upon him."

H. W. LAIRD.
Newly appointed agent of the Southern States Life.

BURWELL HAS ENGAGED HEADQUARTERS HERE

Representative William H. Burwell, of Hancock county, candidate for speaker of the house, will be in Atlanta early this week and expects to open headquarters at the Kimball house about June 21.

As R. N. Hardeman, of Jefferson, has already engaged his headquarters at the Kimball, and will also be here next week, there may be some life injected into the speakership race yet. The only candidate for the place who is still to be heard from is J. E. Shepard, of Sumter.

Unless the political forecasters are badly wrong in their dope the speakership race will not be anything like so close as the contest for the presidency of the state. The general opinion seems to be that Burwell will be elected speaker on the first ballot.

L. O. TURNER HONORED BY THE ORDER OF OWLS

The distinction of the second degree of the Order of Owls has been conferred upon L. O. Turner, chairman of the board of trustees of the Owls, and L. G. Raoul, secretary of the order in Atlanta.

The membership of the second degree is limited to 150. Messrs. Turner and Raoul were voted this degree for their faithful work in the order and have gone to South Bend, Ind., where the degree was conferred Saturday night.

PRIZES ARE AWARDED NATIONAL GUARD SHOTS

The shooting tournament of the Georgia national guard, which was in progress during the latter part of last week at the range at Fort McPherson, closed Saturday with the awarding of the team trophies.

The winners were as follows:

First team of the Fifth regiment, winner of the Anderson trophy; first team of the Second regiment, winner of the Candler trophy; the team of the Third battalion infantry, winner of the Paxon trophy.

In August another tournament will be held to pick a team of fifteen men from the Georgia national guard to go to the big national and international shoot at Camp Perry, Ohio, during the latter part of August and the first part of September.

S. H. PHELAN'S FUNERAL WILL BE HELD TODAY

The funeral of S. H. Phelan, Sr., formerly a prominent citizen of Atlanta, who died Friday at his Crawford county plantation, will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at St. Luke's church. The interment will be at West View cemetery.

The following friends of Mr. Phelan have been selected as pallbearers: Henry H. Cabaniss, Dr. Joseph Jacobs, John E. Murphy, George W. Parrott, Donald M. Bain, Frank S. Ellis, Frank E. Callaway and Martin Amorous.

Something New

The Well-known table beverage, POSTUM now comes in

New Form

Called

Instant Postum

A delicious drink—absolutely free from the coffee drug, caffeine.

A level teaspoonful of Instant Postum in an ordinary cup of hot water dissolves instantly and makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular (must be boiled)

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water.

SENATOR HOKE SMITH AND POSTAL PLACES

His Attitude Unknown at Present—Story of Conference Denied by Senator.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, June 14.—(Special.)—It is impossible to forecast at this time what the attitude of Senator Hoke Smith in regard to postoffice appointments will be.

Senator Bacon has cut the Gordian Knot by saying he will defer to the wishes of the congressmen absolutely, unless their nominee is one who has exceeded the bounds of legitimate opposition.

I have been unable to confirm the information given me by an Atlantan who came up for the Ad Men's convention in Baltimore, to the effect that a number of Senator Hoke Smith's friends had journeyed to Washington to counsel with him in regard to patronage. The report was that James R. Gray, Jack Cohen, Reuben R. Arnold, of Atlanta, and Howard Thompson, of Gainesville, had come up on Sunday, gone to Senator Smith's house for an all-day conference and left that night.

Senator Smith says he wasn't present at any such interview that Mr. Thompson did not call on him until after the story was printed and that Reuben R. Arnold has not been to Washington this session. Mr. Gray and Mr. Cohen have both been here, he said, but not at the same time, so far as he can recollect.

It is expected that something will develop within a few days in regard to the postmastership at Dublin, and the position of collector of internal revenue at Atlanta.

NEW ENGLAND LAUDED BY SECRETARY DANIELS

Boston, June 14.—New England's love of country, finding expression not only in patriotic deeds but in epics making the deeds part of the nation's written history, was held up as a model to the rest of America in a flag day address here today by Secretary Daniels, of the navy department.

"Paul Revere saw the light in the old South Church yonder," said the secretary, "and sprang into the saddle for his famous ride, and Longfellow has not allowed the world to forget it. Children, not only New England children, but children of the south and west, recite the poem at school and New England has enjoyed a prestige such as no other section of the country has had. There were scores and hundreds of Paul Reveres in the south and in the west equally as brave. Marion and Sumter, daring as Israel Putnam, and Kings Mountain was as glorious as Concord, but you had your Tmerson to sing the Concord hymn.

"I once found myself wondering why God had, through the whole history of the world, saved up the most beautiful of all the flags for our own nation.

"There is no doubt, viewed from the standpoint of art alone, that the stars and stripes is the most exquisite ensign that ever fluttered in a breeze. The answer is not far to seek. Beyond the western waters was raised up this giant republic with its kindly message of liberty to all the world for all time. To it was committed this priceless pearl, and it was but fitting that the national emblem should reflect and forever somethin gof the value of the gift itself."

EIGHTH WARD CITIZENS OPPOSE CAR EXTENSION

The citizens of the eighth ward have called an indignation meeting Monday night in the Tenth ward school building, protesting against the proposition to extend the Piedmont avenue car line down Piedmont avenue to Decatur street and thence into the business district.

Their protest is on the ground that through practically all of Piedmont avenue over which the proposed line would run the cars would have to pass through a negro section, which would prove distasteful to the north side white people who have to use the line.

They do not object, they say, to a new route which would lead either down Forrest avenue or Pine street and down Courtland to town, but maintain that they will not patronize a line which goes further down Piedmont avenue than Forrest avenue.

TUNING-FORK USED AT WASHING OF FEET

Anderson, Ind., June 14.—More than 2,500 adherents of the Church of God from all sections of the country participated today in the annual foot washing ceremony at the National camp meeting, which is being held near here. This ceremony was followed by the administration of the sacrament.

Women members of the Church of God sect are not permitted to follow the fashions and must not wear gay colored ribbons or plumage, and the men wear no neck ties. As a salutation, men kiss each other.

The only musical instrument allowed in the service is a tuning-fork.

Rickert Resigns.

St. Louis, June 14.—It was reported today that Lloyd Rickert, secretary of the St. Louis American league baseball club, has resigned and would sever his connection with the club tomorrow. President Hedges said he was not ready to make a statement. Coupled with the report Rickert's resignation was the report that he would receive four months' salary as a bonus for retiring.

High Prices for Pictures.

Paris, June 14.—Some high prices were fetched at the sale of Eugene Fischhoff's collection of pictures today, the total realized being $326,260. The most important purchases were Albert Cuyp's "Departure for the Hunt," which went for $29,000; Nattier's "Portrait of a Young Woman," $19,400, and John Russell's pastel portrait of Miss Emily Devisme, $16,000.

Fire Guts Car Barn.

Charlotte, N. C., June 14.—Fire of an unknown origin gutted the car barn of the Charlotte Electric railway company here this afternoon, also burning the machine shop in the rear and four street cars. The loss is estimated at $50,000 fully covered by insurance. As a result of the fire street car service was interrupted for the space of three hours.

Georgia Suffragists to Have Department in Constitution

MRS. MARY L. MLENDON,
Editor of Woman's Suffrage Department of The Constitution.

The Constitution takes pleasure in making official announcement that hereafter there will be a department in the Sunday issue of this paper devoted to the interests of the woman's suffrage question, this department to serve as well the Georgia division of the national organization as a medium for exploiting their official news.

Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia division of the Equal Suffrage association, will have charge of the department, she being one of the pioneer workers in the south in the interest of equal suffrage movement. She knows the history of the movement in the United States, as few other women do, and has attended many of the national organization meetings. She represents one of the oldest and most prominent families of the old south, and knows intuitively the traditions of the south pertaining to political and social questions and the relation thereto of women. She has made a study of the evolution of the woman of the new south, and is therefore equipped to see both sides of the suffrage question as it presents itseuf today.

No question of the moment is of more vital interest to men and women than that of equal suffrage, and the movement is being organized in every state, led by women, thoughtful and efficient. The Constitution has at all times recognized and promoted the principle of organized women, and given space for the exploitation of their activities, and it is the purpose of the publication to continue this policy and to present fairly and justly the subject of woman suffrage.

The department devoted to equal suffrage will be independent, and in no way related to any other department of the paper devoted to any phase of woman's interests.

The following official announcement is made by Mrs. McLendon:

Official Announcement.

As president of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association auxiliary to the national American Woman's Suffrage association I have the pleasure of announcing to the women of Georgia, that through the department of our own in the Sunday edition of The Atlanta Constitution, we can hereafter look for the exploitation of the official news of our organization interests, national, state and local.

The courtesy of the space has been extended to us by the editor of The Constitution, with the assurance that our work will have fair and just exploitation.

At the forthcoming state convention of the Georgia workers, to be held July 9 and 10, announcement will be made in full of the proposed work of this, our medium of official publicity.

MARY L. MLENDON,
President of the Georgia Division National Equal Suffrage association.

OTHER COURT OFFICERS UNDER FEDERAL PROBE

Clerk's and Marshal's Office Investigated as Well as Judge Emory Speer.

Washington, June 14.—In connection with reports that an agent of the department of justice was investigating the official conduct of United States District Judge Emory Speer, of Macon, Ga., Attorney General McReynolds today said that an examiner had been sent to Macon to report on the operations of the entire court, including the clerks and marshal's office.

He said that a new clerk recently had been appointed at Macon and it was usual for the department of justice periodically to examine the court offices.

No charges, he said, had been preferred against Judge Speer.

GEORGIA MAY ABOLISH "SOPH" DECLAMATIONS

Athens, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Probably the last "declamation" contest ever to be held at the University of Georgia by students of the university was held this evening at 8:30 o'clock in the chapel when the following sophomores spoke "pieces" written by the masters of oratory and public speaking and statesmanship:

Charles Wells Jacobson, of Tennille; Albon Williams Reed, of Athens; George Peter Donaldson, of Statesboro; James Morgan Ray, of Commerce; James Raiford Wood, of Savannah; Clark Howell, Jr., of Atlanta; Julian West Walker, of Sereven; Terrie Nichols Hendricks, of Nashville; Stephens Mitchell, of Atlanta, and Walter Thomas Jenkins, of Valdosta.

Hereafter, it is probable, only original orations will be heard by Georgia students. Dean Snalling, at the suggestion of Professor Brock, in charge of the public speaking department, has recommended to the trustees that the annual "soph declamation" be abolished. This is a contest which it is believed the "university" finds out of place—though good for prep schools and academies. It is traditional in age, however, and many distinguished men in the nation received their first oral experience in speaking by contesting for the sophomore cup, the delivery of which on the afternoon of alumni day is also an annual feature at commencement.

WARM WELCOME GIVEN TO THE SUFFRAGETTES

Budapest Is Glad to Entertain Advocates of Equal Suffrage.

Budapest, June 14.—Budapest's hearty public and private welcome of the women's suffrage congress affords a marked contrast to the almost hostile attitude displayed by Vienna. The Austrian government and the municipal authorities have declined all recognition to the suffragettes, while the Hungarians are showing every hospitality. The municipality of Budapest has voted $2,000 for the entertainment of the delegates; the minister of education and burgomaster of Budapest have formally welcomed the congress; the municipality will give a reception in honor of the delegates Monday evening, and prominent citizens have arranged a variety of entertainments.

In Austria the official bodies have absolutely refused to render the congress assistance of any kind, the local supporters of the congress when soliciting official aid being told bluntly that the only action the city was likely to take would be o place a double police force on duty.

It is thought that the outrages by the militants in England is responsible for this attitude. The Viennese women's societies have experienced great difficulty in raising the necessary funds, and are thankful to obtain the smallest sums, even as low as 4 cents.

REEVES COMPANY LANDS BIG MARBLE CONTRACT

The Reeves Marble company, of which Alex Reeves is president, which had the contract for the marble work in the Atlanta postoffice, has landed what is probably one of the largest marble contracts ever let in this country.

This is the $250,000 contract for the marble construction work in the Railway Exchange building in St. Louis. This will be a 20-story building, and will have 34½ acres of floor space. It will cost $15,000,000. The Reeves Marble company is supplying all Italian marble for this monster building. Nearly all the company's work in St. Louis is being done with Atlanta labor, exported from here for that work.

The Reeves company is also doing the marble work for a 30-story building now in the course of construction in St. Louis. On thirteen other jobs they are also using Atlanta labor.

TRUTH-SEEKERS WILL MEET THIS AFTERNOON

The Truth-Seekers society of Atlanta will pursue their investigations at the Beavers' club this afternoon, when "Sociology" will bear the brunt of their scrutiny.

Colonel Eb T. Williams, W. M. Hairston and others will lead the way. President Joseph T. Dabney will deliver his inaugural address.

Every "truth-seeker" in Atlanta, be he a man, or be she a woman, is urged to be present and participate in the search. Music will aid the seekers.

POWER SITE IS WON BY THE GOVERNMENT

Seattle, Wash., June 14.—Patents to six mineral claims on the Nooksack river held by the Whatcom County Railway and Light company, were declared void today by Judge Edward E. Cushman, in the United States district court, and the land, which includes 300 feet of waterfall, reverts to the United States government. The water power is estimated to be worth several million dollars. The government contended that the sole object in the filing upon the claims was to take the power site, and that no mineral deposits ever existed in them.

HEIRESS OF BALDWIN ASKING FOR DIVORCE

Los Angeles June 14.—Anita Baldwin McClaughry, daughter and one of the principal heirs of the late "Lucky" Baldwin, filed suit today in the supreme court for a divorce from Hull McClaughry. The allegations were held secret but are supposed to be founded partly at least upon the recent alleged kidnapping of the McClaughry children by their father.

Eighty Peachtree

Mays Badgett, Born in the Year 1877, Knoxville, Tenn., Is Known as Atlanta's Stradivarius, and Is a Genius of Untold Ability

MAYS BADGETT

Things seemingly impossible for skill and human ingenuity become as simple as childish plays under the master hands of this genius.

Those who have never visited this genius' studio, 34½ Peachtree street, have missed the opportunity of their lives. Here this master maker of string instruments reigns in all his glory, and does marvelous things in wood.

Several days ago a certain person had an accident to his violin as shown by the cuts herewith printed, and he carried the broken pieces to Mays Badgett to ascertain whether this genius could do anything with the pieces.

After five hard days' work on these pieces there came forth the beautiful instrument again, better and sweeter toned than ever.

Mays, as he is called by his friends, and they are counted by hundreds, is one of the most amiable of boys, jolly, sweet tempered and quite a favorite with the gentler and fairer sex, and it is an even bet to ascertain in what line he is a better genius, making fiddles or making love.

He has been honored by musicians all over the country, and has sold instruments to several of the Grand Opera Stars for their own personal use.

Atlanta is to be congratulated on having this artist in her boundaries, for he is in his last analysis the synonym of perfection, musically, personally and socially.

STABBING OF WEBBER SHROUDED IN MYSTERY

Wounded Rosenthal Witness Tried to Hide His Identity.

New York, June 14.—"Bridgie" Webber, one of the four gamblers who testified against Police Lieutenant Becker and the gunmen convicted of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, another gambler, was stabbed in the shoulder early this morning under circumstances which he seemed loathe to explain.

He was in the St. Vincents hospital today suffering some pain and weak from the loss of blood, but his wound will have no serious result unless blood poisoning sets in. Although branded by some of his former associates in the underworld as a "speaker" in the Rosenthal case, the little "informer" closed up tight when detectives tried to pry from him at the hospital this morning the story of the attack upon him.

At first Webber tried to hide even his own identity and the fact that he had been wounded.

The stabbing occurred on East Eighth street. Webber tried to walk away on the arm of a friend, hiding the wound, but on Broadway, in front of Grace church, he sank, exhausted and admitted to a policeman that he had been stabbed. His identity was discovered by Detective Harvey, who worked on the Rosenthal case. Webber at first did not account for the stabbing at all. Then he said a small boy ran out of a house behind him and plunged a pen knife into his shoulder.

Further questioning indicated that the "boy" story was not to be taken seriously. Webber finally declared:

"I don't know who stabbed me and I don't want to know."

Detectives learned that Webber had kept a midnight engagement with Sam Paul, another gambler who talked of "croaking" Rosenthal. He lately has kept a small restaurant near Eighth street. It appeared that Webber had been attacked shortly after concluding his engagement with Paul.

It will be eleven months next Monday since the murder of Herman Rosenthal occurred. Although Webber was arrested in the round-up of gamblers that followed and was charged with implication in the murder, he never was tried. With "Bald" Jack Rose and others he turned state's evidence and helped to send former Police Lieutenant Becker and the four gunmen to Sing Sing, where they are under death sentence. If the attack upon Webber is an act of revenge for his part in the Becker-Rosenthal case, it is the first instance of any attack on the witnesses.

The police up to an early hour today had made no arrest in connection with the stabbing.

Fitzgerald School Census.

Fitzgerald, Ga., June 14.—(Special.) The school census recently completed shows a remarkable gain in the school population of the city. The 955 white and 542 colored of school age shows an increase of 26 per cent for the whites and 16 per cent for the colored. Of illiterates among the whites over 16 years of age there is only 2.10 per cent and of the colored 3-2.10 per cent. Out of 956 white children only 82 appear not to have been attending school.

ROME DOG CATCHER JAILED ON CHARGE OF POISONING PETS

Rome, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—J. B. Dunn, connected with the police department as "dog catcher," was arrested yesterday afternoon on a warrant sworn out by J. Crampton Watters, a merchant, charging that Dunn poisoned his pet bull terrier. The dog was one of the twenty-five fine canines owned by prominent men of Rome, which were found dead yesterday morning, as the result of the second wholesale dog-poisoning of the week.

Watters claims that he will produce evidence to show that the officer was the person poisoning the pet dogs of the city and that other members of the department purchased strychnine from the local drug stores. A lively row has resulted and many prosecuting and personal reprisals have been threatened if the poisoner is discovered. The department denies any knowledge of connection with the recent epidemic among canines.

Mr. Funderburk is a Roman by birth and is very popular with labor and other classes of people of the city. He has taken a leadership in the Central association and is well qualified to give an intelligent and progressive administration of the duties of the office to which he was elected by an overwhelming national vote.

Business Women of Atlanta Urge the Importance Of a Large Centrally Located Y. W. C. A. Building

Greatest Need of the City Today, According to Atlanta's Busy Army of Workers.

I have a vision. I see a substantial, handsome building standing not far from Five Points. It has to be close to the business center in order to be effectual. This building has carved over its door in magic words—The Young Woman's Christian Association. The doors are flung wide open and sweet-faced, earnest young women are coming and going. They are meeting in their respective club rooms, planning their work for the benefit of the association. In other parts of the building there are classes in Bible study, sewing, cooking, etc. There is an enthusiastic basketball game in progress in the well equipped gymnasium and down in the swimming pool a class is having a lesson in the art of swimming. A pleasant clatter of dishes is heard in the dining room, and so from all parts of the building there is a hum of activity. This vision will be realized if men and women become enthused with the idea that it must be a reality and not a dream. Chattanooga has just recently dedicated their Y. W. C. A. building and surely Atlanta will not be far behind. We are proud of the club buildings we have for the men and boys, but we are putting in a plea for the girls and young women. Do you think more of yourselves and your boys than you do of your girls? I can't think that this is true. The Y. W. C. A. text is "Not by mighty nor by power, but by My spirit, saith the Lord," and by this spirit we will realize our dreams some day.

CORA L. JESSOP,
President of the Clover Club.

By Isma Dooly.

There is one element of women in Atlanta whom we do not hear so much about, who seldom appear in the press, but who are nevertheless the truest, most thrilling and the most pervading element in this—the most thrilling moment of woman's history. They put in an appearance in a place and they are almost omni-present. I go still farther and say that Atlanta's every phase of work—professional, commercial, industrial and social, is dependent upon these women. If one and all organized and resolved that on one certain day of the year they would every one walk out of the place they were in and take a holiday, on that day and at that moment every activity in the town would cease, for this element so all important are Atlanta's business women.

These are the ones who verily keep the office as surely as they keep the home. They keep the most important departments of the department stores; they are in the banks; keeping office there, they are in the city hall keeping the work there going; they are in the doctor's office, in the dentist's office, in the office of all public utilities. They are in the industrial institutions from the first place next to the president through every department of the most complicated machinery making, whether the factory ware is. The more one thinks of these business women the more one realizes they have their useful hands on the very throttle of the engine making for the city's progress and prosperity.

They are faithful, loyal, cheerful, ever alert to protect the interests of their employer, but when the day's work is done, and sometimes carried into the night, lies it occur to many people that this all useful and powerful element are very little considered—that their being the helpmates in the busy, active world of to-day is forgotten, though through their fidelity to duty, their efficient work and their daily grind the most important making of the world is being done?

What We Owe Them.

What is being done for these women? The question pushes itself with reproachful force. What is being done to make their time-serving the easier, and give them that life for which the world, young and old, poor and rich, is reaching out?

They are busy—too busy to stop and define in their own minds just what they want; their employers are ready and willing to co-operate with them in anything they want, and the right-spirited municipality is ready to act as a giver at large for the good and pleasure of these women, who represent this factorship in the city, but how can they do it and through what medium?

At the suggestion of a group of Atlanta's progressive men and women the question, "What do you want?" was put to a number of Atlanta's business women, with the suggestion that they think sinkly and individually and then express themselves.

With no exception the call they made was for a systematized center and the department work of the Young Woman's Christian association.

Three Requirements.

"There are the three things the business woman needs most and that is the comfortable home, the good and cheap fare, and the place to meet under desirable, agreeable auspices, such as the well conducted quarters of the Young Woman's Christian association offer," said one of the first women queried. She had had ten years' experience as business woman, and found that the association ought to be made to answer in the life of the woman, what the communal club and social rendezvous meant to the business man.

"The average business woman has no home she can call her own else she would not be a business woman," was the significant statement she made.

Therefore, after business hours she thinks of comfort and rest, a good meal under pleasant circumstances, and finally some form of mental stimulation or recreation.

These three elements which should enter into every woman's life as well as every man's, can be met in the boarding home of the Young Woman's Christian association; in the cafe decently maintained, and finally in the various lines of educational work."

This interview was followed by many others, and it was clearly indicated that the business women of Atlanta, though they may not have organized as a body and asked for it, are depending upon Atlanta's charitable spirit to get back of them and be represented in the Young Woman's Christian association, and push it on.

They are ready to get back of it and be a main support, but they are going to demand for what they put into it—the best element of business women—a respectable and comfortable and well located building as a center, a comfortable boarding home, food well prepared and served, and all the departments which the association work affords in other cities.

Their Candid Expression.

"The Young Woman's Christian association has meant a great deal to me in my career as a business woman," said Miss Mary Phelps. "And I am ready to do anything I can to help the movement."

"I regard the cafe as a great help to women workers. True there are plenty of cheap restaurants in Atlanta it seems to me that very few people eat at home these days, but a lunch room conveniently located for the business woman and the shopper alike—clean, light, airy, with stands reminiscent of the sort that 'mother used to cook,' should fill a long-felt want."

"Then, there are the clubs and the gymnasium. I have spent many pleasant evening with the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Von Herrmann has explained the mysteries of the weather, we have had lectures on art, on current events, on literature. An hour's work in the gymnasium has restored the color to pale cheeks and elasticity to jaded muscles. For those who would be graceful there are the folk-dances and drills, for the athletic, a hard-fought game of basketball."

"In the spring the club fancy seems to turn drama-ward and we have had great fun in selecting a play, in rehearsing, costuming and 'putting it on.'

"We have had many delightful parties, both in the rooms of the Y. W. C. A., and at the homes of different members of the club."

Meets Many Needs.

"The Young Woman's Christian association wherever established on a permanent basis, meets many needs of the business woman," was the expression of Miss Ellen Douglas.

"It meets the every-day need and that of Sunday.

"Unlike the busy minister, the Y. W. C. A. secretary is in her office morning, noon and night with a ready ear to listen to any girl's or woman's woes or joys, and to lend a hand where needed. She is easy of access all of the time. Then there are the rest and reading rooms where one feels perfectly at home.

"When one is going to a city alone and knows a Y. W. C. A. is in that city she has no fear. I have known of young women traveling from one point to the other all alone but provided with the Y. W. C. A. by some recommendation of the association meeting her at every stop of any length of time, would never be the city she would select upon a Young Woman's Christian association building."

The Stranger's Viewpoint.

It is true there are many places to eat, where numerous counters and small tables abound. Here one may get a cup of coffee, but it would take at least half the average girl earns to pay for a reasonable lunch each day at such of the lunch counters that are advertised to the gaze of the public, and the general confusion. At the Y. W. C. A. this is not the case," said Miss Rosa Brazeau.

"Also the dining room furnishes a place for girls who happen to travel alone. When they come to a strange city, they are always glad of the opportunity that they seek the Y. W. C. A.

"The gymnasium is also a great feature in the association. Here one gets not only the exercise which is so much needed by the girl who works, but the right comradeship."

The Cheerful Atmosphere.

"I have been a member of the Y. W. C. A. of Atlanta for a number of years, and find it a much needed place for the business woman," said Miss Flora Haas.

"Take the young woman who comes to the city as a stranger. The rooms of the Y. W. C. A., the secretary and her assistant were ever ready to welcome her and aid her in securing a position. If later she became a member of the association the rooms were open to her, and it was her privilege to enjoy the books, magazines and papers in the reading room, and to rest in the rest room. There always was a bevy of girls in the rooms ready to cheer up those who came in tired from their day's work, or to make the stranger feel at home.

"Without the rooms of the Y. W. C. A. where is the girl or woman from the country to turn to when she wishes to take her lunch and rest from her shopping trip in the downtown district?"

Physical Exercise.

"Women who work down town, especially those whose positions force them to be confined in a stuffy office all day, need physical exercise. The gymnasium of the Y. W. C. A. fills the want.

"There are several social clubs formed by the young business women of the association, conducted in a business-like manner, and opportunity is given its members to do their share of constructive work.

"Opportunity is also given to young women to learn to sew, embroider, trim their hats, or make their dresses at very nominal cost.

"With a building such as the association should, and I am sure, some day will have, much more could and will be done toward the welfare of the young women of Atlanta."

A Crying Need.

"The Y. W. C. A. has meant a renewal of interest in my entire surroundings," said Miss Elsa Stahl.

"Picture a young woman working from 8 in the morning until 5:30 in the afternoon, on a steady grind, indoors all day, and by stopping time you have a pretty wornout person in place of the one who started the day bright and active. Then take her to the Y. W. C. A., let her have a light lunch for supper, then a social club gathering with literary features, and then an hour of gymnastic exercises. After this you find her made over from your tired out friend of 5:30 p. m., and one ready for a refreshing sleep. This is how I feel after an evening spent at the Y. W. C. A.

"This institution should have for its home in Atlanta a building of its own.

Besides the practical benefits of the association, Miss Kate Sutherlin stressed the social advantages when she said:

"Our weekly club meetings have been the means of bringing together some of the most intelligent and cultured young women of the city. We find that the club organization not only means greater pleasure for us, but enables us to carry more help to others.

"Though our old quarters were not attractive, we spent so many pleasant hours there that we will not complain; instead we will look forward to the fine new building which we feel sure Atlanta is going to give us.

"The new building will prove a rallying place for all Christian women for through this organization they can best make and compare plans.

"Light House" to Business Women.

"To the business women of the world, the Young Women's Christian association has proved the veritable light-house of our lives," said Miss Lena Oetter in an enthusiastic expression relative to the work of the Young Women's Christian association.

"Returning from a visit not long ago, I did not know that the association rooms had been moved from their former quarters to the Wesley Memorial building, so I returned to the Emery-Peyser building and was told that the association had moved.

"Take me to the old rooms, anyway' I asked the elevator man. I found it the desolate room. Miss Helen Slade, who had stayed to tell those like myself what had happened.

"I learned with regret that it had become necessary to close the association until fall, and that, therefore, there would be no dining room, rest room or reading room; that the club would have no place to meet; that the S. I. S. P. club would not give its annual play, by which it raises funds for the deficits in the southern conference, held at Asheville, N. C.; that —well, won't take time to tell all the important things that 'wouldn't be.

"I was only comforted in the absence of the old atmosphere by the realization that we are going to move into a new building before the fall, for I believe with our board of managers, the business women of Atlanta and Atlanta's good citizens are all pulling together, Atlanta will have one of the best centers of the Young Women's Christian association, now a world-wide movement."

WEST POINT PROUD OF ITS PURE WATER

West Point, Ga., June 14.—(Special.) The city of West Point is proud of the fact that she furnishes as pure water to her citizens as any city in the south. The filtered water is pure and clear and the unlimited supply and its remarkable purity is attracting attention throughout the state. The source of the supply is the Osceilla-gee creek, which rises in Alabama and flows into the Chattahoochee river. The filtered water has been found far superior in quality to that of the average well water.

Father (who has taken daughter to the play)—I'm sorry I brought you now, Mabel. This is hardly a play for the young person.

Daughter—Oh, I don't mind it, dad! I'll probably liven up a bit before the end!

CANDLER COUNTY WILL RALLY MANY FRIENDS

Majority of People in Three Counties Favor Movement, Assert Supporters.

Atlanta hotel lobbies are already beginning to take on new life in anticipation of the meeting of the legislature on June 25, and no little of this is the outgrowth of the various movements on foot for the establishment of new counties.

The Candler county movement was the first in the field, and its members are exhibiting unusual determination to win, if success be possible.

They assert that more than a majority of the people of Bulloch, Emanuel and Tattnall counties are in favor of the establishment of Candler county with Metter as the county seat, because there are now about the largest counties in the state.

This bit of territory which Candler proposes to take lies in two congressional districts, two judicial circuits and three senatorial districts. Metter, in the western section of Bulloch county, is so close to the line of the other two counties that to all intents and purposes it is now a three-county town. The two banks in Metter lend money in three counties. The merchants of Metter sell goods in three counties. Many of the citizens of Metter, owning property in the territory proposed to be made into Candler county, pay taxes in three counties. It takes a 12,000 people in this area thousands of dollars every year to attend court in three county seats, an expense and difficulty which would be eliminated by the creation of Candler county.

The famous Fisk Jubilee Singers, better than ever, have been secured again this year. Professor J. W. Work, of Nashville, who will have charge of the two choruses, is already here and has begun the work of rehearsing, which takes place in the First Congregational church, colored, Monday, Tuesday and Friday nights.

The first night of the festival will be devoted to the pageant play of the progress of the race, "Up to Freedom," which proved so popular last year. Ten original scenes made expressly for this play will be shown, illustrating the progress of the race from the shores of Africa to the present. The second night will be given over to a grand concert, in which all the stars of the festival will take part. There will possibly be a matinee concert in the afternoon of the 4th of July composed entirely of negro melodies.

The proceeds of the entertainment go entirely for the support of the institutional work done by the First Congregational church. Rev. H. H. Proctor, pastor, which among other things operates a home for colored working girls, where all the facilities of a modern home are provided for 15 cents a day.

JOY AND HAPPINESS IN ANOTHER HOME

Mr. J. R. Echols, Better Known as "Bob," Resides at No. 8 Tennessee Avenue With His Mother, Mrs. W. D. Gentry, the Grandmother of the 14-Year-Old Son, Curtis Echols, Been Sickly and Puny for Years, Expelled a 42-Foot Tape Worm After Taking Quaker Extract.

It must be elating to the people of Atlanta to watch the wonderful good that has been accomplished through the use of Quaker Extract, and of Quaker Oil of Balm. Every day there is some report of the great work that's being done by Quaker Extract.

This time it is the report of Bob Echols, interesting little fellow, whose monster tape worm and belief brought back to a good, healthy condition after the suffering the child has gone through for the past three years. His stomach would bloat, fluttering of the heart, shortness of breath, terrible pain in back of head, sometimes in lower bowels, nasty, slimy taste in mouth, especially in the morning, always eating enough for a man, but his food never seemed to do him any good. He continued to grow weaker day by day; had no ambition to play like other boys of his age; the parents were very much alarmed about his condition. He had had several attacks of fevers, also bilious spells, but with all the treatments he continued to grow worse. The grandmother had been reading and hearing about the Quaker Remedies on sale at Coursey & Munn's drug store and the great number of people and children who had been cured, some of long standing cases of rheumatism, catarrh, kidney, liver, stomach or bladder trouble, and hundreds of children that they have expelled worms, and all from the use of the wonderful Quaker Extract and Oil of Balm. She decided to call and procure a treatment of Quaker Extract and commenced giving it to the boy, and to the joy of all, after five days the child is well and hearty, and Quaker did it. Now, Mr. Bob Echols, as he is known by his friends, is a well-known engineer of this city, and many of his friends will be pleased to learn the good news.

If any person doubts the genuineness of this case, investigate and find if Mrs. Health Teacher did sold the truth, as he insists on the severest investigation, but only in this case, but any name or address he gives you in the daily papers. So call today at Coursey & Munn's drug store, 29 Marietta street, and obtain these wonderful Quaker Extract, 3 for $2.50, or 6 for $4.00, 9 for $5.00, 12 for $6.00, 25 cents, or 5 for $1.00. We prepay all express charges on all orders of $3.00 or over.

BAR ASSOCIATION READY WITH BILL

Synopsis of Measure to Replace Local Justices of the Peace With New Municipal Court.

An amendment to the constitution of Georgia was adopted last year giving the state legislature the power to abolish justice courts in certain cities and establish in lieu thereof such courts, or system of courts, as the general assembly might deem necessary.

Immediately after the ratification of this amendment, the president of the Atlanta bar association appointed a committee of twelve to draft a bill to provide for the establishment of a municipal court in the city of Atlanta. This committee was composed of Walter McElreath, chairman; Judge Arthur G. Powell, Judge Spencer R. Atkinson, L. C. Hopkins, Edgar Watkins, Van Astor Batchelor, Arthur Heyman, Shephard Bryan, Lee M. Jordan, Armistead Wright, Jesse M. Wood and W. A. Fuller.

Investigated Other Cities.

The secretary of the committee, W. A. Fuller, spent considerable time in collecting data relating to municipal courts in other cities. Copies of the bills creating such courts in Chicago, New York, Buffalo, Boston, Cleveland, San Francisco and other cities, were obtained and carefully studied.

After working several months in the preparation of the bill, the committee has completed its labors and the initial draft of the bill is in the hands of the printer. It will be published in pamphlet form and sent to the members of the Atlanta bar and the local judges. A meeting of the Atlanta bar association will then be called and formal report of the bill made and action taken upon it by the association. The association may adopt it as reported, or may amend it in any manner deemed proper.

After the association acts upon it, the representatives from Fulton county will be requested to introduce the bill in approaching session of the legislature, and urge its passage. The bill as drawn provides for the establishment of the court beginning January 1, 1914.

A synopsis of the bill abolishing justice courts in Atlanta, and creating the municipal court of Atlanta, follows:

Jurisdiction.

This court is given jurisdiction concurrent with the superior courts of this state, with the following exceptions:

(1) Those cases over which exclusive jurisdiction is vested in other courts by the constitution of the state of Georgia.

(2) Those cases involving more than $500.

(3) Injuries to persons and reputation.

(4) Criminal cases other than matters now heard and determined by justices of the peace or justice courts.

Judges.

Provision is made for a chief judge and four associate judges. Any attorney-at-law who is a qualified elector and resident of the city of Atlanta, and who has practiced law continuously for three or more years, will be eligible to hold office as judge of this court. Each judge is to be paid a salary and is not to be allowed to receive any fees or perquisites of office. The salary of the chief judge is fixed at $3,600 per annum, and the salary of each of the associate judges at $3,000 per annum. The judges are to be nominated by a majority of the judges of the superior court of Fulton county and appointed by the governor. The chief judge and two of the associate judges, to be designated in the order of appointment, shall serve for four years. The two remaining associate judges shall serve for two years. Thereafter their successors shall serve for four years. Provision is made for the suspension and removal from office by order of the superior court of any judge for incompetency, inefficiency, neglect of duty, or misconduct in or out of office, which in the opinion of such judge of the superior court tends to lower the dignity of such official or render him unfit to fill such office. An order of suspension may be passed ex parte, but an order of removal only after proper hearing.

Clerks and Marshals.

There will be a chief clerk and one deputy clerk, whose salaries will be $2,000 and $1,500, respectively. The chief clerk will be appointed by the judges of the court, and the deputy by the chief clerk. There will be a marshal and four deputy marshals. The salary of the marshal will be $1,800 per annum, and the salary of each deputy $1,500. The marshal and deputies will be appointed by the judges of the court. The duties of these officials are set forth in detail in the bill, and are substantially the same as those of the corresponding officers of the superior courts, with such other duties as may be prescribed under the rules of court.

Rules of Court.

The bill authorizes the judges to prepare and promulgate such rules of procedure and practice not inconsistent with the laws of this state as may be necessary to expedite and facilitate the business of the court.

Pleading and Practice.

All actions in said court shall be commenced by summons as now provided for in justice courts. There will be no fixed court day, but court will meet every Monday and enter judgment or assign for trial all cases filed and served not later than eight days previously. A defendant can defend by merely entering an appearance, except where suit is based on sworn accounts or unconditional contracts in writing, in which cases the answer must be filed under oath. Pleadings need be filed, but every defense in point of law or fact, whether for misjoinder, non-joinder or insufficiency of fact, may constitute a valid cause of action which might ordinarily be made by demurrer or plea, shall be made by motion to dismiss or in the answer, and such motion or answer may be made on the trial orally, or may be made in writing if the defendant has entered an appearance previously. Amendments in form or substance are to be allowed. The judge at every stage of the proceeding must disregard any error or defect in the proceeding which does not effect the substantial rights of parties. The judges are directed in making the rules of court to arrange to expedite the trial of cases and to eliminate expense.

Service of Process, Etc.

All service upon defendants shall be personal, if possible. If not, by leaving copy with defendant or more than 18 years of age domiciled at the residence of defendant, the return of service to show the method.

Trials.

Trials may be had upon demand for the same by either plaintiff or defendant before a jury of five. Jurors are to be impaneled as in the superior courts. If a plaintiff desires a jury trial he shall demand same when he files his suit; otherwise he is considered to have waived his right to a trial by jury. The defendant in any case may demand a trial by jury when he enters his appearance, or files his defense; otherwise he will be considered to have waived his right to a trial by jury.

Appellate Division.

Provision is made for an appellate division of said court for the hearing of matters of law arising in civil causes therein, with power of granting or refusing new trials in cases brought to the appellate division. The appellate division will consist of three of the judges of the court, one of whom shall be the chief judge, except where the chief judge presided on the trial of the case appealed. Appeal from the judgment of the appellate division on matters of law is allowed by writ of error to the court of appeals.

New Trials.

New trials may be granted upon the same grounds upon which the same are now granted in the superior courts and according to the same method of procedure, except that provision is made for simplifying and facilitating said procedure as applied to this court.

Transfer of Cases.

Provision is made for the transfer to the municipal court of Atlanta and trial therein of any case pending in the superior court of Fulton county, or in the city court of Atlanta, on January 1, 1914, or thereafter brought in said courts, in which the subject matter and amount involved are within the jurisdiction of the municipal court of Atlanta.

Cost Deposit.

Each party filing a suit or proceeding of any character in this court is required to deposit with the clerk the sum of $2 as costs of suit; provided that such deposit shall not be required of any person who shall make an affidavit that he is unable to make such deposit; and provided, further, that if the party making such deposit prevails in the case such deposit shall be collected with the other costs from the losing party and returned to the party depositing same.

Note by the committee: Some of the reasons given for requiring this cost deposit are as follows: (1) Similar deposits are required in practically all of the municipal courts recently established in different large cities, in the United States courts, in the court of appeals and the supreme court. (2) The making of such a deposit will be the basis of a fund for the maintenance of the court, which is an added expense to the county government, it being expected that the court will be practically self-sustaining. (3) Requiring this cost deposit will tend to discourage the filing of frivolous suits. It will also meet a ground of objection now urged to the present justice courts that batches of cases are filed in some courts on the tacit understanding that no costs will be collected unless the same can be gotten from the defendants.

Sales.

All sales are to be made before the courthouse door after proper advertisement, and proper records of such sales kept. At the present time there is no way of tracing property sold in justice courts and the bailiffs are particular not to lend their assistance in tracing such property.

Place of Holding Court.

All suits will be filed in the clerk's office in the courthouse of Fulton county. The chief judge will assign the cases for trial from time to time to the different divisions presided over by the associate judges. All of the divisions will hold court in the courthouse. In having only one office for the filing of cases and in having all trials conducted in the courthouse it is believed that the convenience of the bar and public will be greatly subserved.

The futility of a political meeting lies in the fact that only those who have been converted attend the services.

Dr. Percy Starnes to Conduct Music Festival Chorus Today

DR. PERCY J. STARNES.

Dr. Percy J. Starnes, who has directed the Atlanta Music Festival chorus ever since its organization more than a year ago, and under whom it has attained a position of pre-eminence in the musical world, will conduct in person at the big free concert this afternoon in the Auditorium-Armory. At this concert the chorus will appear for the last time before disbanding for the summer months. This chorus now numbers between 400 and 500 voices. It is the same chorus that sang the famous chorus at Buffalo, and is nearly equal in size to that of the Mendelssohn chorus at Toronto. The organization is permanent, and work will be begun again in the fall.

The concert this afternoon will be composed principally, so far as the choral parts are concerned, of old English and old Irish ballads.

Dr. Starnes has brought unusual ability and experience to bear on the training of Atlanta's chorus. Before becoming the city organist, under the auspices of the Atlanta Music Festival association, he was organist to the Royal Opera in Covent Garden, London, as successor to the late Sir Arthur Sullivan. He was also organist at the Royal Albert hall, London; festival organist to the Brighton Sacred Harmonic society, and conductor for Sir Wilson Barrett, for the production of the "Sign of the Cross."

DATES ARE SUGGESTED FOR WILBURN TRIAL

Greensboro, Ga., June 14.—(Special.) Judge James B. Park, of the superior court, Ocmulgee circuit, on learning of the fact that his decision in the case of the state against Nick Wilburn on change of venue had been affirmed, wrote to Hon. J. M. Childs, clerk of the superior court of Jones county, to ascertain from the attorneys and the citizens of that county what date would be most convenient to try the case against Wilburn and Mrs. King, indicted for murder. He stated that he could hold the special session either on July 7 or August 11.

As soon as Judge Park hears from the clerk he will decide on the date of the special term.

Judge Park, after a full investigation of all the facts, decided at the April term of Jones superior court that there was no foundation for the allegation that the defendant could not obtain a fair and impartial trial in Jones county, that he was satisfied that the citizens of this county were upright and law abiding and that the defendant had no reason to apprehend any act of violence on the part of the people.

$13,500 FOR CREDITORS OF PERKINS' COMPANY

Augusta, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—An order from Judge Emory Speer, at chambers in Macon, allowing the distribution of $13,400 to the bond holders and unsecured creditors of the defunct Perkins Manufacturing company, of Augusta, was secured yesterday by Attorneys C. Henry Cohen and Irvin Alexander, of this city, representing the creditors of the bankrupt concern, according to information from Mr. Alexander.

This amount comes to the trustees in this bankruptcy matter as insurance on property destroyed by fire in April. About $10,000 in value of the property was covered by a mortgage given to secure the bonds issued by the Perkins Manufacturing company. The remaining property of the bankrupt corporation will be sold July 1, and the total assets of the company distributed at a date somewhat later to the bond-holders and unsecured creditors.

EMPTIED THEIR GUNS AND EACH WAS KILLED

Knoxville, Tenn., June 14.—Deputy Sheriff John Sliger and Joe Tipton, a man he was trying to arrest, killed each other tonight on the public highway near Rugby, Tenn. Tipton had been drinking, was boisterous and was firing his pistol promiscuously when Sliger demanded his surrender. Tipton turned his weapon on the officer and the two men emptied their pistols at one another. When the smoke cleared away both were dead within a short distance of each other.

"VISITORS" REPORT ON GA. UNIVERSITY

"We Find Nothing to Criticise Adversely, and Much to Commend," Is Summary of Report.

Athens, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Interest centered in the reading of the report of the board of visitors to the board of trustees of the University of Georgia this morning. The board of visitors is composed of Dr. A. W. Van Hoose, of Rome, chairman; Homer Carmichael, Judge M. Brewton, of Hinesville; Professor Ralph Miller, of Fort Valley, and B. W. Hunt, of Eatonton.

The report was exhaustive and thorough and even then the board acknowledged "unfinished business." Some of the salient points in the report follow:

"We find nothing to criticise adversely and much to commend," is the summary stated after examination of the management and conditions existing in the institution. A higher moral tone than for years, freedom from friction between students and authorities, school or municipal, and a better health record for the year were noted.

The board recommended a central heating plant for the campus. The statement was made in the report that "very few of the teaching rooms, dormitories and dining halls are in keeping with the dignity of the university and are a constant menace to the health and safety of the students and faculty; there is scarcely a preparatory school in the south with dormitory facilities that are not superior to those of the University of Georgia."

New Dormitory Needed.

Citing the fact that only 235 of 700 students can find room in the present dormitories, the board recommended a new dormitory; the utter inadequacy of the dining hall accommodations are also noted and another and larger hall is recommended.

The graduate school was complimented and recommendation was made that the teachers of these courses be remunerated for the extra effort and that a fee of $60 annually be charged for the students taking graduate work looking to the master's degree.

The law school building was strongly urged, it being recounted that 103 young men were receiving instruction in the school and that the law school is self-sustaining, that it pays its own professors' salaries and turned over to the general fund of the university $1,500. It was shown that the conditions are crowded fearfully and a new building and an extra instructor for the law department were urged.

A bronze bust of Mr. Peabody was recommended to be placed in the new Peabody hall, the building just erected and opened this week for the school of education, to indicate permanently appreciation by the people of the south of the benefits which the great philanthropist made possible for the teachers of the south.

The salary of the professor of pharmacy is recommended to be increased; an instructor is recommended for the department of history; the university library to cost $500 is urged for the department of history; it is recommended that $1,500 be spent for the increasing the equipment of the department of electrical engineering.

Unusual stress was laid on the excellent work of the recently established good roads work in the school of civil engineering and the "good roads laboratory" was a new feature to be commented upon in commendation by the board.

A department of publicity with specific system of work was recommended to carry to the people of the state the intelligence of what is actually being done in the various departments of their highest educational institution.

"While there are objections to intercollegiate athletics," says the board of visitors in allusion to this department of college activity here, "we believe that these objections have been reduced to a minimum at Georgia."

Fests on the Campus.

Some interesting recommendations were made regarding fraternities. "Objections to chapter houses could in a large measure be obviated by locating the chapter houses on the campus," the board reported. Action was urged looking to the locating of all chapter houses in future on the college property. It was urged that no man be pledged for membership in a fraternity who has not been in college three months at least and stood at least all examinations for a term satisfactorily.

Inspection of the new alumni hall, used for the first time during the year just closing, brought the recommendation for alumni trustees on the board —since the alumni have a direct interest in this building. It is believed representation on the board is not only their right, but would serve to help the alumni interest in the university. The board asked that steps be taken, if the charter is not transgressed in so doing, to provide for alumni to be elected by the alumni association.

Improvements were recommended for the academic building, an additional teacher for the department of commerce, better walks to the gymnasium and a physical instructor, whose salary shall be paid by the trustees, were recommended.

Physician is Needed.

A resident physician is now recommended to make careful physical examination of every student who enters the university, keep a record of his physical condition and advise him to the end that he may attain the best physical condition. The board says "the state appropriates money to keep the hogs free from disease, to free orchards from insects, to prevent the spread of the cattle tick, to improve the breed of cotton and corn—and nothing for the bodies of the young men of the university."

It is recommended to the trustees to request the governor to so arrange the appointment of visitors so that there shall be two hold-over members each year—believing that the experience of one year will greatly add to the efficiency of service the subsequent year in the work the board of visitors has to do.

The remarkable progress, the almost fabulous results achieved by the State College of Agriculture are reviewed by the board's report in some length and instances of definite results are named; the board said: "Urge the legislature to give Dr. Soule every dollar he asks for maintenance, for additional buildings, equipment and teaching force." The board recognized that the basis of population and of production of wealth is the farming class and that class is being helped directly by the State College of Agriculture; through this work the work of the entire university system is upheld and made greater.

WOULD PROVIDE STATE ASYLUM FOR "DRUNKS"

Representative Pickett to Present Bill Revolutionizing the Treatment of Inebriates.

A measure that will be introduced into the house this session by Representative D. C. Pickett, of Terrell county, will provide for a state asylum for inebriates. Mr. Pickett is quite serious in his advocacy of a marked change in the treatment of habitual drunkards. He declares that fines and stockade sentences by police court judges entirely fail to meet the situation.

Mr. Pickett has just returned from a business trip to the north, and was in Atlanta Saturday night en route to his home in Dawson. While north he made an investigation of the latest methods adopted for the treatment of inebriates in the states of the east. Discussing the bill which he proposes to introduce, he said:

"I would have an asylum provided either as a branch of the state sanitarium at Milledgeville or as a separate institution, where persons who have been adjudged to be habitual drunkards may be sent for treatment. They should have the right of a jury trial just as in the case of insane persons, but the treatment should be different. When they have been duly adjudged to be drunkards, they should be sent to the state institution provided specially for them for a definite term and should not be released therefrom until the physicians in charge were satisfied of their cure.

"While in the asylum, the inebriates should be given such work as they are capable of doing, and the institution should be made nearly self-supporting from the proceeds of their labor as possible. Medical authorities are coming more and more to the conclusion that drunkenness is a disease rather than a crime, and should be treated as such. I believe that by intelligent medical treatment carried on for a sufficient time to accomplish results, thousands of men, now regarded as hopeless, could be saved to themselves and their families. Those who have passed beyond all hope should be put away permanently in an institution where they might receive protection against their own weakness, and their friends and relatives relieved of the burden of their support."

Mr. Pickett did not seem to have considered how it would appear to outsiders for Georgia, a prohibition state, where intoxicants are supposed to be a thing unknown, to set about building an asylum for drunkards.

YOUNG WOMAN NAMED AS A FOREST GUARD

Sacramento, Cal., June 14.—Equal suffrage has found its way into the federal forestry service with the appointment of Miss Pallis M. Daggett as forest guard in the Siskiyou reserve. WRITES $50,000 POLICY FOR LOUIS B. MAGID

Frank W. Burr, of Atlanta, manager for Georgia for the Equitable Life Assurance society, last week wrote a $50,000 corporation policy covering the life of Mr. Louis B. Magid, president of the Appalachian Apple Orchards. This company owns 5,000 acres of land in Habersham and Rabun counties, and have planted over 35,000 apple trees.

Mr. Magid is president of Louis B. Magid & Co., investment bankers, with offices in the Candler building. This is said to be one of the largest corporation policies written in this section in some time.

ATLANTA DENTIST HAS MADE NOTABLE INVENTION

Dr. Montague Hart Tuttle Has Developed Telescopic Porcelain Crown.

Dr. Montague Hart Tuttle.

After four years of laboratory perfection and clinical use, Dr. Montague Hart Tuttle, a prominent Atlanta Dentist, has developed a Telescopic Porcelain Crown that will replace the old pivot crown system that has been in use for nearly half a century.

While it is a recognized fact that Dentists throughout the world have condemned the slaughter and mutilation of teeth, entailed by the use of the old pivot crown systems, there have been but few in the profession who have made an effort to overcome this objectionable practice.

The items of interest, a scientific Dental Journal of North America, has recently published a lengthy article on Dr. Tuttle's work, from which we quote a few paragraphs.

"We have come upon a time of crisis, when the laity are demanding a successful method of crowning teeth, with natural effects, that does not sacrifice what extensive decay has left of the crown portions, and constructing abutments for bridge-work that does not entail mutilation of sound teeth and destruction of the nerves.

"When we consider the mutilation entailed by the pivot crowns—how the foundation that nature presents is destroyed by excision of the stump—how the root is weakened and injured by the process of reaming—when we consider the insult the anterior gold crown has offered profession and layman, we do not wonder that there is a demand for an amendment of our ways."

We also quote a paragraph from a lengthy article recently published in Le Laboratoire Et Le Progress Dentaire, a Dental Journal published in Paris, France.

Translated into English:

"After many experiments the author has succeeded in making a crown of which the construction and technique are as perfect as possible, and which gives in bridge-work the most excellent results, etc."

It will be interesting to Atlantans to know that Dr. Tuttle's work is attracting the attention of leading dentists everywhere.

Had Serious Lung Trouble—Now Well

It is surprising that there exists much skepticism as to the possibility of a person recovering from severe Lung Trouble when there are so many reports of complete recovery brought about through the use of Eckman's Alterative. This is a remedy for the throat and lungs which should be investigated by every sufferer. Read of this case:

1913 Susquehanna Ave., Phila., Pa.

"My Dear Sir: For two years I was afflicted with hemorrhages of the lungs, and in February of 1902 I was taken with a severe attack of pneumonia. When I recovered sufficiently to walk about the house I was left with a frightful hacking cough, which no medicine I had taken could alleviate. It was at this time, March, 1902, that I started taking Eckman's Alterative. In a short time my cough was gone and I was pronounced well. Since that time I have had two slight attacks of pneumonia, and I have resorted to be other medicine to effect a recovery. I cannot speak too highly for the good it has done."

(Signed.) HOWARD L. KLOTZ.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

All admit that the North Side of Atlanta is in the right direction, and if you pick the right location you can't go wrong.

The surroundings of this property are the best Atlanta affords. The section from Peachtree to Piedmont Avenue is the heart of the cream of North Side property.

This includes the top of Atlanta realty--the part that has grown a thousand fold in the past five years and where the next three years means the climax of high values and profits.

These lots are between North Boulevard and the Ansley Park Golf Links. The Boulevard is one of the principal north and south streets of Atlanta, and one of the logical links in the proposed Battlefield Drive around Atlanta.

The Golf Links speak for themselves. A number of the expert golfers have pronounced these links the equal of any 9-hole course in the country.

One of Atlanta's prominent citizens remarked a few days ago that he considered a golf course the greatest possible acquisition to a residence section.

There is never a possibility of property surrounding a Golf Course being anything but the highest class residence property.

This property is located directly in the line of progress. The way to make money is to "get in the way" of progress, and you can't miss it here.

Remember, an auction is where you bid what you please. You set the price yourself, and that will be the way these 25 lots will be sold.

We own 93 lots in this tract and all will be finished in the same high class manner. We could only get 25 ready for you by the 19th of June.

These lots will be sold 10% cash and $25 per month, with 6% on deferred payments.

These terms allow you to participate. Think it over.

The real value of these lots is from $1500 to $3000, average value about $2350. Remember, you place the value at an auction. Any lot here will be worth $4000 to $5000 in three years.

Ansley Park has increased 11,000 per cent in eight years. Would you be willing to predict what the value will be in the next eight years?

The Annex is a continuation of the old Park; its history will be a repetition of the first. Why not? Built by the same man on the same lines, in the same direction, for the same class of people.

The lots that are shaded are the ones to be sold.

The semi-annual meeting of the Atlanta City Federation of Women's Clubs was on June 6.

This was one of the best meetings ever held by the federation, and indicates the splendid work that is being done and the increasing interest taken by the women of the city in club affairs.

A comprehensive program filled the morning and afternoon sessions, and there were splendid reports from most of the thirty-four clubs that compose the federation.

The year book just issued is the most complete resume of the work that has been compiled since the organization of the movement in 1899.

From this year book is this foreword:

"The record of fifteen years of federated work vindicates the wisdom of those who founded the City Federation of Women's Clubs. Growing in numbers, and influence as year followed year, the federation now has upon its rolls more than 8,000 members. Its aid has been sought and given in nearly every noble enterprise projected for the welfare of Atlanta and for the people of Georgia.

"The federated women move forward without discord, do their work uncomplainingly, expect no reward except a sense of duty well performed and the joy looking upon a civic life growing better every day.

"Unfettered by political obligations, free of motives of selfish gain, the women's organizations are devoted solely to the public good. And this being known, commands an universal confidence to a degree enjoyed perhaps by no other organization.

"The city federation has proved convincingly, even to those once prone to cavil, that women owe a duty to the public, payable in a public way through unlimited effort. And having proven this, the public has learned to depend upon them in their federated capacity to accomplish undertakings which have hitherto fallen short of positive success.

"Victories of civilization are now coming in the fullness of time, through the peace armies of united women—coming so silently and stealthily that conquest are complete before the battle is heard. And with it all, no charge or complaint that they have disturbed that calm which attends the 'serious business of being a woman.'"

MRS. GRACE JULIAN CLARK SENDS MESSAGE TO THE FEDERATED CLUB WOMEN OF GEORGIA

BY GRACE JULIAN CLARK,
Chairman of Press Committee of General Federation of Women's Clubs.

It is the ambition of the press committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs to spread abroad as far as possible through the medium of the newspaper press a correct idea of this great national organization of more than a million women, confident that such a course must result in twofold good, namely, the furthering of the many beneficient aims of the Federation, and also a marked increase in its membership.

Just as it is generally narrow and shortsighted for the individual woman to refuse to take part in club life on the ground that she can cultivate her mind at home, so the club life that holds itself aloof from organized club activities thereby lessens its usefulness even to its own members.

But we are no longer in clubs solely for our own improvement, any more than clubs are federated merely for the benefit of their little organizations can gain thereby. The motives of the woman who unites with a club are probably seldom easy to define, because they are made up of a number of elements; but it is safe to say that what she is really after is fellowship, the opportunity of mingling with others of similar tastes and aspirations and that she expects both to gain and to give. The object of federation is to help the individual clubs to a more perfect understanding of themselves by bringing them in touch with one another, and through co-operation on a large scale toward beneficent activities in community, state and nation.

George Meredith in "Beauchamp's Career" says: "One of his characters speak of "this, our awful baggage in the rear of humanity, these women, who have not moved one step on their own feet since the primal mother taught them to suckle, and are perpetually pulling us backward on the march." Far from pulling men backward today in the United States, women are seconding their efforts in all good works. It is safe to say that these are generally club women, and that they are even pointing the way and leading in every movement that carries children, the home and the unfortunate. This is their duty, because the eyes of these club women have been aroused by their years of study and observation so that they see many things not manifest to men, and they would be recreant if they did not rise to their opportunity and responsibility.

The General Federation has become a national power, as shown by the splendid activities of its several departments of work. Along the lines of art, civics, civil service reform, conservation, education, literature and their subdivisions, the Federation is making itself felt for good all over the country, not in a disturbing or obstructive way, but as a quiet, dignified force that commands the respect and sympathy of the best elements everywhere.

MEETINGS HELD BY CLUBS OF STATE

Senior Civic League.

Soon after the Senoia Civic league was organized plans were perfected for a library for the winter months. Subscriptions were secured and soon it outgrew the plans. A very convenient club room was leased and furnished; books were bought, a librarian engaged to open the library to the public twice a week. By means of entertainments and book showers the library has grown until now it is the pride of the league.

While most of the efforts of the league have been put upon the library civic work has not been neglected. Garbage boxes have been provided by the league, clean up days observed and the earnest co-operation of the mayor and councilmen secured.

McRae Improvement Club.

The McRae Improvement club, organized a little more than two years ago and has undertaken work along educational, philanthropical and civic lines. It has already passed the civic department, because like most small towns, we are behind in that respect.

Probably the most important thing that we did was setting the cows off the streets, a thing that had been pushed repeatedly by the men. A delegation from the club went before the council with this request, and in less than twenty minutes there was an ordinance passed. There is one citizen, which is strong and determined, has failed to overrule us and they are losing ground every day. The justice and wisdom of our course is realized.

We consider this good ground work for now the primitive fence will be removed and the streets graveled and public grounds beautified extensively.

It is to the present we have expended most of our thought and money on the McRae park—deeded to the town about a year ago.

As to our future aspirations, we are now perfecting plans to have a county fair this fall for the benefit of our girls, we believe that we are large enough to begin work on an up-to-date club and rest room.

In talking with some of our leading men the other day, he congratulated us upon the good we had done, saying that we did not know how far-reaching our influence was, all of which cheered us exceedingly, and will cause us to work with greater zeal for the moral and civic uplift of our thriving little city.

Ellijay Woman's Club.

The best thing the Ellijay Woman's club has ever done has been along the line of the object for which it was organized, that is, "Doing practical aid to the sick and needy."

Food, clothing and need of education, have been given to those in need. Medicine have been distributed, and services of nurses procured for sick, and patients sent to hospitals when necessary.

The lives of the bread winners of two families have been saved.

The Ellijay civic pride, and cleanliness have resulted in conditions for which the club is justly proud.

MRS. F. E. SHIPPEN,
President.

Greensboro Woman's Club.

The first meeting of the Greensboro, Ga., Woman's club was held June 6 with Miss Georgia Arnold at the Richland hotel. The annual election of officers took place with the following result: President, Mrs. E. W. Bethea; first vice president, Mrs. R. P. Wheeler; second vice president, Mrs. E. G. Adams; third vice president, Mrs. F. C. Reid; recording secretary, Mrs. Paul Wheeler; corresponding secretary, Mrs. L. C. Reid; auditors, Mrs. J. C. Williams and Mrs. M. M. Morgan.

An interesting account of the Eighth district convention, recently held at Covington, Ga., was given by Mrs. J. B. Park and Mrs. D. W. Wilson.

MRS. M. M. MORGAN,
Press Reporter.

Eastman Study Club.

Organized April 23, 1913; federated May —, 1913.

The latest addition to the ranks of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs in the Study club of Eastman.

The president of the club, Mrs. Alex W. Bealer, is a woman of wide reputation as a splendid organizer, and fine club woman.

Although organized only a month and with twenty-three members, it has already become actively interested in every movement that tends to the uplift of the town, and will soon take its place as one of the best and most enthusiastic clubs of the state.

MRS. LOUIS L. BROWN,
Twelfth District President.

A Wonderful Edition.

The Woman's Edition was simply wonderful! My heart thrills anew with pride each day as I read and re-read the many splendid articles from our brilliant, brainy women.

Let me thank you, dear women, scattered all over the United States, who so cheerfully and promptly sent the magnificent contributions from their worthy pens that we regret more than words can express that they were crowded out of the Woman's Edition for lack of space, but we treasure them to such an extent that they will be published and featured on our club page each week by week, so the inspiration of their wisdom and experience shall yet reach all or our club women.

Congratulations for The Constitution, for our editors and for all who labored for our edition and double congratulations for the publication of so valuable a contribution to their library as the Woman's Edition of June 4!

MRS. HOLLAND JONES,
General Federation Secretary.

"Irvington, Ind., June 5, 1913.

"Mrs. Jones, Atlanta, Ga.:

My Dear Mrs. Jones—The Woman's Edition of The Atlanta Constitution has just arrived and I cannot tell you how very excellent it is and how much pleasure I anticipate from a closer inspection. You have a sweet picture of Mrs. Pennybacker, which I like better than her other published pictures. She is indeed a wonderful woman, and must be an inspiration wherever she goes.

"GRACE JULIAN CLARKE."

Woman's Club of Covington Host of Annual Convention

Federated Women's clubs of the fourteen women's clubs of the eighth Eighth district was held in Covington, May 29, 1913.

The convention was the guest of the Woman's club, and right royally were they entertained.

A committee of club women was at the station to meet the delegates, and an automobile ride over Covington was the first item on the day's delightful program. An hour was spent at the lovely home of Mrs. P. W. Godfrey. Here strangers were introduced and old friends exchanged greetings.

Promptly at 10 o'clock, in the auditorium of the public school building, Mrs. W. E. Shepherd, president of the Eighth district, called the convention to order. The invocation was made by Rev. John C. Logan. Mr. George E. Smith, Covington's widespaw and progressive mayor, gave a welcome in the name of the city. It is very evident that Covington is awake to the possibilities of woman's work, and that he gives them credit for all they have done in the past. He is also a suffragist, outspoken, and courageous in his opinion.

Miss Sallie May Cook gave a gracious welcome in the name of the home club.

The U. D. C. greeting by Mrs. R. W. Milner was truly southern in its cordiality.

The D. A. R. sent a warm welcome through Mrs. J. F. Rogers.

The Qui Vive club, the youngest club in Covington, but not in good wishes, was represented by Mrs. P. W. Godfrey.

The response from the delegates made by Mrs. John Hart, of Union Point, was bright and sparkling, gracious and dignified.

In the absence of Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. M. A. Lipscomb, of Athens, made a short talk on "Federation Work."

Endowment Fund Urged.

Mrs. Lipscomb stressed the necessity of raising the endowment funds. This is of vital importance not only to the state federation, but to the national.

The work of both is hampered by lack of income and needed to be established on a sound business basis.

"Education," said Mrs. Lipscomb, "is the slogan of the Georgia federation. Education in every line of work. The federation wants to build a chain of agricultural schools from the mountains of north Georgia to the wiregrass region of the south, each school to be equipped as best suited to its particular locality."

Later Mrs. Lipscomb spoke on the subject of domestic science in the home. This gentle-voiced, snowy-haired little lady, with her serious brown eyes, has looked into the future and sounded a timely warning which is well worth serious consideration, not only in the Eighth district, but all over the state.

Among other things, fads should be avoided. They are feeble, last but for a day, and lessened the dignity of a club. There is a tendency toward too many committees. A club is not to be divided against itself. Personal preference, likes and dislikes and personal animosity should be put aside, and the club spirit fostered and encouraged by every means known to womankind, but in keeping with the Master, who said: "Not My will, But Thine."

A Beautiful Paper.

Mrs. Charles Haden read a fine paper on "Woman's Duty to the Public."

As president of the Atlanta City Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Haden is in position to know just what this means. Her paper received the closest attention, of special interest was her suggestion that club plant trees along public highways, telling what it would mean to future generations.

Mr. Lee Worsham, of Atlanta, followed Mrs. Haden in a talk on the "Conservation of Trees and Birds," which was highly interesting. Mr. Worsham gave his hearty approval to Mrs. Haden's idea of planting trees along public highways, and suggested pecans as best adapted for that purpose.

Mrs. Walter B. Hill, of Athens, was on the program for a paper on "Laws in Georgia Concerning Women," but being detained at home on account of illness in her family, Mrs. Thomas Green read the paper.

Federation Scholarships.

"Federation Scholarships" was the subject of a perfectly delightful talk from Mrs. Green, the live president of the live Woman's club of Athens.

No one in convention in Covington on that day failed to catch her enthusiasm, as she urged the clubs of the district, as their privilege and duty, to contribute, that they, too, might have the grasp of bright Georgia girls the wherewith to educate themselves, to help them lift themselves from ignorance and misery to knowledge and happiness.

At the close of the morning session, under the spreading oak trees on the lawn, the Woman's club served a delicious luncheon, on tables arched with pink and white sweet peas.

Afternoon Session.

The first part of the afternoon session was given over to the reports of the twenty-two clubs represented.

Mrs. Godfrey introduced a set of resolutions to the effect that the delegates pledge themselves to work for cleaner, purer literature. After much discussion, these were adopted.

The convention felt most fortunate in having with them Mrs. Nichols Peterson, state vice president. Mrs. Peterson had charge of the afternoon session.

Mrs. W. E. Shepherd and Mrs. Mary D. Sikes were unanimously re-elected president and vice president of the Eighth district for the next two years.

The Lavonia Woman's club sent to the convention Covington's delegate, Mrs. J. H. Burton, an invitation to meet with them in 1914. The invitation was accepted.

A happy hour for the pleasant day was the 5 o'clock tea, given by the Woman's club, at the home of Mrs. James P. Rogers.

In this convening home parliamentary laws and regulations were forgotten, and the club women enjoyed the delightful punch and sandwiches in true feminine style.

MRS. MARY BARNETT STOKES,
Secretary Eighth District.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick Delighted With Results of Great Woman's Edition

The great club edition is now a part of the inspirational history of our Georgia federation.

There is a pleasure in thinking of the beauty of unity and the power of concerted energy displayed through all the weeks that were given to the issuing of this wonderful paper, and a distinct thrill in thinking of its permanent value to our work.

Our unbounded pride over its great success, I am sure, is entirely pardonable.

The $3,000 it brought to our treasury is a splendid nucleus for our endowment fund, and should be a stimulous to us to press on now until the entire twenty-five thousand dollars are raised.

There are those in the state, who, while not helping us in our edition, express interest in our work and a desire to help it in some other way. With the endowment committee I urge the club women, and that means you, dear club woman, to begin the follow-up work at once.

"Seek out such friends as have been mentioned, meet, at least, half way the man who is coming to make you a gift for the endowment fund, and while the interest is fresh, make it easy for every man, woman and child in Georgia to give substantial help to this fund which is going to so greatly help every citizen of Georgia." Go on now.

MRS. Z. I. FITZPATRICK,
President Georgia Federation Women's Clubs.

Important to Club Women.

In the "Woman's Edition" appeared an advertisement of a little book recently edited by Mrs. Walter B. Hill, of Athens, under the title, "Certain Rules of Law in Business Transactions." The advertisement, however, failed to mention the fact that 10 per cent of the sales of the book will be donated to the club schools of the Georgia federation.

Mrs. Hill's active interest and earnest labors in behalf of the schools are well known to Georgia club women, and her generous offer should insure a large sale of the book, which in itself is a most valuable collection of legal facts with which every woman should be familiar.

The price of the book is 25c, postpaid, and club or individual orders may be sent either to Mrs. Hill, direct, or to the McGregor Book company, Athens, Ga.

A MAGNETIC WOMAN.

Among an array of prominent women seldom equaled, Mrs. Grace Julian Clark, of Indianapolis, Ind., made a most indelible impression upon the Georgia women who attended the Washington council meeting.

Asked by Mrs. Fitzpatrick to choose the one we felt our friends at home would enjoy most, we selected Mrs. Clark.

But for conflicting engagements, she would have addressed the recent chautauqua in Albany.

Mrs. Clark is chairman of the press committee of the general federation, the editor of the club department and woman's department in one of Indiana's largest daily papers, and a club woman and speaker of national reputation.

Elsewhere is published Mrs. Clark's earnest message as regards her mission as press chairman. Also her congratulations to the editors of the Woman's Edition.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Mr. Collier has written a series of articles on German life and tells many interesting things and incidents about the German empire with a remarkable study of the German emperor. The author was educated at Geneva, Leipsic and Harvard. He has been a great traveler, a lover of out-door sports, and served as an officer in the U. S. navy, during the American-Spanish war. Mr. Collier's home is at Tuxedo, N. Y.

University and Historical Addresses. By James Bryce. Delivered during a residence in the United States as ambassador of Great Britain. Dedicated to Elihu Root "In Admiration and Friendship." Mr. Bryce makes the following statement:

"The enjoyment which I have derived from my earlier visits to the United States was renewed and enhanced by the welcome with which I found myself received and by the encouragement given me to speak on all non-political topics as freely as if I had been a citizen of the United States."

The Confederate Cause and Conduct in the War Between the States, as set forth in the reports of the history committee of the grand camp, C. V., of Virginians and other confederate papers. The Walled City. A story of the criminal insane, by Dr. Edward H. Williams, formerly assistant professor of pathology and bacteriology, State university of Iowa; formerly assistant physician at the Matteawan State hospital for insane criminals, etc.

Dr. Williams presents in a manner not attempted heretofore by an experienced writer a picture of the everyday life of those within the "Walled City." Precious Waters. By A. M. Chisholm. Author of "The Boss of Wind River."

Another interesting western story from Mr. Chisholm's pen telling the story of the problems of irrigation and struggle of the ranchers to save their streams from the encroachments of the land department of the railroad. Of course, there is something more interesting than the country in the heroine, a breezy bachelor girl who is in things and makes the plot full of unexpected developments and exciting incidents. (Doubleday, Page & Co., Garden City, New York.)

The Silent Battle. By George Gibbs. Author of "The Forbidden Way," etc. Illustrated. In the first chapter is a wonderful picture of the beauties of the Isle of Pines, and it is there the hero and heroine meet, in Arcady. The hero is a well-born cultured young man who is making a terrible struggle to overcome his inherited love for strong drink. He almost loses his business, his friends, the girl he loves, his self respect, but in the end he fights a man's battle and wins a glorious victory. The book is worth a place in any world of fiction. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

My Lady Pery Leaves Town. By Frances Aymar Matthews. After several years Miss Matthews has given to the literary world the long and eagerly awaited successor to her well known "Lady Peggy Goes to Town." This time she tells of a high-bred English girl, is a lineal descendant of the original Lady Pegg. She leaves New York to lead the simple life in the west, and to say the least of it, her adventurres while there are thrilling. (Moffat, Yard & Co., New York.)

(Publishers, G. P. Putman's Sons, New York and London.)

Simon Brandon. By Paul Neuman. Author of "Bodies of Sin." Paul Neuman gives us a true insight into the passionate heart of the nihilist. He makes his readers understand why it is that the most humanitarian men in Russia have pledged themselves to hasten social reform. It is the story of a Russian exile who has become rich in America and lives in England, in order to be near the continent, that he may devote his wealth to directing a revolutionary campaign against the Czar. (George H. Doran Co., New York.)

Wilsam. By S. C. Nethersole. "Flotsam: Goods lost by shipwreck and floating on the sea. Jetsam: Goods which sink when cast into the sea. Wilsam: Goods driven ashore when no wreck or ship is visible, hence called

Parrott & Co. By the author of "The Man On the Box." Illustrations in color by Andre Castaigne, and Black and White by Arthur William Brown. Novels by Mr. Harold McGrath need no introduction to the readers of fiction, and his new story is just as full of that rare charm with which he makes his characters play their parts as the impreseness of the narrative. (Bobbs-Merrill & Co., Indianapolis.)

The Stoenberg Affair. By Ralph A. Goodwin. With illustrations by Richard Boehm. The scene is laid in a small principality of Europe, in which the political pot is forever boiling. This book will be published this month by George H. Doran company.

The Dying Christian to His Soul

Vital spark of heavenly flame,
Quit, oh quit this mortal frame:
Trembling, hoping, lingering, flying—
Oh, the pain, the bliss of dying!
Cease, fond Nature, cease thy strife,
And let me languish into life!

Hark! they whisper, angels say,
Sister spirit, come away!
What is this absorbs me quite?
Steals my senses, shuts my sight,
Drowns my spirit, draws my breath?
Tell me, my soul, can this be death?

The world recedes; it disappears!
Heaven opens to my eyes! my ears
With sounds seraphic ring:
Lend, lend your wings! I mount! I fly!
O Grave! where is thy victory?
O Death! where is thy sting!

Oot many years after Roosevelt graduated from Harvard there was at Cambridge a certain undegraduate who never indulged in intoxicating beverages, but whose superabundant spirits seemed to require a periodic outlet. These conditions used to result in extravagant outbursts known as "Bill H's dry drunks." This would seem to be a useful term for newspapers in explanation of certain acts.

The tabloid form of musical comedy helps a little, but conditions will not be ideal until musical comedy can be administered hypodermically.

Crackers Take Lead Three Times in Game But Musser Falters

Bases on Balls Fatal—Winning Runs Made With Two Out in Seventh—Pole Finishes Strong—Score 4-3.

By W. G. Foster.

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 14.—(Special.)—Thinking that the locals would sing today, Paul Musser slipped a first and King on third in the seventh inning today. Paul Musser slipped a first one over to Mick Coyle "in the alley," and lost to Chattanooga one of the hardest fought struggle of the season.

Coyle landed squarely on the sphere. Alpermann, who had previously nailed a similar drive, made a vain leap in the air for the smash. The ball sped to right center and Flick hurried all the way home from first behind King, who walked in from third.

The two runs brought the home team from one behind to one to the good and made the final tally 4 to 3 as Coveleskie was steady in the last three innings.

Musser spoiled some brilliant pitching by unsteadiness, bases on balls being responsible for two Chattanooga runs, and a wild pitch leading directly to a third. Coveleskie won his ninth straight. He was hit a little harder than the big blonde eight Sander, but had abundance of stuff that puzzled the dreaded Cracker sluggers most of the time. In addition the local southpaw was steady all the way after he passed Long in the first.

Bisland Fields Well.

Bisland was the fielding star for the Crackers who gave Musser perfect support, except perhaps that faster fielding on Coyle's double might have kept Flick from scoring the winning run. Bisland nailed a real hit from Johnson's bat in the fourth for a double play. Most of the chances off Musser were easy, the Cracker pitcher having everything save in the three fatal pinches.

Coyle made a great play on Bisland's near three base hit in the fourth, knocking it down back of the bag and throwing to the Pole who covered.

The two teams subsided from the bitter feeling that existed Friday though they fought for every inch. As fast as the Crackers would go one ahead, the locals would catch up.

Long was passed to start Welchonce advanced him and he scored on Alpermann's beauty double.

Musser could not get them over at the beginning, passing both King and Flick. Coyle moved them up and King scored on Elberfeld's sacrifice fly.

Bisland got a hit and Agler beat his bunt in the second, but Dunn forced Bisland and the Pole fanned the next two.

A single by Dunn, Musser's bunt and Long's double in the second another Cracker run in the fifth. The locals tied forthwith.

Scratch Hit Ties.

Graff larruped a double to the left field fence with one out. Musser uncorked a wild heave to Dunn made a nice recovery, but Graff beat the throw to third by a scratch. This brought the infield close in and Coveleskie's little grounder which would have been easy with the infield back, cozied past Bisland, Graff scoring.

In the next inning the Crackers made a run that threatened to spell victory. Bailey doubled to left center. Smith sacrificed and Bill scored when Elberfeld made an excusable error of Agler's slow one.

For the first time, the locals failed to tie in their half and the Crackers became confident. Two went out in the seventh without trouble, but Musser lost the plate on Kline and then had some hard luck. As King started to steal and Bisland to cover, Flick hit a fly just back of short. In his regular position, Bisland would have handled the poke, but being off his balance he couldn't outte reach it. King went to third and Coyle hit the first one for the winning double, scoring two.

This settled the game, as the Crackers failed to reach first in the last three innings save for a pass to Welchonce.

Birmingham, June 14.—By a lone run Birmingham captured the first game from Nashville, 1 to 0, but timely home-run drives by Schwartz and Goalby prevented Birmingham from entering the first division by taking the last battle, 4 to 2. Both games were abbreviated to seven innings, and were fiercely contested. Forest More made a creditable debut with the Volunteers, allowing Birmingham but two hits.

Memphis, Tenn., June 14.—Inability of Montgomery to hit Parsons, the Memphis twirler, cost them the game this afternoon, Memphis winning 1 to 0. Case, of Montgomery, was also effective, giving up only five hits.

Butler doubled in the seventh inning, scoring on Ward's single, the only run made in the game.

Beauvald was put out of the game for kicking, and Snell, Memphis, substitute catcher, was sent to right field to take his place. Score.

New Orleans, June 14.—Hendryx smashed the ball over left field fence for a home run in the seventh inning, bringing in two runners ahead of him, and New Orleans won from Mobile, 6 to 5. "GABBY" STREET, SOUTHERN LEAGUE'S BEST RECEIVER

SNARING A WILD PITCH

SET FOR A SPIRAL

MAKING HIM GROOVE ONE

Three excellent likenesses of the great catcher of the Chattanooga team, snapped by The Constitution's staff photographer when the Lookouts were at Ponce de Leon recently.

Gabby is playing the best game of his career, and his work to date has spiked the story that he was "all in." Gabby has no business whatsoever in the Southern league. He is better right now than nine-tenths of the catchers in the big show.

His work has been the making of the Chattanooga team. He has nursed along the pitchers of the Lookouts, steadying them with his line of conversation, and Elberfeld has built his team around his catcher. If there is anything the matter with his leg his work in Atlanta in six games has failed to show it.

Street is a willing worker. He catches practically every game of the season in which his team participates, and what makes him such a help is that he catches better than anyone else possibly could.

That he will be back in the big leagues at the start of next season goes without saying. He knows a lot of baseball, has a good arm, knows how to work the pitchers, keeps plenty of life in the game at all times, and this season he is hitting better than he ever hit ni his life.

Gabby broke into prominence first as the only man who could successfully handle the speedy slants of Walter Smokeball Johnson, and he handled them as acceptably as if he was catching a twirler with half the speed.

But he was given world-wide prominence when he caught a ball dropped from the top of the Washington monument, a feat that got his name before the public, not only of this country but throughout the world. His feat was afterward equaled, but as Gabby was the first to attempt it, the credit all goes to him.

Not only is he a grand ball player, he is one of the best fellows personally that ever wore a baseball uniform. On the field he fights for his team. But every one loves a fighter. Off the field he is of a retiring, modest disposition, a fellow well liked by his team-mates, the management and the fans alike.

As said before, Gabby will go back in the big show at the end of the present Southern league season, and he'll make the team that let him get away rue the day.

More catchers and more ball players like Gabby would be a credit to the great national pastime.

Empire State League's New Season Opens July 3

Cordele, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Following the meeting of the directors of the Empire league, held here yesterday afternoon, at which time the league season was divided and twelve additional games tacked on to the original schedule, an adjourned meeting was held last night and the official schedule for the twelve games was adopted. While there was considerable discussion over this matter, the schedule was adopted with little dissenting opinion as follows:

August 14-15-16—Thomasville at Valdosta, Waycross at Brunswick, Americus at Cordele.

August 18-19-20 — Brunswick at Thomasville, Valdosta at Americus, Cordele at Waycross.

August 21-22-23—Waycross at Valdosta, Americus at Brunswick, Thomasville at Cordele.

August 24-25-26—Valdosta at Thomasville, Brunswick at Waycross, Cordele at Americus.

Will Open New Season July 3.

The last half of the season opens on July 3, and all of the clubs will then be placed on an equal footing for the opening of the second series. All of the teams will then doubtless be in much stronger condition, more evenly matched and playing better ball than in the first series.

With a game in each of the six cities in the league on the fourth of July, which is very excellently arranged for in the schedule, and the greatly increased attendance that will witness these games, making much stronger the financial condition of the league, the second half of the season will open under most auspicious circumstances.

At the meeting last night an advisory committee to the president of the league, composed of H. C. Mitchell, of Americus; F. L. Bartholomew, of Cordele, and J. B. Jemison, of Thomasville, was appointed to investigate the salaries paid the players in any club at any time that might be deemed necessary.

Umpire Fired.

President Groover stated to the meeting that he had just wired Umpire McLaughlin, at Valdosta, that he was released. This action was taken on the grounds that McLaughlin was in an intoxicated condition and unable to umpire several games this week, and that numerous kicks had been registered against him by the president of every club in the league. Jack Morrison, of Macon, has been engaged by the president, and will be given a trial as umpire. There are several other umpires in view.

CALCIUM POINTED TO BOB M'ALLESTER

Pacific Coast Middleweight Has Them All Talking—He Is After the Title.

New York, June 14.—(Special.)—Much interest is felt by easterns fight fans in young Bob McAllester, of San Francisco. Those who have seen him fight in the west say he has everything a champion needs. His physical makeup is perfect. Nealy 6 feet tall, he is lean and sinewy and symmetrical. His reach is as great as that of Fitzsimmons, who stretches 75 inches from tip to tip, arms extended. He is very fast in action, and his quick mind enables him to take instant advantage of his opponents.

Added to cleverness he has a knock-out punch in right or left, boxing in somewhat the style invented by Ketchel. He is cool, determined, close-mouthed, and effective. So say the California fight followers.

We will soon have a chance to see him in action here in New York, for he has weeded out the local middleweight crop to such an extent that to keep busy he will have to come east and engage with Klaus, Papke, Dillon and other notables of the ring who claim that middleweight title he wants.

Second Place

Will Be Decided When Alibis Play Locals At Ponce de Leon

Barons Follow—Attendance Trophy Will Be Presented Thursday—3,207 Paid Admissions to Beat.

By Dick Jemison.

The second place berth in the Southern league will be decided at Ponce de Leon this week, not permanently, perhaps, but for a while to come.

Bill Schwartz and his Nashville Volunteers, nicknamed the Nashville Alibis after their president, Alibi Hirsig, will be the attraction the first three days of the present week.

The rivalry between the two teams this season has been intense for several reasons. The Welchonce deal, when the Crackers dipped one over on Mr. Alibi, rankled in his breast, and on the last trip of the locals to Nashville, he tried to slip one over, but he failed again.

The Forfeited Game.

The Crackers wanted to play the game on Monday. They have a letter showing that this was the agreement. Mr. Alibi stuck out for Wednesday.

The Crackers claimed Monday's game by forfeit, and it so appears in the standing in The Constitution. Nashville claimed the Wednesday game by forfeit, and it so appears in the Nashville papers.

These standings will not be rectified until Judge Kavanaugh, president of the league, decides to order the game played over again, which he is certain to do. He intimated as much in a statement issued just after the squabble.

The team has played nine games to date, three in Atlanta and six in Nashville. The Crackers broke even in Nashville and then dropped all three played in Atlanta. But there will be a different tale this time.

Gilbert Price will probably draw the opening game assignment on Monday with Chapman back in harness again, working with him.

Barons Next.

Carleton Molesworth and his Birmingham Barons will be the opponents of the locals the last three days of the week.

Thursday will be the big day of the week, as President Kavanaugh will be a guest of the local club on this date and will present to the Crackers the trophy won by the locals for having the largest paid attendance the opening day of the season.

But Atlanta fans must not rest on their honors. They must beat the attendance given by the Barons on pennant raising day at Birmingham, when there were 3,207 paid, admissions. Thursday, the local fans must better this mark. Can we do it? Absolutely.

The Barons have been easy picking for the Crackers this season. The teams have engaged in eleven battles and eight of them have gone to the local credit. Should the Barons win two games on their home soil out of the seven played and one at Ponce de Leon out of four played. Three games will be played on this trip.

Right after the last Birmingham game the Crackers will leave on another long jaunt around the circuit, playing in New Orleans, Memphis, Montgomery and Mobile before returning home again in time for a double header July 4.

TEXAS STATE TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP MONDAY

The tennis championship for the state of Texas will begin Monday with play on the courts of the Houston Country club at Houston, Texas.

In Memphis.

Dick Jemison, Sporting Editor The Constitution: With a runner on first and third, and one out, the batter hits to short. He taps second and throws to first, completing a double play. But in the meantime the runner on third had scored before the throw was made for second and the first inning. Does the score count?

R. G. C.

It does not.

Dick Jemison, Sporting Editor The Constitution: With a man on third and two outs, the batter knocks a three-base hit and fails to reach first. The ball is thrown to first and the batter is called out. Does the run count?

E. H.

The run does not count, as when he failed to reach first base, he failed to reach home on safety, as the subsequent retirement by the batsman being relayed there proves. As it made the third out of the inning, the umpire retired the side, the batter's failure to touch first cost his team a run.

Dick Jemison, Sporting Editor The Constitution: 1. Where are the following players now, Bausewein, Nig Clarke, Pat Graham, Doc Chilids, Ben Stanford and Pop Bennett? 2. Where did Conselman, Price and Brady play last year? 3. Is the Schultz with the New York American the same Schultz that was with Savannah last season?

A. R.

1. Bausewein is with Charlotte, Clarke is in the American association, Stinson is in the Texas league, Graham is at his home. I don't know where the others are. 2. Conselman was with Pittsburg, Price and Brady with Atlanta. 3. Yes.

Where They Play Today.

Southern League.

Mobile in New Orleans.
Montgomery in Memphis.
Chattanooga in Nashville.

National League.

Boston in Cincinnati.
Brooklyn in Chicago.
Philadelphia in St. Louis.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES, DAY BY DAY

ALL THE NEWS OF REAL ESTATE AND BUILDING

Fun and frolic reigned at the Atlantal real estate board barbecue in Cold Springs yesterday, where all set customs were disregarded and anything so formal as a speech was tabooed. White-haired pioneer real estaters romped with their grandchildren at the picnic grounds. Just as they used to do many years ago, and the carefree happy throng of 125 realtor brokers cut up many capers that kept every one laughing, and assured a good time to all.

Of course there was dancing, out-door sports of all kinds, baseball and hand ball. All of the day's program was second in enjoyment, however, to the spread. If the proof of the pudding is in the eating superlatives would fall short of describing what a hit that combination of lamb, Brunswick stew, pork, tomatoes, potatoes and rye bread made.

Seated at long tables in the open air pavilion, on rustic benches, with the trees as a background, the diners presented a pretty picture. Enthusiasm reached its highest when terminate when announcement was made that E. L. Winn and Harris G. White each won a red necktie, the prizes were awarded by President Charles P. Glover to the two-man team which would sell

Teaching Georgia's Blind to See Through Their Fingers

EDUCATION OF STATE'S BLIND CHILDREN IS A BIG TASK

At the top, on the left: Superintendent George F. Oliphant in his office. On the right, the Academy building. Just below the building, blind students receiving instruction in broommaking. Middle row, at the left: First grade class in charge blind instructor. On the right: Students drilling in court outside of gymnasium. Bottom row, on left: Students doing bench work, with samples of work in foreground. On right: Classroom scene during study period, showing students reading with their fingers.

Macon, Ga., June 14.—(Special.)—Educating Georgia's blind children is a bigger task than most people think, but Georgia is just now reaching the point where she is getting the system down to a fine point and wonderful results are being accomplished.

The present site of the academy, on the Forsyth road, just outside the Macon city limits, comprises twenty acres of ground which was purchased seven or eight years ago for $12,000. On this has been erected a building which cost $100,000.

When the state decided to build the new academy it disposed of the old property at Orange and High streets for $50,000, and with an additional appropriation from the state of $65,000 was able to buy a new site and erect the present modern building.

In this building each day seventy-five unfortunate, sightless children receive training so they may become useful citizens despite their affliction. They range in age all the way from 6 to 18 years and as in the case with other children when they are normal in all respects except that they cannot see, they are just as apt at learning as anyone else. It is where there is a combination of afflictions that the trouble comes in and the instructors find it hard to get results though they never let up as long as the student shows any progress whatever.

THE TOTALLY BLIND APT SCHOLARS.

"Take the totally blind child, the rest of whose body is normal, and he will learn rapidly," said Superintendent George F. Oliphant, in discussing the work of the institution. "It is the ones with partial sight who give us the most trouble. The latter kind usually make sorry students, for they learn to depend on their partial sight, and as a result do not get a clear notion of things.

"The only way for a blind person to make progress is to get the thing fixed in his mind and once that is done it will remain there. Of course, the whole secret of teaching blind people is to educate the mind through the hands and the course of study must be mapped out accordingly."

Superintendent Oliphant believes in teaching his students things that will make them useful at home. Most of them return home after they leave the school, he declares, and unless the girls marry, the majority of them stay there. For that reason they are taught cooking, sewing and music principally, though, of course, they all take literary courses as well.

STUDENTS CAN EASILY EARN LIVING.

To illustrate the practical aims of the institution and to show how the student may receive financial returns after he leaves the school, Mr. Oliphant cites the case of one boy who is studying horticulture and is making a special study of carnations. "When that boy leaves the academy he can begin to raise his own flowers and if he grows nothing but carnations he will be able to make a fair living, for there is always a demand for that kind of flower."

The alumnus of the institution is now scattered all over the state. Coroner Paul Donehoo, of Fulton county, is a graduate of the academy. He took a course in music while at the school and is now studying law as well as looking after his official duties as coroner.

Another graduate, Walter McDonald, is studying law at the University of Georgia and there are many music teachers scattered over the state who secured their training at the state academy. Director McNeil, of the academy conservatory of music, is himself a graduate of the academy, where he is now an instructor.

BLIND INSTRUCTORS EMPLOYED.

The Georgia Academy for the Blind employs eleven instructors, and of that number four are themselves blind. There are six teachers in the literary department, three music teachers and two instructors in the manual training department, one for the boys and one for the girls.

Probably the most remarkable feature of the whole institution is the work of P. T. Perrigo, the blind instructor in the boys' manual training department. He is a skilled mechanic and does his work almost as well as though in possession of his sight.

One of the chief features of this department is the broom factory. Brooms are easy to make and in many cases blind men have made fortunes out of the business, though it is said by Superintendent Oliphant that the industry is not such a profitable one in this part of the country because of the distance from the source of supply.

Aside from brooms, the boys are taught to do all kinds of wood turning work. Piano stools, library tables, wooden kitchen utensils and chairs are all turned out with ease by many of the students after they are able to fix the idea thoroughly in their minds. One student became so proficient in his work that he turned out as perfect a specimen of a cannon as one would want to see.

COURSE IN PIANO TUNING.

Piano tuning is also one of the main arts in which the boys are given instruction. Good ears, a thorough knowledge of the parts of the piano and enough musical education to

This Attractive And Useful Design For Needleworkers Can Be Transferred Without Recourse To The Old And Obsolete Tracing Paper Method Which Is Unreliable At Best.

Since the collar plays a more important decorative scheme than most any other feature of the summer dress, it will be necessary to add many of these little affairs to one's wardrobe. The simple pattern herewith given is intended for fragile work, yet it will look equally well done on any of the semi-weight colored fabrics. In fact, it applies to such materials as chambra, linene, pique and the like, on which goods the pattern done wholly in white would look very fetching.

However, we suggest the collar made of sheer cambric, a stout material. Use white cotton floss and work the pattern solid in satin stitch. Be sure to slant the lines on all leaves and do not pad them. This collar could be done in eyelet, and as such it would be very handsome in all white to wear with any dress of flower tint.

If one does not care for the dainty embroidered edge, it can be hemstitched with a one-inch border, or a small half-inch edge further adorned with good lace.

Such collars as the above can be made into numerous styles. One of the pretty conceits of the season is to attach little ruffles of lace about six inches deep from the front edges. This lace falls over the bust of the waist, making a very dressy appearance on the plainest gown. Another feature is the flat bow of velvet, or the brilliant tie, such as the younger girl wears with sailor suits.

A color scheme can be used, such as pink or blue wash floss upon white dress fabric. It is a girlish color scheme, and something to be recommended when pretties are desired.

TO TRANSFER THIS DESIGN.

Put a cake of soap (laundry will do) in a pint of hot water, stir vigorously and remove the soap. Saturate this Design with the soap and water mixture, then remove the excess moisture by partially drying the saturated Design or by applying a sheet of blotting paper. Place the material or fabric to which the design is to be transferred on a hard, flat surface and lay the Design, face down, upon the material. Cover with a dry sheet of thick paper or two folds of newspaper, and with the bowl of a tablespoon rub, pressing hard, until the Design is entirely transferred, being careful not to rub from, rather than toward you. When rubbing, you can see if enough pressure is being applied by lifting a corner of the Design to note how well it's taking. Do not wet the material nor rub the face of the Design with damp fingers. To remove the Design lines after the article is completed, wash in warm water, with soap. The entire process is very simple and with a little care you can easily make perfect transfers to any kind of goods.

PATENT PENDING.

CRETONNE USES

How Scraps of This Material May Be Utilized to Advantage.

BY EDNA EGAN.

AFTER hoarding up scraps of cretonne left from window draperies and furniture covers, a clever woman emptied her patch bag one day and from the oddly shaped pieces of cretonne made many pretty articles.

A large roll of rose-sprigged French cretonne furnished material enough to cover a hat box.

To successfully accomplish this, cut a band long enough to cover the sides, with allowance made for turning in at the top and bottom.

With bookbinders' paste join the ends at one corner. Slash the edges so that they will turn neatly and paste in place. Cover the lid in the same manner, and to properly finish the box line with cretonne or plain material, pasting the sides, bottom and top smoothly to the pasteboard foundation. This makes a lovely box in which to keep your best hat, and is one which need not be concealed from view.

From pieces of cretonne woven in an old tapestry design an effective screen for a samovar or coffee urn is fashioned in this manner: From stiff cardboard cut two rectangles and round one end of each. Divide one of the pieces directly in half. Using the cardboard for a pattern, cut the cretonne, neatly stitching the outside and lining together with a whipstitch.

To either side of the large section join a smaller one, forming hinges in three places. This forms an adjustable screen which is an ornament to any table.

From quite a large piece of cretonne was made an oblong sofa cushion. To duplicate this, make a slipover in the usual way and stitch a band of twine, lace or heavy crocheted insertion at either end, four or five inches from the edge of the pillow.

An attractive correspondence folio is made by cutting two oblongs from cardboard. Cover these with cotton batting, using bookbinder's paste. Cover the inside with plain material, matching the predominating color in the cretonne. Cut a piece of cretonne large enough to cover both oblongs and allow material for turning in at the edges, also an inch for the hinge.

Whipstitch the cretonne to the lining, joining the two sections together. On one side fasten three bands of ribbon or tape to hold the sheets of paper in place, and on the other arrange bands dividing the section in half for the envelopes. Fold the halves together and tie shut with tape or ribbon. This will prove an acceptable gift to the traveler, the girl away at school or the woman who boards.

From the tiniest scraps dainty needle cases may be fashioned.

Cut the two cardboard sections any shape you desire, and cover with cotton batting. From cretonne cut the outside covering and the lining from plain silk. Whipstitch the two neatly together. Fashion four leaves for the case from white flannel, notching the edges. Place these between the stiff covers and join with ribbon or silk cord. If desired, the edges of the covers may be bound with antique braid. This produces a particularly effective finish.

SHADES

PRETTY candle shades for the dinner table appeal to every woman, and the housewife who is clever with her needle can make some pretty new ones with little trouble. A wise way is to have separate colored linings, over which lace and lingerie covers may be slipped. The covers may in this way be kept up to the immaculate standard demanded of every table.

Covers of fine white linen, worked in eyelet embroidery, are new and dainty. Buttonholed scallops may also be worked top and bottom, while the owner's monogram, in raised satin stitch, occupies one side.

TRIM WITH FLOWERS

BY MYERS MOORE.

THE most important trimming for gowns at present is flowers made of silk, velvet or satin. Small bits of these materials are folded, twisted and rolled into shapes resembling leaves and blossoms.

These are used in preference to the artificial flowers with their tinted petals, reproducing the natural flower. Chiffon, fine nets and gauzes are also utilized to fashion flowers, not forgetting the roses, which are crocheted from colored wools. When making flowers, consider the material to be trimmed before selecting that for fashioning the flowers. For evening frocks of lace, chiffon, silk or silk mulls, roses of silk or chiffon are in good taste.

Bands of these miniature flowers make effective trimming for the neck and hem of these frocks. If purchased at the shops this variety of trimming will prove very expensive, but when made at home they cost little besides the time spent upon the fashioning. Purchase light green cord to answer for the vine foundation, or narrow green ribbon if preferred. For the chiffon roses, take a strip 12 inches long and 1½ inches wide.

Fold this length through the center, and, starting at one end, roll it loosely round and round itself. When it is all rolled up, wind the end with the raw edges with sewing cotton. Small pieces of green silk are shaped to represent leaves by folding and tacking the corners in place, and these are arranged with the roses at equal intervals along the strip of stem.

The roses and leaves can also be arranged in clusters, wreaths, festoons or in compact little bouquets to catch up draperies or flounces. From tiny roses of silk or satin, buckle pins and other ornaments are made. To fashion a hairpin, take a piece of flexible wire tape two or two and one-half inches in length and cover it with green silk. Select the color you desire the roses to be and allow four inches of half-inch ribbon for each rose.

Fold it lengthwise through the center and roll into a compact little rose, the selvages at the bottom. For each leaf take one inch of green ribbon. Attach these to the bar and place a safety pin to the under side. To form a buckle, for a girdle, cut a foundation from buckram and cover with green ribbon. Make enough tiny roses to have a double row down the center and border either side with leaves.

This makes an effective trimming for the evening gown, especially if the roses are fashioned of a contrasting color.

Sash ends are attractive when trimmed with a double border or fringe made of these tiny silk or satin roses. Larger flowers are made by first forming a center of cotton over which the silk, satin or chiffon is rolled.

Petals are then formed by folding the material and cutting a piece two inches square. Fold the two upper corners over and tack them in place. Run a drawstring through the lower portion of the petal and attach it to the center. When the required number of petals have been tucked to the flower, form a calyx of green silk and attach it to a stem formed of thin wire covered with green silk. Using strong thread, sew the finished rose to this and supply the stem with foliage made of silk or purchased at the milliner's. Buds are fashioned by using folds of silk and shaping them to represent the natural flower.

A pretty bow can be made of one-half yard of velvet ribbon one-half inch in width. A flat bow is formed of two three-inch loops and two ends of the same length are tacked through the center, and from this is hung a loop and two ends. Three small roses and leaves are sewed to the center of the bow. Make the roses from bias strips of soft silk four inches long and one inch wide, folded lengthwise through the center and rolled to form the rose.

Attach a rose to each of the ends hanging from the bow. When selecting the color take particular care to have the tones harmonize. Straw-colored velvet ribbon with the three roses of yellow, pink and lavender silk respectively is a delightful combination of colors.

These articles of roses make lovely gifts for almost any occasion, and you will find it fascinating work. It requires little time and materials can frequently be picked from the scrap bag.

CARD-TABLE MANNERS

BY LUCILLE DAUDET.

IF a neighbor telephones or sends a note, asking you to come over the same evening, or the next, and make up a table at whist, or pinochle, or euchre, or hearts, this does not constitute formal entertaining, yet you should decide promptly, and, having accepted the invitation, keep your engagement. It is only courteous, also, to your host and hostess to dress prettily. This does not mean an evening frock, and neither does it mean that you can run over in your short tweed or rainyday skirt with a flannel shirt waist and linen collar. It means a pretty house dress, a cashmere or silk, with skirt and waist matching.

Your hostess will probably offer some light refreshments, and, if she is up to date, will prepare this in a chafing dish, around which you all gather. If the evening wanes and no refreshments are offered, you need not think that your hosts are inhospitable, nor does this bar you from offering some light refreshments when they return the call. I think that on the whole it is rather better, especially on cold winter nights to offer refreshments, however small the number of players may be.

The booby prize has practically disappeared from the card parlors this winter. A first prize for the best man player and the best woman player is given and then consolation prizes to those who make the next best scores. Sometimes even three prizes are awarded, but two for each sex is sufficient.

Refreshments for the afternoon card party are simple or elaborate, according to the number of guests and the character of the function. At a simple informal gathering tea or coffee or chocolate, with sandwiches or wafers, will be sufficient. For the more formal affairs the hot drinks, bouillon, creamed oysters, Newburgs, salads, ices and cakes are also served. Nuts and candies are passed all afternoon and punch may also be served during the games. The salted nuts and candies should be dry and crisp or they will soil the finger tips and interfere with the card-playing.

WHEN cooking potatoes in their jackets pierce them with the prongs of a silver fork.

THE flavor and texture of potatoes are spoiled if they are allowed to remain in the sun.

PUT the grated rind of an orange and a tablespoonful or two of the juice into the sponge cake. It adds to the flavor.

SIFTED wood ashes put on a damp cloth will remove stains from tinware, agate or crockery.

AN apron made with a bib of table oil-cloth is a great saver to wear when washing dishes.

THE odor of kerosene lamps can be stopped by putting one teaspoonful of fine table salt into each lamp. The salt should be changed once a month.

IF meats are boiled rapidly the fiber is apt to be tough and stringy and the flavor poor. Meats should be cooked by simmering slowly in not too much water.

TO get rid of ants saturate rugs with kerosene, and hang or lay these near the places they infest, and they will soon disappear.

AN asbestos pad or mat is an excellent flatiron rest. This at hand, there is no danger of the cover to the ironing board being scorched.

TO test nutmegs, pick them with a pin. Oil will instantly spread around the puncture if they are good.

IN carving a leg of mutton take hold of the bone end with the left hand and cut away the portion not to be eaten with a firm stroke of the knife. Then cut thin slices down to the bone and loose each slice by putting the knife flat on the bared bone and cutting through. The slicing should gradually change direction, so as to cut always across the grain. After the upper portion is gone carve the undercut in a similar way.

FOR an appetizing salad mince a couple of green peppers, mix them with three tablespoonfuls of chopped chives and serve on white lettuce leaves with French dressing.

TO reserve the color of green vegetables, put them on to cook in boiling water into which a pinch of salt has been dropped.

TABLE silverware, if washed in plenty of hot soap suds and rinsed and dried thoroughly, will require very little cleaning.

TO give an ordinary chest, closet or bureau drawers the virtues of a cedar chest, soak pieces of wood in cedar oil and lay them in the drawers, chest or closet.

PALMS and other foliage plant can be kept clean of scale and other insects by washing the leaves with soapy water and rinsing immediately thereafter.

WHEN two glass tumblers or dishes stick together so that there is danger of breaking in getting them apart, put cold water in the inner one and hold the outer one in warm water, and they will separate at once.

A GREAT many persons find it difficult to wrap up a cake that has a soft frosting without having the frosting stick to the paper. If you stick a few toothpicks into the cake and then wrap it up you will find that the toothpicks will keep up the paper very nicely.

LATONIA DERBY WON BY GOWELL

Distanced Great Britain by 12 Lengths—Only Three Starts—Time Slow—Great Crowd Cheered Winner.

Latonia, Ky., June 14.—Cheered on by a tremendous crowd, made up for the most part of the elite of Kentucky and Ohio society, Gowell, a Kentucky filly, carried the white and green colors of her owner, J. T. Weaver, to victory here today in the twenty-ninth renewal of the classic Latonia derby. Twelve lengths behind the winner, but struggling gamely, came Z. M. Hendrie's crack Canadian colt, Great Britain, while twenty lengths farther back Foundation, a month ago reputed to be Kentucky's greatest three-year-old, came plodding home, badly beaten.

At the drop of the flag to a good start, Foundation shot into what looked to be a commanding lead, but at the five-eighths pole Great Britain was ahead. At the mile Foundation had dropped back, beaten, and by the time the last quarter pole was reached Gowell was within a length of the Hendrie colt.

Turning into the stretch, Jockey Teahan was riding hard and Gowell worked up to even terms. Then for a dozen jumps it was an even battle for the lead, but Great Britain, although struggling to his utmost, could not stand the challenge and Gowell practically galloped under the wire.

The time, 2:33 1-5, is fast considering the fact that the winner was not pressed for victory. The record for the race is 2:30 2-5, made by Governor Gray in 1911.

The winner was a slight favorite over Great Britain in the pari-mutuel betting, paying $4.80 for a $2 bet.

Scouts 4, Foxes 0; Scouts 5, Foxes 5

Jacksonville, Fla., June 14.—Jacksonville won the first game of a double-header here today and tied the second contest after eleven innings of play. Grover, who pitched for the locals, had the visitors at his mercy in the first battle and none of the Foxes were able to make the circuit. The new men on the Jacksonville club showed up well and it looks as though Wilder now has a good infield. The second game was an exciting contest and was called at the end of the seventh inning on account of darkness. Umpire Barr was taken sick on the field and players from both teams umpired the games. Charleston, S. C., June 14.—In a game full of thrilling events, Albany won the last game of the series from Charleston, which went ten innings, 11 to 8. Exception was taken by the crowd to a decision by Pender at second base in the eighth when he called Winston out at second. A crowd of over a thousand waited for him after the game, and despite police protection Pender was struck three times by missiles hurled by the mob. He was escorted to his hotel under heavy police guard.

The contest was one of the most erratic of the season. Both teams hit the ball freely. Eldridge was driven from the box in the third, but the change to Chappelle did not seem to stop the hitting streak of the visitors who won the contest. Although Duggleby was hit hard throughout the game he was allowed to finish the contest.

Hoffman, a recruit, tied the score in the tenth with the first home run of the year on the Charleston grounds. The ball was a terrific drive over the right field fence. A collection was taken up by the fans for him.

The feature of the game, however, was the batting and base running of Powell, who made a triple, a double and a single out of six times at bat. He also stole third and in the tenth stole home.

BIG CASH OFFER FOR WALLY SMITH?

Report Had It That Doves Offered $7,500 for the Local Third Baseman—Callaway Denies It.

In some underground manner, a report circulated in Atlanta Saturday to the effect that the Boston Nationals had made a cash offer of $7,500 for the services of Wallop Smith, the Crackers' big third sacker.

The first intimation was in a telegram received by The Constitution's sporting editor from Birmingham Saturday morning, asking that the rumor that had gotten out there be verified.

When asked about it, President Frank E. Callaway, of the local club, stated that he had not received any offer from any big league club for Smith, that he was not anticipating any or not, he would not say.

Great Individual Play Wins Polo Match for Americans; A "Thriller" All the Way

Meadow Brook Club, Westbury, L. I., June 14.—By the narrow margin of one-quarter of one goal the American polo team won the second and deciding game of the international cup series at the Meadow Brook club this afternoon and thereby retains the trophy for at least another year. The score was 4 1-2 to 4 1-4.

The slight preponderance of the United States four over the English challengers at the end of one hour of the most desperate kind of play is fully indicated in the trifling difference in the scores of the two teams. Polo play of the type shown by both the fours in the crucial game this afternoon has never been seen heretofore in either national or international contests in this country.

Crowd Thrilled.

The spectacle thrilled the crowd of 35,000 persons which "rooted" like a typical Yankee crowd.

Clever team play like that shown by the American four on Tuesday was missing, but in its place was the uninterrupted series of dashing and desperate plays that swayed the spectators to a degree seldom seen at sports of the type of polo.

Never for a moment did the action lag and the game was one continuous spectacle of rushes first in the direction of the American goal, then toward the poles of the Union Jack.

The English showed better team attack than the cup defending four, and their ponies, too, played the game as though they knew the international honor was at stake. It was only by daring flashes of individual play that the Americans were finally able to emerge victorious by a score of 4 1-2 to 4 1-4 goals.

Individual Play.

The substitution of L. E. Stoddard for "Monty" Waterbury, made necessary by the accident to Waterbury on Tuesday, and the moving of "Larry" Waterbury to No. 2, caused a noticeable break in the team play of the Meadowbrook "big four." Neither Waterbury nor Stoddard appeared to get in communication and repeatedly missed the balls fed to them by both Whitney and Milburn.

The offensive rushes of the forwards eventually cut loose with such desperate individual play that they actually overcame the defect of lax team work and won on merit a game which will stand for years as a polo "thriller."

The English four, on the other hand, befitted by a change which brought F. M. Freake into the game in place of Captain A. Noel Edwards.

Seven Thousand Speed Fans Witness Motorcycle Races

Jack Prince's board track motorcycle races at his motordrome on Jackson street opened Saturday afternoon with three scheduled races and a fourth, not on the program, making an instant hit. Seven thousand people saw the races.

The most exciting race of the afternoon was the last— a three-cornered race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta; Harry Elwell, Vancouver, and O. Renel, of Paris, France, the result of which both pleased and disappointed the spectators. Four out of six times a dead heat between Harry Glenn, the favorite, and Renel.

Glenn made a great showing, getting off last at the flying start, but running a dead heat with Renel for the last mile of the 2-mile contest.

In the heat in front of the last mile Glenn shot slightly ahead of the Frenchman and the crowd went wild, but Renel picked up within 10 feet of the finish and crossed the line with the local boy.

There was also a flurry of excitement when Elwell, the third Frenchman, and Jock McNeil, of Edinborough, Scotland, champion of Europe, were lined up against each other in the third qualifying heat of the Atlanta sweepstakes. The Scotchman won the heat at 43.2.

The following are the results:

Amateur, 2 Miles (not scheduled)— C. Glenn, second; time, 1:46 2-5.

Atlanta Sweepstakes, 5 Miles—First rider in each heat and second rider in fastest heat to qualify:

First Heat, 1 Mile—W. Shields, Brooklyn; time, 45 3-5.

Second Heat, 1 Mile—W. Richards, Dallas; time, 44 2-5.

Third Heat, 1 Mile—Jock McNeil, Edinborough, Scotland; time, 43 2-5.

Final, 5 Miles—McNeil; time, 3:39 3-5; Richards, second; Shields, third.

Motordrome Purse, 3 Miles—First heat, 2 miles—W. Richards, Dallas; time, 1:31.

Second Heat, 3 Miles—Morton Grave, Los Angeles; time, 1:31.

Third Heat, 2 Miles—Fred Luther, Fort Worth; time, 1:32 1-5.

Final, 3 Miles—Richards; time, 2:14; Graves, second; Shields, third.

Three-cornered Special Match, 2 Miles—Glenn and Renel, dead heat; time, 1:32; Elwell, third.

The last match will be run off between Glenn and Renel at the next races, which will be held next Tuesday night.

HOW MERCEDES-KNIGHT CAR GOT IN BIG RACE

Faith of Chicago Sportsman Is Justified by the Little Car's Fine Showing.

The little 25-horsepower Mercedes-Knight car which made such a wonderful showing in the Indianapolis 500-mile race has been the subject of more comment among racing drivers and experienced motorists than any other single feature of the contest. Thousands of spectators of the big event had hard work figuring out how a machine with such a small motor was able to average nearly 70 miles an hour for the entire 500 miles and finish ahead of 12 cars of foreign and American manufacture and of much greater power.

The car in question is a stock model throughout and even the gear ratio has not been changed. It was originally sold to a private owner in Belgium. Theodore Pilette, who drove the car at Indianapolis, and who is the Belgian agent for the Mercedes, borrowed the car after the owner had driven it for some 7,000 miles, entered it in the Belgian Grand Prix, finished up among the winners, and then returned the car to the owner.

When the entries began to come in for the Indianapolis race, the speed fever got R. C. Patterson, the well-known Chicago sportsman, who has had considerable experience with the Knight motor through the operation of his Stearns-Knight car. Patterson figured that if a roadster such as his Stearns-Knight would develop over 70 miles an hour, there was no reason a Mercedes-Knight would stand an excellent show of finishing well up among the winners in the 500-mile grind. In his public-spirited way, Patterson cabled to Pilette guaranteeing all expenses of the car and driver to come to this country and enter the contest. Pilette took up Patterson's offer, entered the race and the showing it made is now a matter of history.

MITCHELL CAR CHOSEN GLIDDEN PATHFINDER

George P. Docker, manager of the Mitchell Motor company, of Atlanta (factory Racine, Wisconsin), announces the Mitchell car has been chosen as the official pathfinder for the "1913 Glidden tour" from Minneapolis to Glacier park, Montana.

Incidentally, we might also mention that the "Mitchell Six" has been chosen as official pathfinder for the "Wisconsin State Automobile association, 1913 Liability Tour" for the "Sentinel trophy."

While this latter is a contest of local importance, nevertheless, the entire automobile world is interested.

Erwin Breaks Wrist.

Chicago, June 14.—R. E. Erwin, a catcher on the Brooklyn National league team, suffered a broken wrist today when Meine, Zimmerman, of the Chicago Nationals, slid into him in an attempt to steal home. The injury was to his left arm, so his absence from the game probably will not be permanent.

PA. OIL AND GREASE CO. HAS CARBURETOR AGENCY

The remarkable steps taken in carburetion by The Air-Friction Carburetor company, of Dayton, Ohio, attracted the Pennsylvania Oil and Grease company of this city, to such an extent that they contracted for the entire state of Georgia with Atlanta as a distributing point.

During the recent flood, which caused a $75,000,000 loss, gasoline proved a scarcity. Many cars had been in the path of the waters and their carburetors with the cork floats became water logged. The Air-Friction company lost their offices, but the factory proper was on the third floor and came through the waters to supply the needs. It was then the kerosene carburetor was proven a success. It not only gave more power, a greater mileage, but it also relieved the motor at all speeds, but it also removed all traces of carbon from the motor.

An old Ford car was placed in commission and the motor was run continuously for 96 hours, through mud and water, rain or shine. The car kept up its speed, never stalled, ran a complete set or tires and another set was in such condition as to make them unfit for further service. The fuel used was kerosene and averaged 21 miles to the gallon. The carburetor was not adjusted once and the officers in charge had the best praise for the car and Air-Friction carburetor.

The carburetor is made of aluminum with brass parts. Simplicity and adjustment, the special improvement for easy starting, the metal float and the improved spray nozzle which handles successfully all fuels, it is said, offers to the automobile owners a solution to the high cost of maintenance and gives him a carburetor that is not affected by atmospherical changes.

The Pennsylvania Oil and Grease company has one of the new carburetors in cross sections at their office, 549 Whitehall street, Atlanta, Ga., showing the manner in which the carburetor works.

AMERICAN SONDER FLEET IS PICKED

Boston, June 14.—The fleet of American sonder yachts, from which three defenders of the President Wilson cup against the third German invasion will be selected, is complete with the exception of one boat.

It is expected that ten, possibly eleven, yachts will participate in the elimination events, the entries for which close July 15, and that the races, which will begin August 16 at Marblehead, will be the closest ever sailed in American waters by fleets of boats.

The German elimination races will be held at Kiel next week, and the three challengers are expected to be in Marblehead harbor before the 15th of August.

CAROLINA TENNIS TOURNEY MONDAY

The tennis tournament for the championship of the Carolinas will begin Monday on the courts of the Saga Souci tennis club at Greenville, S. C. A large entry list is already in.

CAN THE DOPE YARN, SAYS JIM CORBETT

The Former Champion Says That Jeffries Was Beaten Fairly and Squarely at Reno.

By James J. Corbet.

New York, June 14.—(Special.)—Bob Fitzsimmons has revived the "pipe" story about Jim Jeffries having been drugged at Reno. At least that is the gist of a story printed over his signature. I doubt if Fitz really thinks Jeff was drugged, as he says, and am surprised he would allow such a statement to be printed with the name attached as the author.

Still there's no telling. Fitz may believe someone did drug Jeff. Remember how he protested that he had been robbed at Coney Island when he lost the title to Jeffries. Bob was "drugged" all right, but not with drugs. It was Jeff's left hand that did the trick and it happened in the second round. Jeff jabbed one of those stiff lefts of his into Fitz's face and the Cornishman went sprawling. That punch took the steam out of him and it was due solely to Jeff's cautious methods that the fight was prolonged until the seventh round. Fitz knew he could have ended it much earlier had he been disposed to press matters.

It is time that the Reno "dope" story was canned for all time. The public is no longer interested. It was good stuff, great newspaper copy for a while when the fight was let the laser down easy—but it has outlived its usefulness. J

Oglethorpe Memorial Indorsed By National Executive Board

The June meeting of the national board of management of the Daughters of the Revolution held in Washington, D. C., June 4, at 10 o'clock a. m., was presided over by Mrs. William Cummings Story, vice president general.

The phenomenal growth of the organization which had reached 100,000 members, is still further emphasized by the fact that 3,000 applications for membership were admitted to the national society, fifty-nine being from Georgia.

The vice president general in charge of organization of chapters, Mrs. Henry L. Mann, requested that all chapters send a list of present officers, giving full names, not initials or husband' name. Address Mrs. Henry L. Mann Memorial Continental hall, Washington, D. C.

This should be attended to at once if the list has not already been sent in, any request from the national society should be complied with immediately.

The organization of two chapters for Georgia, were authorized and appointment also of three chapter regents.

Memorial School Endorsed.

In presenting to the national executive board the new work undertaken by the Georgia Daughters in the Revolution under regency, Mrs Shepherd W. Foster reported the proposed James Edward Oglethorpe memorial approved of the endeavors of the Georgia Daughters to establish this memorial to James Edward Oglethorpe.

It is most gratifying to know that this memorial met with the endorsement of the national board to the extent that upon hearing Mrs. Foster report on motion of Mrs. Hogan, state regent of Maryland, the national board approved of the endeavors of the Georgia Daughters to establish this memorial to James Edward Oglethorpe.

Mrs. Ross Writes Interestingly Of the Election of Mrs. Story

I went to the congress with every confidence in Mrs. Story's victory, for in the mystic meaning of numbers, the very dates in the calendar, the letters in the name, the height of the candidate were fighting for her and the consecrative party.

"Coincidence is the expression of a higher law than we mortals comprehend, and this law dominated the twenty-second congress of the D. A. R. as it does everything which attains to national history in times of crisis. For instance, the number 3 is mystic numerals, signifies "invocation or prayer." Now the dates of the days of this congress were 14, 15, 16, 17, 18. The sum of these is 3. The sum of the digits here is 9 plus 5 equals 14. The sum of these again, is 5 plus 9 equals 9. The date of the election of the president general was the 18th. Here again behold 1 plus 8 equals 9.

Importance of Number.

The number 9 is one of the most wonderful in mathematics. It is used as a basis of accounts by clerks, bookkeepers, etc., in proving long sums in addition. It contains the trinity three times, and the ninth column in the multiplication table is a marvel. The sum of the digits, of every product in it, reveals 9 as the answer. Every number from 1 to 9 with a digit one number higher than the preceding and one figure higher than the multiplier, and with a digit one number higher than the number begins with 1 on the left hand. Next 9x3—27. This begins with 2 on the left, 9x4—36 and so on down the whole column. Space forbids a review of all the wonderful combinations and revelations of this remarkable number. Suffice it to say that the double prayer for change (99) was answered by the number of the continental congress itself, 22, for the meaning of 2 is yea or yes and when it comes in the form of 22 it is equivalent to yea, yea or "yea verily."

Five Letters in Each Name.

Daisy Allen Story has five letters in each name, 18 in all. Now the number 5 means "power."

When Moses brought the children of Israel out of Egypt from beneath Pharoah's bondage they were ordered to march, holding both hands high, 5 fingers on each, symbolic of God's power to deliver them.

Our president general's name is 5 in the third degree, 3 times 5. The little daisy has been adopted as a party insignia had, without intention, 12 petals upon it. Here we have repetition upon a circle, two 5's, 5 plus 5 equals 10 and 10 plus 2 equals 12, meaning power in the second degree or twice over, confirmed by the added number 2 as "yea" again. The daisy is called the star flower. The star in American heraldry is pointed. Each pointed star or pentalpha is recognized, in mystic lore, as a talisman. Goethe makes the evil one confess that he cannot cross a threshold where that "five-toed spell" holds sway. Therefore I predict an era of harmony for the next few years, during which benign, impartial and generous reign of a woman so well endowed to fill the position of her office and personally so gracious in manner.

The very ceiling of Memorial hall smiled down from its twenty-five daisy centers to welcome a sister flower when she had "power" (5) to prevail in answer to the consecrative prayer (9).

HISTORIAN'S REPORT OGLETHORPE CHAPTER

In chronicling the events of 1912 and 1913, I can but call attention to the beautiful enthusiasm and untiring energy of our retiring regent, Mrs. C. J. Edge. To her is due the great work of bringing into closer touch within our organization many members who have long been inactive and indifferent. She has also planned and enlisted the interest of each member at every monthly meeting so that the literary part has been a delightful pleasure to each occasion.

Our chapter now numbers 84 members, gaining 10 new members, losing two by transferring, one being reinstated, and one being dropped by the National Society for non-payment of dues. It is our sad duty to report of the two dear comrades and beloved members who have answered to the last roll call "whose labor is ended," Mrs. A. W. Heuer and Mrs. Sallie Flewellen. Their memory and their influence will ever linger with us, calling us to look more closely and earnestly to our duties each day.

At the suggestion of Miss Nellie Waters, of Albany, she, as chairman of the patriotic song committee, a motion was unanimously carried that we use Dr. Orme's patriotic song at our monthly meetings. We are now giving this plan a trial.

It is always pleasant to recount the kindly deeds that add to the happiness of others, for we can bring warmth to our hearts by remembering the donation of bread and milk to the Free Kindergarten for the spring of 1912 and 1913.

We have contributed to the Memorial Continental Hall each year, also to the Berry school, which is building living monuments for itself everywhere. The Oglethorpe Memorial school at Frederica, St. Simon's Island, was gladly assisted by our chapter.

We contributed to the portrait of Miss Mary Desha, of Kentucky, a real daughter. The portrait to be hung in Continental Memorial Hall. Mrs. J. S. Harrison, chairman of John Clark Interment committee, has succeeded in getting the city council to give a lot in Linnwood cemetery in which to place the body, and we hope the transfer will be made in the near future.

Let me now enumerate the honors that have come to our chapter. Miss A. C. Benning was elected vice president general for Georgia during the year 1912. Mrs. Richard P. Spence was appointed state treasurer and served through the state conference. Mrs. J. S. Harrison is now serving a second term as state editor, which position she beautifully fills.

Mrs. Moffatt Flournoy, of Broken Arrow, presented the Oglethorpe chapter with a beautiful gavel made of wood from the cedar tree under which "Little Prince," the Indian, made a treaty with General Oglethorpe and under which "Little Prince" was buried. It was here he broke his arrows which sealed the treaty.

To our new officers and members, old and new, heart-felt of loving greetings are extended. May each year bring more loving, helpful deeds than the previous ones, until our chapter will be known far and near.

MRS. SHEPHERD FOSTER CALLED TO MONTGOMERY

Mrs. Shepherd W. Foster has been called to Montgomery, Ala., on account of the critical illness of her sister.

This announcement is received with deep sorrow by the many friends of Mrs. Foster, who sympathize most sincerely with her in her hour of anxiety.

The Bitter and the Sweet.

(From The Chicago Record-Herald.)

The skies cannot always be clear, my dear;
The merriest eye may still have its tear;
The sorrow that lurks in your bosom
Like the clouds, when you've wept, will go floating away.
And to babies will be blue that are sullen and gray,
My dear.

It it's going to rain, my dear, it will rain;
The day will not brighten because you complain;
There are times that every good woman must bear;
There are griefs of which every good man has a share;
It is only the fool who has never a care,
My dear.

The skies cannot always be clear, my dear;
Sweets wouldn't be sweet were no bitterness here.
There could never be joy if there never was sorrow,
The sun of today may be laughter to-morrow;
There is gladness as well as black trouble—to borrow,
My dear.

The Star in Far Ceylon.

We left Colombo at sunrise in a motor car and sped along the shining Kelani, alive in the early morning with cadjan boats and women bathing. It is a lovely, undulating valley. We saw coolies trudging out the grain in the paddyfields, svelte arecas and talipot palms smoking with dew, low hills thickly feathered with the dark green plumage of young rubber trees and bevies of brown girls plucking leaves among the sparse tea bushes.

By 9 o'clock we had reached the rest house at Ratnapura, nestled close by Kelani's sullen lip, and were calling loudly for breakfast. The most striking ornament in the dining room was a placard advertising American buckwheat cakes, and our roving eye fell upon a 2-month-old copy of The Kansas City Star, sure signs of the miracle of mere living in our times.

Ratnapura is the capital of the famous gem district, and our host, a wily Cingalese with a prodigious tortoise shell comb in his back hair, showed us some rough stones—rubies, sapphires and cat'seyes—which he had "found" and would part with as a very special favor.

Mrs. Lamar to Return Soon To Take Up Work of Division

The Georgia Daughters of the Confederacy will learn with great pleasure that our state president, Mrs. Walter B. Lamar, is rapidly regaining strength, and will soon return home. She has left the Johns Hopkins hospital, and writes from Atlantic City:

"Daughters of the Confederacy of Georgia—In a few days I shall return to their beloved state after a prolonged absence on account of illness. I wish to thank you all for your interest and sweet sympathy for me since my accident, and your kind postal card shower was a happy thought, most beautifully executed and gave me a most quick push on the road to recovery.

"No business letters have been allowed me, and I have been forced to a passivity in the conduct of your affairs that would be unbearable did I not recognize the importance thereof. It has been a great consolation to me that the constitution of our order provides for each an energy—inability on the part of the president to act,—and that there is, therefore, no reason why things should not go on and on just as well with your other officers.

"The certificates of membership awaiting my signature at my home will be attended to promptly when I return next week.

"I trust you will all help me to hold a successful convention at Moultrie in October.

"With renewed affection and interest in each of you. I am sincerely your friend.

ANNUAL REPORT JULIA JACKSON CHAPTER, C. OF C.

The Julia Jackson chapter held its annual election of officers September 6, 1912, presiding as president Miss Mary Butt Griffith; first vice president, Mr. Derry Stockbridge; second vice president, Miss Florilla Barrow; secretary, Miss Katherine Cheshire; treasurer, Miss Muriel Lenthecum; colorbearer, Mr. Charles Harwell.

The chapter decided to make the care of the Walker monument part of their regular work, but the resignation of Mr. Derry Stockbridge, who lives in the neighborhood of the monument, and the consequent difficulties in carrying out this plan, have for the present cancelled it to abandon this idea. We say for the present, for we feel that the monument erected to commemorate the fall of a gallant defender of Atlanta should not be allowed to be obscured by weeds from the gaze of the few who pass along Glenn street.

About a quarter of a mile from the Walker monument is the one erected by the Confederate veterans to the memory of General McPherson, and a plan has been suggested by which a park in connection with these two will be formed. It will be a simple matter to include them both. Early in the fall the chapter was invited to co-operate in this undertaking, which they gladly consented to do. So far, however, this movement has not taken definite shape.

At Athens Convention.

We were ably represented at the Athens convention by our president, Miss Mary Butt Griffith. We are hoping the next time the Children of the Confederacy conference discussed at this convention and in which our chapter is deeply interested, will be in the Julia Jackson house. Summer is, however, near at hand, and we so far have but little information in regard to so important a matter has been made.

In February we raised much needed funds by a very successful valentine dance.

We sustained a serious loss in the resignation of our able registrar, Mrs. J. J. Simpson, but considered ourselves fortunate in securing Mrs. Paul Rauschenberg consented to act in her place. The office of registrar is a children's office full of difficulties and requiring much patience and perseverance. We are paying dues on a basis of a membership of sixty, and hope to double it next year.

A very pleasant occasion was the presence of the chapter at the confederate reunion and convention, held in Marietta. Mrs. Owens Johnson met us in a car, most beautifully decorated in Confederate flags and colors, and entertained us royally at luncheon.

Files of Veteran.

Our files of the Confederate Veteran have at last been completed, through the kindness of our president, Mrs. Dorothy, and we have added some valuable papers and pictures to our collection.

Early in the spring we visited the Forrest gavels school, and presented to them, for their library, the five southern poets—Lanier, Timrod, Hayne, Poe and Father Ryan—in a beautiful picture, handsomely framed. It was much appreciated, and will go far toward convincing our young people that the South has a literature well worth their study.

A candy pulling held jointly with the Julia Jackson chapter in the Conservatory at the Hanna school netted us $15, in addition to much fun and good fellowship.

By permission of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., we have divided our forces and organized a link chapter between the very young members of the C. of C. and the U. D. C., in what we call the Julia Jackson auxiliary, whose sole work will be the care of the younger C. of C. We will try to increase its membership and keep it amused, interested and instructed in confederate history.

Our position has grown up with us, asked to be included, and other young men asked permission to join. Now a committee has been called to them in and to hold a certain number of meetings in the evening that they may be able to attend.

So inclement was the weather on Memorial day that we called off our order for the tallyho, and for the first time in many years we were not represented in the procession. We, however, sent a handsome wreath, which Mrs. McCarthy presented to the memorial association in the name of the chapter.

We are not as numerous as we would like to be, Madame President, but if quantity is lacking, there can be no doubt as to the quality of this young organization. Our work is constructive, and its effects have reached beyond the limits of the state of Georgia. In all that we are striving to do we hope you will recognize a great desire to be helpful to your organization and to our sacred cause. Respectfully submitted.

WALKER MONUMENT PARK IS SUGGESTED BY MISS HANNA

Miss Elizabeth H. Hanna, directress of the Julia Jackson chapter, Children of the Confederacy, Atlanta, calls attention to the following communication from Washington:

Washington, June 8.—William Schley Howard, today secured Senate assignment to the military committee of the house by introducing a bill to establish a national military park in East Atlanta, around the spot where General Gen. B. McPherson fell in the battle of Atlanta. The bill was referred to the military committee and Mr. Howard hopes to get a favorable report.

"I think the death of General McPherson on the battlefield should be properly commemorated by the federal government," said Mr. Howard today. "McPherson fell on about 160 acres of land surrounding the spot where he fell."

It is a singular coincident that after his death in the battlefield General McPherson was removed to Clyde, Ohio, where his father, Judge Mcpherson's father, from which place he was buried with military honors.

Miss Hanna suggests that we take up the question of a park inclosing the Walker monument and connect it, if possible, with the monument just one inclosing the McPherson monument. She writes: "It is a thing which should be done by the different organizations, and it would be an everlasting disgrace to us if we let the United States authorities beautify and inclose the grounds surrounding the McPherson monument and leave that of General Walker to be hidden by weeds and utterly neglected."

Talk by Miss Sheibley.

At the recent alumnae banquet at Shorter college our gifted state treasurer, Miss Mattie B. Sheibley, of Rome, gave a bright and interesting talk upon the subject, "The Ever Widening Circle."

Our position has grown up with us, asked to be included, and other young men asked permission to join. Now a committee has been called to them in and to hold a certain number of meetings in the evening that they may be able to attend.

So inclement was the weather on Memorial day that we called off our order for the tallyho, and for the first time in many years we were not represented in the procession. We, however, sent a handsome wreath, which Mrs. McCarthy presented to the memorial association in the name of the chapter.

We are not as numerous as we would like to be, Madame President, but if quantity is lacking, there can be no doubt as to the quality of this young organization. Our work is constructive, and its effects have reached beyond the limits of the state of Georgia. In all that we are striving to do we hope you will recognize a great desire to be helpful to your organization and to our sacred cause. Respectfully submitted.

Georgia History of Long Ago Treated in Candler's Volume

Mark Allen Candler, of Atlanta, a son of and former private secretary of the late Governor Allen D. Candler, compiler of the colonial revolutionary and Confederate records of Georgia, has completed a most interesting volume, entitled "Obscure Phases of Georgia History," which has received the unstinted approval of the leading literary critics. The volume deals with certain obscure phases of Georgia history hitherto untouched by any previous writer, and those who have been so fortunate as to read the MSS. unite in saying that the author, delving deep into the mould of old papers in the musty archives of Georgia, has brought to light many a fragrant violet.

Some of the matter contained in the volume have previously appeared in the Magazine of History, New York, and the editor of that publication, Wm. Abbot, declares that Mr. Candler has made a distinct and invaluable contribution to American history. The work also received unbounded praise from May Dixon Thacker, critic for the south of the Broadway Publishing company, New York. Mrs. Thacker is a sister of Rev. Thomas Dixon, author of "The Leopard's Spots," "The Clansman," etc., and has herself gained fame as the authoress of that charming fiction, "The Strength of the Weak." Mr. Candler's work has also been read and indorsed by Lucian L. Knight, the present compiler of Georgia records, whose "Reminiscences of Famous Georgians" and "Historical Landmarks of Georgia" entitle him to speak authoritatively.

Some Interesting Chapters.

One of the chapters of Mr. Candler's work, which is to be brought out by a well known New York publishing house, is an accurate and historically correct account of the origin of the Mississippi question in Georgia, from the close of the revolution to the war of 1812. The author shows that certain questions of domestic economy were divided in sentiment between the federalist and republican faiths, due alone to the geographical location the people of the hill country being generally of the federalist party.

Another chapter of the work gives an accurate review of the rise and decline of the old quaker town of Wrightsborough, in the parish of St. Paul, afterward Richmond, near Columbia and now McDuffie county.

Another chapter of the work reflects the objective point of the Georgia legislature to form the county of Bourbon, on the banks of the Mississippi, about the present site of the city of Natchez. Still another chapter deals with the unsuccessful effort of Georgia to found a county named Houston, located in the Big Bend of the Tennessee river.

Georgia's mysterious Lutheran governor, John Adam Treutlen, his origin, life and public acts, is fully treated in another chapter. The old dead town of Queensboro, in present Jefferson county, is also settled by protestants from the north of Ireland, is fully treated by the author. The beginning of the Yazoo fraud, and the various slave laws are given full scientific treatment. The author also gives some hitherto unpublished facts concerning the politics of the Yazoo fraud, the Georgia and Florida, the Georgia and Alabama and the Georgia and Carolina boundries; and also the activities of the interpid John Clarke on the Tugalo river.

Mr. Candler's Record.

The author, Mark Allen Candler, son of Governor Allen D. Candler, was born at Jonesboro, Ga., and reared at Forty-first Street Presbyterian church Gainesville, Ga. After graduating from the old Gainesville college, he attended the Bingham school, North Carolina, and then graduated from Emory college, the law school of Cumberland university and the University of Cincinnati. He served as clerk to the secretary of state and as private secretary to the governor of Georgia. He also did considerable work on the Georgia records. He has been connected with journalism in Atlanta, Nashville, Mobile and Cincinnati, and at present doing special work for several southern newspapers.

"Obscure Phases of Georgia History" is dedicated by the author of "the noblest Georgian of them all, Allen Daniel Candler, the first compiler of Georgia's records." The work is to be sold by subscription only. It is to be equipped with a full bibliographical apparatus, the author citing all sources of information and giving proof for every statement made. This work will doubtless have a large number of subscribers, covering, as it does, a rich field of historical research hitherto untrodden.

HISTORY OF THE CHAPTER

Mrs. Shepherd W. Foster has been called to Montgomery, Ala., on account of the critical illness of her sister.

This announcement is received with deep sorrow by the many friends of Mrs. Foster, who sympathize most sincerely with her in her hour of anxiety.

Gettysburg Was Not in Vain, Wrote Confederate in 1863; Vivid Description of Battle

Lee's invasion of the north in 1863, when for seven days the mighty Confederate army from Maryland and Pennsylvania, was not in vain, but was one of the greatest accomplishments of the war up to that time, according to the narration of a confederate soldier describing Gettysburg a few weeks later in a letter he wrote from his camp fire in Virginia to his home in Georgia.

The letter, which is one of the most interesting and fascinating civil war records, was written by W. W. White, of Columbus, Ga., a member of McLaw's division, company A, Eighteenth Georgia volunteers. It is now the property of John A. T. White, of 523 Highland avenue, Atlanta, and is a highly prized family treasure.

With the characteristic spirit and determination of the confederate soldiers, White never once admitted in his letter that Gettysburg was a defeat. On the other hand he declared he saw the enemy scattered on the ground in as bad a plight as the enemy that the confederates. And he explained the first retreat of Lee as merely a falling back in order to draw the enemy out into the open. He described vividly the retreat of the yankees before the confederate fire.

Letter Full of Optimism.

Writing thus from the camp in Virginia, in the very midst of the war, the soldier took the optimistic view of the future and the past.

"Some folks are disposed to blame General Lee for attempting to invade the north," he wrote. "They urge that he lost more than he gained. But I think differently. True, he lost a number of men, but which one has not? I am as many or more if he had remained in Virginia?

"I think the chances of success were good. They were not fully realized, it is true, but we will not notice what he gained. In the first place he fed his army for seven days in the enemy's country, which you know is a considerable item. I do not know the exact number of rations which he brought out, but would guess it to be near 2,000 head, and about 5,000 head of beef cattle, besides numbers of wagons and equipage.

"But the most important item of all was carrying the war into their own land and making them feel the horrors. Though the destruction of private property was strictly forbidden by our commanding general, yet the soldiers set at defiance his orders, and robbed and destroyed the bee hives, chickens, hogs and sheep in abundance. Then there are the provisions which were destroyed, which is another considerable item. I do not pretend to compare those things with the loss of human life, but considering that it was the first time that the south had carried the war successfully into the north, even for a short time, the expedition is not to be counted a failure."

Movements Around Gettysburg.

White's letter would cover many columns in a newspaper if printed in full, as it is in great detail, having evidently been written during a period of several days and then dispatched as one long letter. The description of the battle leading up to the conflict at Gettysburg, and the vivid portrayal of the battlefield, which are of particular interest because of the approaching celebration of the fiftieth next July, are here given as White wrote from his camp fire:

"We left camp on the 1st (July), we could distinctly hear the heavy roar of artillery in the direction which Ewell and Hill had gone. We soon learned that Ewell, Hill, who was in front, had met, engaged and was successfully driving the enemy before him. We immediately fell into line, and moved off in the direction of the firing.

"We did not go far before night closed in and with it the firing ceased, still we pressed on, until we arrived near the scene of action, where we rested until about midnight, when again we moved up and took our position in regular battle line, for, though Hill and Ewell had driven the enemy some four miles in the previous evening, still he was in our front.

Confederates Bound Forward.

"All the forenoon of the 2d was devoted to the proper establishment of our lines. About 3 p. m. our division (Mc Laws') moved forward to the battery of twelve heavy guns belonging to the enemy and not more than 300 yards from us. Here we were ordered to fall flat on the ground, where we remained for some time, only sheltered from the shot and shell by some gently rising ground.

"In a short time General Lee determined to silence the yankee battery in our front, and in order to do so caused thirty pieces of our artillery to be brought up and placed in position some 50 or 60 yards in the rear of where our regiment was lying. Soon they opened a galling fire upon the enemy's battery, the yankees replied as rapidly as possible, but their guns were soon silenced by ours, not, however until they had splintered the trees over our heads with grape and shell, making our situation very unpleasant.

"As soon as the yankee guns in our front were silenced a general advance was ordered; with a bound and a yell our men rose to their feet and pressed forward at the double quick or dis. On we went, at a double quick, seemingly eager to meet the enemy in deadly strife.

Yankees Driven Before Fire.

"We had not gone far before we encountered the first line of the enemy, which was hotly engaged with Kershaw's brigade on our right. We advanced to within 50 or 60 yards of them, undiscovered and without firing a gun; when in that distance we opened on them such a volley as broke their line and they fled in great confusion; following on rapidly we continued to pile them up in heaps. We soon reached their second line of infantry, which poured a destructive fire into our ranks, but this did not check our boys in the least; finding it impossible to drive us back, they, too, fled and continued to fire as they went. We kept close at their heels until they reached the foot of the mountain; when it was ascertained that the enemy were attempting to flank us on our left we were immediately ordered to fall back, which we did, though we did not entirely leave the battle field, as we slept about midway from where we commenced the charge to where we commenced to fall back.

"After resting undisturbed for the night, we advanced early the next morning, until within 400 yards of the enemy's lines, where we remained until 4 p. m. All efforts to draw the enemy from their position proving of no avail, General Lee decided to try the effect of his artillery on them; he therefore brought forward 110 pieces of cannon, which were placed on the adjacent hills and were all soon belching forth their life-seeking contents, making the whole vacuum above hideous with their roar and screams. The yankees also opened about the same number, which only increased the unearthly roar

In the Midst of Cannonading.

"During this awful engagement, which lasted three hours, we were lying midway between the contending foes. The shells from each side passing directly over us, which rendered our position very unpleasant. Finding it impossible to draw them from their retreat, General Lee determined to move back to a short distance, hoping thereby to lead the enemy from his strong position, which order we obeyed back to the distance of one-half mile, and took position behind some gently rising ground, but the enemy, so far from following us, commenced himself to retreat.

"I will not return and view the battlefield, which we were now enjoying a season of rest, with the exception of our pickets on the front line. The damage done by either side by the heavy artillery duel was quite small and I have no certain knowledge as to the number killed and wounded on the enemy, but from what I could see I believe that it to have been great. I could see the shells from our guns burst just in the midst of their ranks, scattering them in every direction.

Gettysburg a Field of Blood.

"Now we are on the battle-field—behold the many lifeless forms which are scattered over a large extent of ground, about 2 miles in length and 2 miles in width, over which we had driven the enemy on the evening of the 2d. It would be a sight to those not accustomed to look upon such scenes to gaze at those mangled and bloody bodies. But to the soldier such sight is a common sight and excites but little sympathy.

"Pickets on the track over which our regiment passed in that bloody charge and you may see the yanks lying in heaps of from three to five. You might stand in one position and count from fifteen to forty prostrate and lifeless yanks, besides many wounded and helpless. Such was the fruit of the Eighteenth Georgia. It has been my fortune to be on several battlefields, but on that I saw more dead men lying than on any before. Our loss in this engagement was very heavy. But the loss of the enemy, I am satisfied, was three times that of ours.

The Aftermath in Lee's Camp.

"We will now return to where we left our wounded. We found all quiet, some eating, some sleeping and some few writing letters to their friends. Informing them of the great battle which had been fought. In this position we remained all night, and the next day, expecting the enemy to advance upon us, but they came not. During the day of the 4th our skirmishers still continued a fire on the which was mostly directed by the well-known whirr of a minnie ball, but they all rassed harmlessly by. The darkness which now surrounded our camp was intense, not a thing could be seen, for it never rained harder since the deluge. About midnight we had accertained definitely that the enemy was moving off with the intention of flanking him; he accordingly put his army in motion and by daylight his whole command was on the road and moving back towards Hagerstown, Md., thus ended the siege and series of battles around Gettysburg, Pa."

ACCUSED OF ROBBING FORTY PRESBYTERIANS

Chicago, June 14.—Under indictment on a charge of operating a confidence game, Orlando E. Robinson, former manager of a match company, and his son, Orlando, Jr., are accused of having duped forty members of the Forty-first Street Presbyterian church out of $21,500. They are said to have interested the church people in their scheme to organize a match vending machine company by holding prayer meetings.

The Robinsons were released on $8,000 bail each.

Attorneys for that portion of the Presbyterian congregation which claims it has been swindled, assert that the Robinsons held prayer meetings in their suite in a downtown hotel and at the residences of several of their customers. Ministers, business men, washer women, factory girls, widows and orphans are listed as their alleged victims, whose confidence was gained at the religious meetings.

The Robinsons are said to have operated in thirty-four cities in the same manner.

TEACHING GEORGIA'S BLIND TO SEE

know a discord when a key is struck is sufficient to make a proficient piano tuner and it is a business especially suited to a blind person.

In the girls' department they are taught to weave, knit, embroider and do plain sewing. Some even learn to use the sewing machine. One need not think that a blind person would be able to do much in blending colors, but there are some at the academy who do fancy work in different colors and do it perfectly.

As cooks, the girls often become unusually proficient, and the case of one girl is cited to show how her knowledge proved beneficial not only to herself but to the family of which she is a member.

The mother had been doing the cooking at home, but was taken sick. Word was sent to the academy for the blind daughter to come home and prepare the family meals. She did it three times a day and it is said that she did it well. Cooking for a large family is no small task under any circumstances, as most housewives will tell you, but when it comes to hovering over a hot stove without being able to see what you are doing, that is another matter entirely.

The primary department is probably the most interesting place in the academy, and the sight that greets a visitor there is sure to strike a note of pity. Little tots 6 and 7 years of age, some with other afflictions than mere blindness, sit at their desks and receive their instructions from a blind teacher, Miss Emma Jones. Their work is similar to that of any other kindergarten.

The health of the students at the academy is also neglected and a competent physical instructor is employed to see that they get the proper exercise. The state has provided a well-equipped gymnasium and there are regular hours at which the students receive their instruction, three times each week.

Their food is of the very best, though plain and substantial.

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION GOOD.

The musical end of the academy is one of the biggest features. Three music teachers are employed regularly and at the present time the institution is equipped with six or eight pianos, though an order has been placed for a number of new instruments and they will be delivered within a few days.

That the academy believes in aiding as well as instructing the blind, is shown through the fact that these new pianos were purchased from a blind dealer, J. P. Hamilton, in Rome, Ga. Superintendent Oliphant often refers to the success this man has scored in a business way as an incentive to other blind people to get ahead in the world. Hamilton is a graduate of the academy and studied four years in Europe. He holds the wrestling championship for the state of Michigan and in addition to all of his other achievements is said to be exceedingly wealthy, at least for a blind man.

One of the great needs of the academy for the blind is more and better equipment. The state has already made an appropriation for this, but the institution has not yet been able to get the money. Much makeshift equipment is now used and this, of course, is not inducive to the best possible work.

The state has also appropriated money for an infirmary, a laundry, a pumping plant and a barn, but work has not yet started on these, the plans still being in the hands of the architect.

The present academy when the new equipment is installed will be large enough to care for Georgia's blind children for years to come. At the present time the superintendent Oliphant says there are about 184 blind children in the state between the ages of 6 and 18 years and of that number 164 are in school. Some of those not in school are unteachable, while others are deaf and dumb in addition to being blind, and are in attendance at the school for the deaf. The percentage of the blind population is said to be about 1,400.

One must admit that Georgia has done considerable for her blind people, but there is still more to be done to aid them in offsetting the great disadvantage of which they have been placed, and this can only be done by giving them the best porsible equipment with which to carry on the work at the state academy.

The New Leghorn Hat

THE Leghorn hat has been a favorite for many years, and bids fair to continue its popularity for as many more. This season it is especially well liked. In bygone days the Leghorn was seldom seen except in the large flat form, which is usually associated with the name. Now, however, it is made in various shapes, and this adaptability to many fashions has done much to re-establish it for popular summer wear.

In the center of this page is shown the large picture hat of Leghorn, which is so becoming to many types of faces; it is plainly trimmed and is smart because of its simplicity. At the upper and lower left hand side of the page, small close-fitting Leghorns are shown, while the remaining hats are of medium size. The hats shown on this page are very smart and display the season's latest modes.

RITCHIE RAISES CLASS WEIGHT

Meets Rivers at 134 Pounds Ringside July 4—Lightweights Will Be Busy Boys on That Date.

By JAMES J. CORBETT.
(Former Heavyweight Champion of World. Written Exclusively for The Constitution.)

New York, June 14.—(Special.)—When Willie Ritchie won the lightweight title I prophesied that the new champion would upset the order of things in the way of poundage, and that while he reigned as head of the division, contests involving the title would call for a higher scale than that set by Battling Nelson and religiously adhered to by his successor, Ad Wolgast.

Willie's recent refusal to make 133 ringside for Joe Rivers bears out the prediction made at the time. In spite of the oft-repeated assertions of Manager Billy Nolan that Ritchie is a legitimate 133-pounder, and that he would defend his title of champion at that weight, 134 pounds ringside is the very lowest Willie would agree to scale for Rivers.

While the American scale of weights calls for 133 ringside to govern all bouts for the championship, it has been the custom of champions of former years, barring, of course, our friends Nelson and Wolgast, to ignore that ruling, and it will be hard to find any investigation that the title has changed owners at a higher mark oftener than at 133.

Champion's Right.

Several writers question Ritchie's right to arbitrarily raise the scale after winning at 133, but he only follows a precedent set years ago, and the public is disposed to regard him well within his rights as champion. Nevertheless, his action comes as a surprise at this late day, and is hardly consistent with the many declarations of his intention to defend the title at 133 ringside or not at all.

One cannot blame Joe Rivers for refusing to concede the weight demanded by the champion when he wanted 134 pounds at 3 m. the day of the fight, even though the chance to battle for the title passed with his withdrawal from the match. It is unfair to say that Rivers showed the "yellow," as a number of sporting writers put it. Joe is only a "kid," and has lots of time ahead to go after the championship. To give 4 or 5 pounds away to the clever Ritchie would be suicidal on his part, to my way of thinking.

Ritchie, or rather Billy Nolan, will have his work cut out from now on trying to explain why the weight limit is raised on the little fellows and lowered for men of the McFarland type. One result of Ritchie's demand for a higher scale with Rivers will be that he can no longer hide behind the 133-pound scarecrow and ignore the challenges of such good boxers as McGoorty, Britton and Welsh at a more liberal adjustment of weights than heretofore proposed.

Cross v. Anderson.

Leach Cross, the New York lightweight, is booked to box Bud Anderson at Los Angeles on the Fourth—provided the Ritchie-Rivers fizzle does not result in a general shift in the programs of promoters. And to judge from Mr. young Corbett's form he has already accomplished in his chosen profession, Doctor Cross she's a regular tooth-puller at home) is in for the time of his career.

Cross has it on Anderson in experience only. Tom McCarey, the veteran promoter, recently expressed the opinion that Anderson is the hardest hitter of his weight he has ever seen, and it would be a shame to have him can put the tough "K. O." Brown away for the long sleep must wield a mighty wallop. But Bud has shown he possesses considerable boxing skill.

Reports of the fight with Joe Mandot stated that the clever Joe had little on Bud in matter of science. He can also stand the gaff like a major, which is something many boys that Cross can assimilate successfully. In his many New York engagements Leach has never showed a liking for punishment, and has always resorted to clinching and stalling tactics when an attempt at a hard-and-fast mixup who could stand his artillery fire and hand out a little of the same sort himself.

Leach is a crafty fighter who admits he is after the coin and cares nothing for the glory of the game, and that's why he takes so unnecessary chances. And it is also why many local fans accuse him of cowardice. There's a deep-seated reason for it, when facing an inferior man, and resembles a third rater when opposed to a clever boxer. When one stops to consider how helpless Packey McFarland made him look several years back, and more recently Jack Britton, it is surely inexcusable for Cross Leach a championship possibility.

Good judges favor Anderson's chances in the coming bout. He is young and looks more like the successful fighting machine. Although almost unheard of six months ago he has, with that short pace of his, made rapid strides towards the top and is considered one of the most formidable of the many title aspirants. His defeat of Joe Mandot was probably no great achievement in the light of Joe's recent performances, but just the same it was quite an accomplishment for a youngster, and suggests wonderful possibilities for the future.

Young Shugrue Coming.

Speculation on championship contenders brings me to Young Shugrue, the Jersey City lad, who has been winning with alarming regularity. He appears to be the best boy developed in the east since the days of Gans and Kene. Tommy McFarland came into public favor recently by beating Wolgast, but Shugrue looks a much classier man than the former title-holder. Leach Cross defeated Tommy and a few months ago Shugrue decisively defeated Cross. The Jerseyite performs like a real champion. His defeat of Sammy Robideau, the Philadelphia youngster, who threatened to clean up all the lightweights in the east, strengthened Shugrue's position as the best 133-pound boy in this section of the country.

"The average boxer nowadays is handicapped with 'too much manager.' It is different in Shugrue's case. He is suffering from the lack of one. I don't know who looks after Shugrue, but he is a rare bird as modern managers go. In the hands of a hustler the Jersey lad would be out in California right now training for Ritchie, Rivers or Anderson. He's a cinch to beat Cross anytime they meet, and the best proof of it is Cross' refusal to consider a return battle. Leach is sensible enough to know when he is up against it.

Take a tip from me: Anytime Young Shugrue starts string along with him. He looks good enough right now to go after the title. Since Ritchie has admitted his increase in avoirdupois I can't think of any 133-pounder who figures to beat this fellow. Possibly Bud Anderson may be good enough; we will know better after he has fought Cross.

LONG HAS PASSED DAVE ROBERTSON

In the Race for the Southern League Batting Honors—Is Also the Best Run-Getter in the League.

By Dick Jemison.

Tommy Long, the Crackers' left fielder has wrested the league batting premiership away from Dave Robertson, the Mobile outfielder. Long is hitting at a .369 clip and Robertson is binging them at .358. Kid Elberfeld, the Chattanooga manager is in third place, three points behind Robertson.

Long is also the leading run getter of the league, having dented the pan with his spikes 45 times. Callahan of Nashville is in second place with 38 and Stock of Mobile third with 37.

Long has also made the most number of hits, binging safely 75 times. Sloan of Montgomery and Welchonce of Atlanta are tied for second with 68 hits each and Robertson, of Mobile follows with 67.

The leading batter of each team and him percentage is as follows:

Long (Atlanta) .369; Robertson (Mobile) .358; Elberfeld (Chattanooga) .355; Knisseley (Birmingham) .340; Gribbens (Montgomery) .337; Perry (Nashville) .307; Seabough, (Memphis) .333; Atz (New Orleans) .286.

BIG WHITE TRUCK WILL HAUL NITROGLYCERIN

For hauling nitroglycerin in Oklahoma, where they "shoot" the oil wells about the same as a subway contractor blasts his way through a wall of rock, a White truck, with a special body, has been built for the Eastern Torpedo company, at Bartlesville.

Powerful explosives are not often carried on motor trucks, and their use by the Oklahoma firm in delivering nitro-glycerin on the bad roads of the mid-continental fields is fraught with interesting possibilities, particularly in view of the fact that the customary outfit of light spring wagon, mule and driver periodically go sailing in atoms and are never seen again.

To guard against these disasters a rather novel body has been designed for the pneumatic-tired truck. Across the frame there are placed several cross sills of pine. These sills are spanned with a layer of asbestos to prevent heat from reaching the load. Above the asbestos there is a solid pine floor covered with a thick rubber mat to reduce jolts. Over the mat there is a copper pan covering the entire loading space and having high sides to guard against the fluid reaching the chassis in case of a leak in one of the cans. Dividing the entire loading space are thirty-six, six-inch T-slot inches, into which cans of nitroglycerin are placed. The cells have a wood cover to prevent anything being dropped upon them.

DAUGHTERS OF DIXIE AIDING THE VETERANS

Nashville, Tenn., June 14.—Mrs. Alexander B. White, of Paris, Tenn., president general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, has received an unexpected response to a circular sent to chapters urging their aid for Confederates desiring to attend the Gettysburg reunion. General E. L. Torrence, of Minneapolis, former G. A. R. commander, has responded with two drafts for $125 and $25, respectively to be used in sending veterans of Lee's army.

MOTOR CARS ADMITTED TO YOSEMITE VALLEY

Pope-Hartford Has the Honor of Being First Auto to Enter.

Motorists all over the country will be greatly elated to know that the government authorities have finally been prevailed upon to throw open the famous Yosemite valley in California to automobile traffic. The first car to enter the Yosemite National park since the closing order was issued six years ago was a Pope-Hartford belonging to P. J. Walker, of the California Automobile association. The trip into the valley was made at the special invitation of Major Littlebrandt, superintendent of the park and commanding officer of the regiment stationed there for the purpose of determining proper routes and regulations for automobile traffic. The pathfinder entered the valley on the morning of May 25. When the car drew up at the office of Major Littlebrandt under an escort of United car to enter the Yosemite National park since the closing order was issued six years ago was a Pope-Hartford belonging to P. J. Walker, of the California Automobile association. The trip into the valley was made at the special invitation of Major Littlebrandt, superintendent of the park and commanding officer of the regiment stationed there for the purpose of determining proper routes and regulations for automobile traffic. The pathfinder entered the valley on the morning of May 25. When the car drew up at the office of Major Littlebrandt under an escort of United States cavalry it was greeted by a volley of cheers from a group of visitors and other people who live in the valley.

This scene was a notable one in its way, since it marked the end of a long, stubborn fight of California motorists for the right to enter the Yosemite. Mr. Walker's car has been turned over to the government and will be used under the direction of Major Littlebrandt in making inspection trips preparatory to opening the park to all automobilists.

On the initial trip into the Yosemite valley Jack Fleming, the well-known Pope-Hartford race driver, had the honor of piloting the pathfinder. In the car were some of the most prominent San Francisco newspaper men besides Major Littlebrandt and Mr. Walker. The car ran under army orders from the boundary of the park to the bottom of the valley.

At the boundary of the park it was met by Lieutenant Pegran and a detail of soldiers, who had a barricade of logs across the road to prevent access to the valley by machines which were reported to be planning a night rush for the park. In fact, one car had been at the boundary line for two days awaiting the official opening of the park. Lieutenant Pegran escorted the party to the outpost camp, where he received orders to admit the car to the valley. The speedometer showed a distance of 205 miles at Merced Grove from San Francisco. Leaving the outpost at 6:30 o'clock next morning, the run to the bottom of the valley and up to headquarters was made in 2 hours 37 minutes. This is to be used as the official time in preparing a schedule for the machines. No car will be allowed to make the trip faster than this from Merced Grove.

A complete system of checking signals and time schedules will be arranged during the next few days by Major Littlebrandt, P. J. Walker and other representatives of the motorists.

The Old-Time Fan Picks Out The Faults in Scoring Rules Local Scorers Are Praised

By Charles A. Lamar.

The "Cincinnati Hit" joke vividly recalls the memorable fight waged by Mr. Henry Chadwick, the Father of Baseball, against the silly custom of determining the standing of a pitcher by the number of games won and lost as at present against the number of hits made off his delivery. But nothing doing.

The rule makers were as cold-eyed to the proposition as a German brewer would be at a temperance meeting. How could it be said that a pitcher was "punished" when hit hard and often, if he was not hit safely?

And again, he may have his opponents sewed in a horse blanket and as helpless as wounded doves in a hail storm and yet lose by the dumb work of a bunch of fat-headed behind him. What do you know about that?

The Baseball Trust.

The "Cincinnati Hit" and the foul strike rule were born of commercialism and the baseball populace must be satisfied; in short, it will have to be.

Professional ball has all the "trusts" shielded and backed off the map and the promoters thereof are out for the main chance, first, last and all the time. Their long suit is to bask in the limelight; to dominate and receive the glad hand from the paying teller at the bank. That's what they say, anyway.

The ramifications of scoring a baseball game are often puzzling to the average mind. Sometimes, for example, a fool note is encountered reading as follows: "Out for batting third strike." The rule says it is a "put out" and the catcher should be credited.

And when a pitcher whiffs a batsman and the catcher drops the ball, but recovers in time to wing his man at first, the pitcher is entitled to a strike out. Does he always get it? Not much.

Ban's Wisdom.

Some years ago Mr. Ban Johnson, the Poo-Bah of the American league, announced that put outs should be credited with an assist on the play and there's wisdom with a vengeance.

Let us get down to brass tacks and try to find out "who's what and what's who." Here's the "rule:" "Section 7. Scoring Rules—The number of times, if any, each player assists in putting out an opponent, shall be put down in the sixth column. And an assist should be given each player who handles the ball in aiding in a run-out, or any other play of the kind. EXCEPT THE ONE WHO COMPLETES IT."

Now, the player who completes the play is the one who makes the put out. That being true, how, for the love of Mike, can he be entitled to an assist and a put out, too? Well, you can search me.

It is only just to say, however, that the scoring in Atlanta is remarkably accurate and fair, both to the players and the intelligent baseball public.

It appears at this time that the Philadelphia Nationals under Mr. C. Dooin, of Cincinnati, refuse to "crack" according to the prognostications of the Wise Ikes who write the dope sheets.

On the contrary, the "class" they are showing has brought consternation to all hands. And so it goes. The uncertainty of baseball is the sheet anchor of its popularity.

Some time ago Mr. Christy Mathewson, a great pitcher all right, in one of his contributions to a mush-room syndicate, handed the Phillies an inkwallop good and hard.

But that's alright; albeit, it doesn't set him anything except antagonisms, which belittle baseball. He admitted, though, that the Phillies were entitled to "considerable analysis,"—and maybe he was right.

Anyway, what is needed now is considerable baseball to do Dooin and his allies a bright consumption and lose my "analysis." Wake up, Lige; the swith is open!

Dooin a Real Catcher.

It is one of the contradictions of baseball that Charles Dooin is not ranked with the great catchers of the game. It is largely due to the fact, no doubt, that he has never been connected with a team that copped the bunting. Tough luck all around.

In the opinion of many of the best critics of the game, he is the equal of Kling and Archer at their best and superior to Gibson and Bresnahan, and aside from his ability to bat, he can make the Mission Indian, known as "Big Chief" Myers, look like the sadly overworked and time-honored 30 cents.

Dooin possesses a nimble brain, much pepper, the courage of a Spartan and a throwing arm that's a peach.

And when it comes to corralling the lofty fouls that shot up like meteors and spin around in the circumambient like a pinwheel in a gale, he can play around the whole outfit as a heavy fog surrounds an island.

He can judge them and collar them with deadly accuracy. He makes the hardest kind of chances look easy as the ball falls into his mitt like a brick bat thrown in a well.

And his throwing to the bases can't be excelled by any man in the business. Long may he wave. His team has the class, and if they show the stamina, lookout for equalis.

The prophet, he's a funny gink,
Destroying one's cherished hopes.
He reads all day and rants all night
And in between, he dopes.

He has a pad, likewise a pen;
A bunch of doleful cries;
He lives a short, but useless life,
And then, alas, he dies!

3 CHILDREN CREMATED AND PARENTS INJURED

Shawao, Wis., June 14.—Three children met death, their father, August Neubauer, was fatally burned and the mother seriously hurt as the result of a fire which destroyed the temporary home of the farmer 29 miles east of here today.

The parents were working in a field when a kerosene stove exploded, setting fire to the small house in which the children were sleeping.

Before the father reached the burning building two of the children were dead. He snatched the 16-months-old baby from its burning cradle, but the child died in his arms and the father's clothing was ignited. The mother rushed to the aid of her husband, and she, too, was set on fire.

Philadelphia, June 14.—The police gave out the information today that Philip Francis Kelly, Jr., a broker and widely known clubman, of this city, who was found dead at his home yesterday, had committed suicide by shooting. When Mr. Kelly's death was announced last night it was said he had died from heart disease. Mr. Kelly's firm failed about two years ago. He afterward became a partner in another firm.

ATLANTA CAMERA CLUB FITS OUT FINE ROOMS

A meeting of the Atlanta Camera club was held Tuesday night, June 10, in their own quarters, the entire third floor southeast corner Broad and Alabama streets. The meeting was largely attended. After a short business session and a general discussion of the possibilities before the club in the future, there was a technical talk by Cliff Reckling, of the Hammer Dry Plate company, and also a stereopticon exhibition from members' slides made in various parts of the country.

A number of new members were secured at the close of the meeting.

The location of the club rooms is ideal, being convenient to every car line in the city and centrally located as to be accessible to the majority of members. The rooms have been arranged to fit the needs of the Atlanta Camera club especially, and consist of a large assembly hall with the indirect system of lighting, a portrait studio, a large dark room for general and special developing, a room for enlarging and copying and work rooms for mounting, framing, etc.—in fact, everything that the heart of any amateur camera enthusiast could wish.

TURK CUSHIONS USED FOR THE PEERLESS CARS

It is a curious fact that the Turks, notorious for their laziness, past masters of the art of sitting down, have learned to build the most comfortable seat cushions.

Searching the world for anything that might add to the comfort or satisfaction of purchasers of a high grade motor car, the Peerless Motor Car company has experimented with these Turkish cushion designs and found them more satisfactory than anything previously used.

This year Turkish upholstery will be installed very extensively in Peerless cars. One of the important materials for these cushions is hair clipped from the old cow's tail. This hair from the tails of cattle is mixed with hair from horses' tails, bleached out perfectly white and used for the padding. The cattle hair gives the cushion its softness, and the horse hair its spring and life.

BLOOD DISEASED? THEN ACT QUICKLY

From the blood all the solid tissues take their food and oxygen. Unless the poison is checked it will soon affect the entire body. If you have dry, rough skin, pimples on the face, swollen tonsils, sore throat and the voice husky, if the joints become swollen and stiff; if you have eczema, if you feel all stuffed up; if you cough, right, think right, work right—don't delay. Write at once to Dr. Brown, 905 Arch St., Philadelphia, for a Blood Searcher, and for a bottle of BROWN'S BLOOD TRETMENT, $2 —enough to last a month. Sold in Atlanta by the Jacobs' Pharmacy.

SAVANNAH SOCIAL NEWS

Savannah, Ga., June 14.—(Special Correspondence.)—The usual number of Savannah people are planning to spend the summer abroad, some having already sailed for long stays in Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Myers are spending some weeks in Germany. Miss Fanny Phillips sailed today on the Caledonia and will travel abroad three months. About the middle of July, Miss America Woodberry will leave with a party of Savannah and Atlanta friends for an interesting tour. They will sail from New York July 16, and will go by the southern route to Naples, visiting Algiers and the Azores on the way. They will spend some time in southern Europe, traveling through Italy and France, and will then go north to Holland and Belgium, will take the trip up the Rhine and will visit England and Scotland, spending some time in the old English towns. They will return by way of Canada, allowing enough time to visit Quebec and to take the trip through the Thousand Islands, and will return to New York by the Hudson river route. In the party will be from Savannah Miss Woodberry, Miss Phoebe Elliott, Miss Walter Perker, Miss Leila Gaillard and Miss Ida Floyd, from Atlanta, Miss Sturgis and Miss Jeter, and from Talulah Miss Sarah White. Mrs. Mahow, of Athens, may also make the trip. Mrs. Frank P. Day, who is now visiting in Atlanta, will sail with a party of friends for Europe in July. Mrs. William Low has already returned to her home in England for the summer. Miss Kate Osborne is traveling with a party of New York friends, having sailed June 10, and Miss Lucy Calhoun arrived this week in England to spend the summer abroad. Mrs. Rosenbaum, the Misses Rosenbaum, Mr. Sidney Rosenbaum and Mrs. A. Vetaburg, accompanied by a niece from St. Louis, will leave the end of July to spend two years in Geneva. Major and Mrs. James R. Sheldon, Mr. James R. Sheldon, Jr., and Miss Irene Withers will leave the middle of July for Saunderstown, R. I., where they will spend the summer. Major Sheldon and Mr. Sheldon will return from New Haven after the Yale-Harvard rowing races, and will be in Savannah for two or three weeks before going north.

The marriage of Miss Mary Ellen Todd to Mr. Eugene M. Lokey took place yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride. It was a very quiet ceremony. The Rev. Dr. W. L. Pickard, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated. The bride was unattended. Mr. Lokey's best man was Mr. Harry Norton. The bride's mother, Mrs. L. L. Todd, of Keller, Ga., and her sister, Mrs. William A. Cook, of Tampa, with her young daughter, Miss Cook, were present at the wedding. The bride-groom has traveling suit, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Lokey took the steamer for Boston. They will go on to New York and will sail from there for Bermuda. They expect to be away about three weeks, and will reside for the summer on their return at 321 West Waldburg street. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Todd, of Keller county, but has lived in Savannah for about six years. She is a graduate of the Savannah hospital and has been engaged in welfare work for a number of years. Mr. Lokey is with the Bell Telephone company. Mr. Lokey has been for several years on the reportorial staff of a local paper.

"MRS. WILLIAM PERCY."

To Mrs. Fitzpatrick.

Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, Publisher—Dear Madame: An Atlanta friend sent me your paper of one day's edition, June 4, sparkling with the bright faces of the distinguished women of your state. To me the most beautiful of all was the picture of that bride of fifty years.

Like a gentle and tender touch upon my heart she brought to me present and life-like visions of the sacred past. Oh, what stirring scenes and experiences awakened to offe who, in marriage to a son of Georgia, left her northern home in 1860 and was transported south into a new world and fairly grew into the truest of southerners and soul. The "Old Virginia spirit" experience she mentions was my own and I had to journey 30 miles to my husband's grandmother, to show her how much I was in love, dont you know my heart throbbed and I felt over this stupendous bridge of time and space a sister to that dear woman. She presented so beautifully by the side of her partner of these many years. Mine own served his fellow man as a physician and is gone to his reward for a life well spent. I linger here in a world of memories—though the world around me is changing every day. I wish you success in your great work. Sincerely yours,

ADELAIDE KNOWLES,
Formerly of Blakely, Ga.

The edition has received a liberal patronage from the business interests throughout the state, making it quite certain that the venture will prove a gratifying financial success. The Post extends its warmest congratulations to the club women for their splendid enterprise."

Miss Gray Is Honorary President Political Science Association

Miss Helen Gray, of Atlanta, has been made honorary president of the Southern Woman's Economic and Political Science association, which she founded last October in New Orleans.

The association makes its aim and purpose the study of economic and political science, with a view of equipping women for their growing responsibility. That the women of the south generally feel the import of such study has been manifested in the ranks of organized women of many states. At the last convention of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs in Atlanta a new committee was added to those of the federation in that named for the purpose of establishing in all federated clubs a department for the study of political science, this appointment following directly upon the suggestion of Mrs. John K. Ottley, who embodied the suggestion in an address she made at the luncheon given by the City Federation of Women's Clubs to the federated women of Georgia when there were six hundred guests present.

When Mrs. Ottley reached the point in her brief address where this suggestion was made her hearers, in their anxiety to hear what she had to say, insisted that she stand in a chair, that they might see us well as hear her. All these little incidents become significant history in this, the most stirring time of woman's evolution.

The Association's Purpose.

The Southern Woman's Economic and Political Science association had its beginning in June, 1912, when a paper entitled "Economics and Politics as They Concern the Southern Woman," was read before a body of intellectual women, in the drawing room of Miss Grace King, the historian and short-story writer.

Von Herrmann Gives Some Terse Facts Regarding Atlanta Weather for 35 Years

No adequate account of the climate of Atlanta has heretofore been written, although the weather bureau has maintained an observatory in the city for thirty-five years. At length, however, a comprehensive report has been prepared by C. F. von Herrmann, at present in charge of the local office of the weather bureau, which will be submitted for publication to the department at Washington. It is highly important to the commercial and social interests of Atlanta, probably the most progressive and rapidly growing city in the south, that correct ideas prevail in regard to its excellent climate, for naturally some misconception exists in the minds of many people in regard to the climate of a place situated in the cotton belt at the low latitude of 33 degrees, the influence of altitude and of proximity to the ocean and the gulf are apt to be overlooked and the climate supposed to be much warmer and more oppressive in summer than is really the case. In fact, however, extremes of temperature such as are commonplace and common in many cities far to the north are not experienced at Atlanta, and many northern people will be surprised to learn that during the warm waves of summer the temperature at Atlanta rarely rises above 90 degrees on the average for only three consecutive days at a time, and has reached 100 degrees but once during the past thirty-five years. The following review of Mr. von Herrmann's pamphlet will be of interest to many of our readers.

Factors Controlling Climate.

The altitude of a place is one of the most potent factors in modifying its climate. Over a level plain the temperature decreases in close approximation to about 1 degree Fahr. for every 300 feet increase in elevation. Mountains thus thrust themselves up into this region of cooler air and thus lower the temperature of their surroundings. The annual mean temperature at Atlanta is nearly 3 degrees lower than at Augusta, which is nearly on the same latitude but 900 feet lower. Again mountains have a strong influence on rainfall by forcing the ascension of moist air currents flowing up their slopes and so causing condensation of moisture. The moisture from the Atlantic ocean receives its rainfall are the neighboring ocean but the maximum amount is received in the northern mountainous portion of the state. The influence of the surrounding country is favorable for active circulation and the consequent large amount of oxygen forest tends to equalize temperatures.

The frequency of storms at Atlanta is not great, only about 20 per cent of all disturbances observed in the United States. Thus a direct influence on the weather at Atlanta. Our worst weather is usually associated with areas of low barometric pressure that move from the west gulf states to the southern states northeastward toward New England. During the summer months general storms are rare and the precipitation is almost entirely due to local thunderstorms.

General Climatic Characteristics.

In general we at Atlanta may be said to be located in the moisture portion of the warm temperate zone. The seasonal and annual temperature averages range between comparatively narrow limits; the monthly mean temperature is never below freezing and seldom above 80 degrees. The winters are mild but not without frequent periods of cold, bracing weather or cold waves which impart renewed vitality and vigor to the human frame. On rare occasions the temperature at Atlanta has fallen a few degrees below freezing.

The precipitation is abundant and uniformly distributed throughout the year, but long periods of dry, pleasant weather are common during autumn. The worst weather is usually experienced during January and February, which have the maximum amount of snowfall. The wind movement at Atlanta is larger than average hourly velocity exceeds ten miles an hour, and maximum velocities exceeding sixty miles an hour are registered occasionally. Probably the most characteristic feature of the weather at Atlanta during summer are the cool nights, which make the heat of the day altogether bearable. It is doubtful whether any deaths by sunstroke have ever occurred in the city.

Temperature of Atlanta.

The annual mean temperature at Atlanta is 60.9 degrees, which is about 3.5 degrees higher than the mean for the whole northern hemisphere. The winter mean is 44 degrees, and the coldest month is January, with a mean of 42.3 degrees. The temperature on the average, therefore, does not fall below the freezing point during winter, in fact, a monthly mean temperature below 32 degrees has never been recorded since observations were begun, the nearest approach being the figures of 34.4 degrees in February, 1895. Sometimes the mean temperatures during the winter months exceed 50 degrees, as for example during the remarkably mild winter of 1889-1890, when the following mean temperatures were recorded at Atlanta, viz: December, 1889, mean 57 degrees; January, 1890, 51 degrees, and February, 58 degrees. The mean for that winter was 10 degrees above the normal.

The mean summer temperature is 77 degrees. July is the warmest month, having a normal temperature of nearly 79 degrees. The highest monthly mean on record was 82 in August, 1876. As a rule, however, monthly mean temperatures above 80 degrees are infrequent. The mean temperature of spring is 60.8 degrees, or almost exactly the same as the annual mean, while that for autumn is 61.8 degrees, or 1 degree higher.

Extremes of Temperature.

We do not feel mean temperatures and from the point of view of personal comfort, especially in large cities, there is a greater interest in the extremes of temperature. During the most severe cold waves the temperature at Atlanta occasionally falls below zero, but this has occurred only three times during the past thirty-five years, namely on January 6, 1884, when 3 degree below zero was recklistered, on January 13, 1886, when 2 degrees below and on February 13, 1899 when the remarkably low minimum temperature of 8 degrees below zero was registered during what was probably the most severe cold wave ever experienced in the United States. On the average the probable lowest temperatures for winter are: December, 19 degrees; January, 15 degrees, and February, 17 degrees. The mean minimum temperature for winter is 36 degrees.

The average number of days on which the minimum is below 32 degrees occur in November is 2; in December, 10; in January, 12; in February 9, and in March 4. The longest continuous period of freezing weather occurred in 1893-94, when the minimum temperatures were below freezing from January 8 to January 22, with a minimum during the period of 8 degrees.

The altitude of the station prevents any unusually high summer temperatures, in spite of the low latitude of the city. A maximum of 100 degrees has been recorded but once, namely on July 15, 1857. Temperatures above 90 degrees begin to be registered in May and may continue to early October. The probable highest temperatures for the summer months are 93 degrees for June, 97 degrees for July and 93 degrees for August. The longest period during which the maximum temperature has remained daily above 90 degrees occurred in 1890, June 22 to July 6—fifteen days with a maximum of 98 degrees.

The extreme range in temperature at Atlanta is thus 108 degrees. At most cities in the interior the annual range of extremes is much greater as the following examples will show. At Pittsburg, Pa., the range is from a maximum of 103 degrees to a minimum of 20 degrees below zero, at St. Louis from 107 degrees to 22 below zero, at St. Paul from 104 degrees to 41 degrees below zero, and at Huron, S. D., from 108 degrees to 43 degrees below zero.

Duration of the Crop Season.

From the point of view of agricultural interests the dates of the last killing frosts in spring and of the first in autumn are of considerable practical importance as marking the limit of the growing season for most of the staple crops, although it is true that in the vicinity of Atlanta several market crops may be grown all winter with slight protection. The average date of the last killing frost in spring at Atlanta is March 24, and of the first in autumn November 5. The average length of the growing season is, therefore, 225 days. The earliest date on which the last killing frost occured was February 15, in 1880, and the last date April 17, in 1905. The earliest date for the first killing frost in fall was October 11, in 1906, and the latest November 29, in 1889.

Precipitation Abundant.

At Atlanta the rainfall is abundant and well distributed throughout the year. The annual average is slightly under 50 inches. There has, however, been a progressive decrease in the annual normal rainfall from a maximum of 52 inches in 1889 (average for 22 years) to a minimum of 49 inches in 1911 (average for 46 years). The former period on the whole was characterized by years of precipitation, annual total having exceeded 60 inches five times and fallen below 40 inches but twice between 1858 and 1889, while during the period from 1889 to 1911 the total exceeded 60 inches but once (in 1912) and was below 40 inches seven times. The largest amount received during any year was 64.98 inches, in 1885, closely followed by 62.99 inches in 1912, and the least was 32.13 inches, in 1904, showing the extreme variability in the element of precipitation. The remarkable contrast between the two continuous periods of twelve months from July 1, 1910 to June 30, 1911, and from July 1, 1911 to June 30, 1912, is worthy of special mention. The total rainfall for the first period was 28.11 inches, the smallest amount ever registered for any twelve months, while the amount for the second period was 64.62 inches, which nearly equals the maximum record for any year.

The monthly averages fluctuate from a maximum of 5.60 inches in March, to a minimum of 2.41 inches in October. There are two periods of maximum and two periods of minimum rainfall during the year. The winter and early spring months are generally wet, and as temperatures are low the soil remains saturated with moisture. The rains of this period are associated with the largest barometric depressions which cross the central valley or southern states. These are general in character, and the many weather offenders several days at a time. There is a slight diminution in the quantity of rainfall received during May and June, which is followed by a secondary maximum in summer, but the precipitation is now convectional, that is the result of local thunderstorms; the showers are of brief duration and the soil dries out rapidly. Autumn is the driest season of the year, with an average rainfall of only 9 inches for September, October and November. This is the most pleasant season of the year, temperatures are moderate and the weather remains fine for many weeks in succession.

The fluctuations in the amount of precipitation received during months of the same name is often quite extreme. In July, for example, the total rainfall was 14 inches in 1887, but only 0.56 in 1881; in January, 1883, the total was 15.82 inches, but in January, 1876, only 1.25. The extremes are: January, 1884, with 15.82 inches, and October, 1881, with 0.02 inch.

Heaviest Rainfall on Record.

Heavy rains exceeding 2.80 inches in 24 hours have occurred in every month of the year. The largest amount ever received in 24 hours was 7.36 inches in March, 1886. It was practically continuous for the 24 hours, and in intensity was probably exceeded by the fall of 5.52 inches on March 14-15, 1912, in 17 hours. The maximum rate on record was 4.30 inches in 1 hours and 51 minutes on July 23, 1898.

An important feature of the rainfall in large cities is the excessive rate for briefer intervals of time of an hour or less, since adequate means must be provided for carrying away the storm waters as quickly as possible to avoid damage to property and interruption of traffic. The pamphlet by Mr. von Herrmann contains an extended table of the largest amounts of precipitation in successive periods of 5, 10, 15 and 30 minutes and 1 and 2 hours covering the period of 17 years from 1896 to 1912, which should prove extremely useful to engineers. The following interesting data are selected. The maximum rainfall in 10 minutes was 1.40 inch in March, 1901; in 30 minutes 1.80 in April, 1908; in 1 hour 2.40 in April, 1908, and in 2 hours 4.30 in July, 1898.

Number of Rainy Days.

The normal number of days with appreciable rainfall during the year is 124. The largest number of rainy days occurs in August, 13, followed by July and January with 12, the least number in October, 7, followed by September and November with 9. The average interval between rains is three days in August, four days in July and increases to five days in October and November.

The duration of rainy periods—that is of consecutive days with 0.01 inch or more of precipitation—is a matter of considerable interest to people dwelling in large cities, for a prolonged period of gloomy, wet weather often seriously interrupts business, interferes with amusements and affects the health and spirits of the people. At Atlanta rainy periods of 6 days duration or more are not frequent. Atlanta has experienced four times rainy spells of 12 days' duration and two times rainy spells of 11 days' duration and three times of 10 days' duration during the past thirty-five years.

The maximum amount of rainfall received during the longer spells of rainy weather were as follows:

In 1886, March 26 to 31, six days, rainfall 10.41 inches.

In 1880, March 8 to 16, nine days, with 10.32 inches.

In 1887, July 27 to August 4, nine days, with 12.54 inches.

Periods of Drought.

The long periods of dry pleasant weather in autumn at Atlanta are worthy of note, and are rather unexpected in a region having a normal annual rainfall of nearly 50 inches well distributed throughout the year. The longest period of consecutive dry days was that which prevailed in 1884, from September 13 to October 21, or 39 days. There have been 61 periods of dry weather at Atlanta of 15 days' duration or more, 16 during the first 5 months of the year, 6 during the summer months, and 35 in autumn.

It is frequently the case that a period of drought, entire absence of rain, is preceded and followed by very light precipitation, having hardly an appreciable influence on vegetation, and the duration of such periods may be correctly extended to include dates with small amounts of precipitation if, in the aggregate, they do not exceed, say, half the normal. The following are the most remarkable records for Atlanta.

1904—September 5 to November 1, 58 days; 1 day with .10 inch.

1886—August 10 to October 21, 72 days; 9 days with a total of .28 inch.

1886—September 13 to November 11, 60 days; 7 days with a total of .43 inch.

1891—September 14 to November 9; 57 days; 6 days with total of .18 inch.

Snowfall—1880-1912.

Snowfall is a climatic feature of little importance at Atlanta. The average amount unmelted for winter is only 3.6 inches, most of which falls during January and February. The total for a year has reached a depth of one foot only once during the past twenty-two years, namely, in 1893. Snow is comparatively so rare and remains on the ground so short a time that when a good fall does occur grown people, as well as children, enter heartily into the enjoyment of it. The largest amount ever received during the period from 1890 to 1912 in 24 hours was 7.5 inches on January 28, 1904.

On two occasions snow has remained on the ground unmelted for ten days, namely, in January, 1893, and in February, 1895. The latest date when measurable snow occurred was April 2d, 1910 (1.3 inches), and the earliest November 26-27, 1912 (2.2 inches).

Relative Humidity.

The annual average of relative humidity is 66. The minimum amount of moisture is recorded in April, relative humidity for the month 60 per cent, and the maximum in August, relative humidity 71 per cent. During the clear weather with northwesterly winds at the autumnal season of the year the relative humidity frequently falls below 20 per cent. Owing to the active atmospheric circulation at Atlanta, high relative humidity is comparatively rarely a source of personal discomfort at Atlanta.

Sunshine and Cloudiness.

The maximum sunshine is received in June, when the average is 65 per cent of the possible amount; there is a slight decrease during the summer months, followed by a secondary maximum of 66 per cent in October. The least amount of sunshine is received in December and January.

The average number of clear days during the year is 123; of partly cloudy days 120, and cloudy days 112.

Average Wind Velocity.

During every month of the year except September the prevailing direction of the wind is northwest, while in September it is almost from the opposite direction, namely from the east. Nearly 62 per cent of the winds at Atlanta are from the west or northwest, and 16 per cent from the east.

The average hourly wind velocity is 11.4 miles. The highest hourly velocity occurs at 3 p. m. and lowest at 7 a. m. and 7 p. m.

The maximum velocity of the wind is the number of miles recorded during a brief period of five minutes, when the velocity is greatest, multiplied by 12, in order to express the velocity in the usual terms, miles per hour. A velocity exceeding 40 miles an hour is termed a gale. During the past 34 years or 408 months, gales of 40 miles an hour or more have occurred 141 times, exceeding 50 miles an hour 29 times, and exceeding 60 miles an hour 5 times. The highest velocity registered was 66 miles from the northwest, on March 24, 1909.

Thunder Storms.

Thunder storms are frequent at Atlanta and may occur in any month of the year, but they have a maximum frequency in July, August and June, ranking in the Capital City as compared with other points.

During the past 15 years was 58 storms, the greatest number recorded was 74, in 1906. During July the average number of thunder storms is 14, during August 12, during June 10. Destructive hail rarely accompanied thunder storms in Atlanta, although one remarkably severe storm deserves to be mentioned, that of October 14, 1909.

Besides the general sketch outlined above, Mr. von Herrmann's pamphlet contains thirty tables of climatic data for Atlanta which should prove a mine of information for those who seek to know more fully the conditions prevailing in the Capital City as compared with other points.

The mean hourly temperatures have been computed for the 5-year period, 1892-1896. On the average the highest temperature for the day occurs at 2 p. m., but during June, July and August the temperatures at 1 and 2 p. m. are equally high, and in August even slightly higher. The lowest temperature occurs at 5 a. m. for the year, but in January, November and December as late as 7 a. m. The mean range for the day is 13.4 degrees.

The curve showing the annual march of temperature is based on records from 1868 to 1912. The simplest equation of the curve, which gives the monthly mean temperatures at Atlanta with a fair degree of accuracy, is T equals 16.1 plus 10 (sin 270 degrees plus x degrees) in which T is expressed in Centigrade degrees, and x is a variable angle, which is zero for January, 30 degrees for February, 60 degrees for March, etc.

The decrease in the normal is very marked; the 24-year normal (1889) is 52.78 inches; the 47-year normal (1911) is 48.92 inches. This does not necessarily indicate a permanent decrease in the annual rainfall, but shows that the period is not long enough to establish the true normal, which will probably be close to 50 inches.

Art Needs of Atlanta Shown In Girls' High School Course

The very practical principle in education, which is every day being better understood, of relating the curriculum of any school to the life and surroundings of the students, finds good illustration in the art course of the Girls' High school, where the sculpture and paintings in Greece and Rome are not allowed to crowd out the art needs of Atlanta, Ga., and the universal principles of art are being taught with no remote end in view, but with consideration for their actual working value to the students and their community.

Of special interest at this time when the schools are in the limelight is the following explanation by Miss Minna McLeod Stark, head of the art department of the High school, of what the art course there intends, and she appends a synopsis of one lesson in illustration on "City Planning" with special reference to Atlanta:

It is often thought that the study of art is solely for the purpose of making artists—that its aim is correct drawing or technical skill. That, at best, it is not a necessary part of education, but a luxurious adjunct, a polish or finish to education.

The General Impression.

And we cannot wonder at this conception when we remember that art education until quite recently took cognizance of nothing but picture-making, and that in many colleges and schools the copying of pictures (a travesty upon the teaching of art) was common.

Now art, as Mr. Edward Howard Griggs has recently said to us in his lectures here, is not for art's sake, but for "supremely for life's sake." And the aim of the work in the high school is not to make artists of the talented ones, but to give appreciation and the joy of creative ability to all.

A course of study that is designed to cultivate judgment, good taste, discrimination as to good and bad form in every detail of life, and to stimulate the inventive power, is worthy, so educators believe, of a place of no mean importance in the curriculum of the high school.

And in detail this is a course of study that is concerned with how we build one house, what we wear, what we purchase, and has to do with good arrangement in all things.

Arrangement is perhaps the keynote, and drills and exercises as to beautiful arrangements in line, dark and light, and color develop the appreciation of these three elements of art, and make the application of the principles of design possible to the larger interests of life. For instance, the same judgment and discrimination cultivated by the arrangement of a flower or landscape form within a certain space, by the placement of the spiritual and subordinate masses with relation to each other; the choice of the beautiful rather than the commonplace in lines in fact by the study of the whole—this same judgment may be used to advantage equally in the planning of the building or of a home, the decoration of an interior, the choice of a costume. The same principles underlie the planning of any work of art, whether in the realm of music, literature or the space arts, Mr. Dow says. "Choosing is the field of art." The finer the choice the more subtle and less commonplace the result.

It may interest the Atlanta public to know something of the work attempted in the high school this year, and the following lesson on city planning is given somewhat in detail.

City Planning.

Importance of city planning.

Purpose—(Consistent development, municipal economy, sanitation, aesthetic results.)

Site of a city (of primary importance, but cannot of itself make or mar a city.)

Plan of a city.

(a) Checkerboard or gridiron (a. Maximum area for building sites; b. Simplicity of design.)

(b) Diagonal avenues (Economy of communication, vistas of beauty, open squares and spaces, beautiful and sanitary.)

(c) Concentric plan (No congestion, convenience.)

Combination of three plans best.

Civic center, plaza, square, common, green, etc.

Railroad station should be dignified and emphasized—streets should focus to it. Has replaced gate of old feudal walled city.

City building and city keeping follows, the latter including city sanitation, smoke nuisance, overhead wires, street cleaning, garbage, unsightly and objectionable signs, parks, playgrounds.

The final item is "What We Need in Atlanta."

The Heart of the Tree.

What does he plant who plants a tree?
He plants the friend of the sun and sky.
He plants the flag of the breezes free!
The shaft of beauty towering high.
He plants a home to heart and hearth—
For song and mother-croon of bird
In husband and happy twilight heard—
The treble of heaven's harmony.
These things he plants who plants a tree.

What does he plant who plants a tree?
He plants ever-shade and ever-rain
And seed and bud of days to be,
And years that flush and fade again;
He plants the glory of the plain;
He plants the forest's heritage;
The harvest of a coming age;
The joy that unborn eyes shall see—
These things he plants who plants a tree.

What does he plant who plants a tree?
He plants a shelter strong and wood,
In love of home and loyalty
And fair-cast thought of civic good—
He plants the smile of neighborhood.
Who in the hollow of his hand
Holds still the growth of our land—
A nation's growth from sea to sea
Stirs in his heart who plants a tree.

RENTING SERVICE

OUR LOCATION, our help, our facilities in general are such that we can probably give better service in the renting of property than any other agency in the city.

We endeavor to be most courteous with every one with whom we deal. We try in every way to keep right up with all the details that are daily arising; the repair work that is done through our office is done without a cent of profit to us; we endeavor to collect rent as promptly as possible without oppression, and we feel like that no agency is more successful in keeping houses tenanted. Give us a trial.

AUGUSTA'S SOCIAL SIDE

Augusta, Ga., June 14.—(Special Correspondence.)—The marriage of Miss Jimmie Jackson Verdery and Mr. Raymond Murphy took place Wednesday morning at Grace Methodist church, North Augusta, in the presence of a large number of friends, the pastor, Rev. C. E. Peele officiating. Mr. Fred Farrar and Mr. Charles Wood acted as ushers, and there were no other attendants, the bride and groom entering together. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Murphy left for a trip to New York.

One of the charming social events of the week was the annual banquet given by the juniors of the Tubman high school to the graduating class. This girls' high school is one of Augusta's objects of special pride and this annual event is one of rare charm to the fortunate ones who are present. The class colors, blue and gold, prevailed in all the decorations, blue corn flowers and golden-hued daisies, and class ribbons and streamers being used with artistic effect. Miss Maude Dilworth, president of junior class, presided and acted as toast master. A delightful banquet brightened with witty speeches, bright music and rare good humor was greatly enjoyed.

Mrs. James Jeffries entertained with bridge Tuesday afternoon in compliment to Miss Emmie Harrison, of Jacksonville, who is visiting relatives in Augusta prior to her marriage, which has been announced for June 21, when Mrs. Jeffries will be matron of honor to the bride. The rooms were prettily decorated with June blossoms, and a delightful luncheon followed the game. The prize for the high score, an embroidered sofa pillow, was won by Mrs. L. Davis, the consolation was drawn by Mrs. Jordan Sanford, and Mrs. Thomas Stafford received a blue enamel pin for low score. Miss Harrison was presented with a hand-embroidered marquisette blouse as a souvenir of the occasion.

Mr. Henry Grubb, of Atlanta, and Miss Iris Browne, were married Tuesday evening at the rectory of St. Paul Episcopal church by Rev. Geo. Sherwood Whipple. Prior to the departure of the train for Atlanta, an informal reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Z. D. Miller, after which they left for the groom's home.

A very attractive entertainment by the kindergarten and primary children at John Milledge school for the benefit of the children's home was enjoyed by a large audience at the school auditorium on Wednesday evening.

Miss May Hallahan announces the approaching marriage of her sister, Miss Elizabeth Isadore Hallahan, to Mr. John Kennedy, of Charleston, on June 25 at Charlotte, N. C. The bride to be will leave next week for Charleston to visit her sister, Mrs. Richmond Chadwick, with whom she will be until after the wedding.

The marriage of Miss Jennie Crawford and Mr. Julian Harrison, of Norfolk, attracted a large company of friends of the bride to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Crawford, on Milledge Road, on The Hill. Many hundreds of roses, sweet peas and carnations carried out the pink color scheme in the decorations. The marriage altar in the reception hall, improvised of palms, smilax and June blossoms, was lighted by candles and was a bower of beauty. To the strains of orchestral music the bridal party entered. First, Mrs. Clarence Salsbury, Jr., of Tron or more than two years, Pidelia Renky with Mr. Frank Ehrlick, of Columbia as the bride entered with her father, receiving the gifts of the guests at the altar, Father Lonergan, of the Sacred Heart church, officiated. An elaborate supper was served, and dancing was enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Morrison left for a northern trip after which they will make their home in Norfolk.

Miss Maselle Neely has returned from a delightful visit to New Jersey friends.

Mrs. Charles Phinizy, Mrs. James McGowan, Miss Louise Mays and Miss Margaret McGowan motored to Athens Thursday to be the guests during commencement of Mrs. Billups Phinizy.

Mrs. Carlton Hillyer went up to Atlanta the past week to be present at the wedding of Miss Van Epps and Mr. Hanson.

Ensign and Mrs. Conrad Ridgely are visiting Captain and Mrs. Randolph Ridgely in the Hill. Ensign Ridgely's marriage to Miss Julia Hays Douglass was a beautiful event of June 2 in Washington city.

Mrs. Fielding Wallace and children have gone to Flat Rock for the summer.

Mrs. Reuben Clark, of Savannah, with her attractive young daughter, Miss Josephine Clark, and her two sons, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James N. Jackson for the Jackson-Alexander wedding next week.

The engagement is announced by Mr. and Mrs. Bernard H. Herndon of their daughter, Miss Mary Zena, to Mr. Simeon D. Morris, Jr., of Augusta, the marriage to occur at Powelton, Ga., on June 25.

Miss Emily Kella Rowland and Mr. Harry Cort Morgan, of Americus, Ga., were married Tuesday afternoon at the Greene Street Presbyterian church, the pastor, Rev. W. M. McFerrin, officiating. Mr. Newton Sage, of Augusta, and Mr. Willard Flynn, of Savannah, were ushers. After the wedding the bridal couple left for Americus to visit the family of the groom and take part in a family reunion. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Morgan will be at home to their friends at 1248 Elbert street.

Mr. H. Ray Hair, of this city, was married Thursday morning at Greer, S. C., to Miss Lelia Townsend, of that place, formerly resided in Augusta, where she has many friends who will welcome her return to her old home.

Miss Gladys Sturgis, of Warrenton, who was the guest of Miss Annie Elise Barksdale during the past week, was entertained on Thursday evening with a lake party by Miss Barksdale and Mr. Henry Carter.

The bridge party enjoyed a delightful dance Tuesday evening which was the first of a series to be given in the near future. The chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. Clark Jack, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Stafford.

JAPAN WILL RENEW ARBITRATION TREATY

Gladdened by News, Bryan Paints Picture of World at Peace.

Washington, June 14.—Viscount Chinda, the Japanese ambassador, has advised Secretary Bryan that Japan is willing to renew for another period of five years her arbitration treaty with the United States which expires by limitation August 24.

Secretary Bryan, making the announcement today, said he expected the senate would ratify the new arbitration treaties already signed with Great Britain and other countries despite the opposition against them. No date for signing the Japanese renewal has been determined.

The senatorial opposition originally was voiced by Senator Chamberlain, who insisted that in renewing a treaty with Great Britain specific expressions should be made to remove the Panama canal tolls controversy from the field of arbitration. The question of arbitrating with Japan the issue of the California alien land law also has been a subject of discussion among senators opposed to renewing that arbitration treaty.

President Wilson has had frequent conferences over the arbitration treaties with senators. Members of the foreign relations committee have been frequent callers at Secretary Bryan's office. Mr. Bryan today would not say upon what representations he based his expectation that the administration treaties would receive senatorial approval.

At elaborate and impressive Flag day exercises conducted in the great court of the interior department and presided over by Secretary Lane, Secretary of State Bryan delivered an oration upon the "American Flag and World Peace." Mr. Bryan vividly pictured his ideal of a world of friendly nations among which war would have no place. He believed that long steps now were being taken to insure universal peace, and added:

"Only the morning I received assurances from the empire of Japan of its desire to renew with the United States its great arbitration treaty. Before next Christmas I am expecting that at least twenty-five nations will have concluded with this country treaties by the terms of which controversies which cannot be adjusted otherwise may be referred to a disinterested international tribunal, thus practically insuring peace and justice between us and all of the great nations of the world.

"Love is a stronger force than fear. It is the proud boast of this nation that our flag is loved, rather than feared. Peace is promoted as is strong as a great thought. Great thoughts are the controlling forces of the world, and love is the basis of every great thought."

Concluding in an apotheosis to the flag, Secretary Bryan compared the ideals represented respectively by Christ and Pilate.

"The power of the unarmed man of Galilee is seen when the flag and the man will dare to put it on the side of Pilate, who was the embodiment of force. Let us always make it a symbol of its great purpose—a purpose pure enough to be represented by such a flag.

"The ideals of this nation shall be greater than its armament and it always shall represent a cause so just that it will bear the blessings of Almighty God."

"Nothing comparable to it, in fact, was ever gotten out in any city in any state in the United States.

A Foreign Expression.

Mr. Julius Petterson, of Quitman, Ga., a native of Denmark, wrote in his native language a letter to the editor of the woman's edition, and sent a poem for publication.

THE SONG OF THE SOUTH.

"Our southland is charming and bright
As a maiden her life's work beginning,
Whose eyes are sparkling and winning,
And her grace a source of delight.
"Thou art glorious and generous and kind,
The poets thy praises are singing,
Great memories around thee are clinging
That are cherished and stored in our mind."

The Keynote of Modern Business Is "Service"

YOUNG MEN WANT EXPENSE MONEY

Every Man Who Starts in Life Thinks More of His Ex-Work—Ideas Change.

By S. A. Lesman.

"I was thinking the other day," remarked Mr. Lesman, "how funny it is that most young fellows, when they start off on the journey of life, are more interested in their expense accounts than in the amount of work they are going to do and the results they are going to get."

"This business of living is really a whole lot like a trip that a salesman takes. When a boy baby is born, he is virtually taking on the job. His firm has to pay his expenses for fifteen or twenty years, until the prospects he has have time to develop. That's just like a house starting a new man on the road. You always have to advance some expense money before the orders begin to come in. Well, when the boy goes out to begin to get results to show for the expense money he has had advanced to him, he thinks always at first of how he can get the expense money. He spends the greater part of his time just adjusting how he can make the firm come across with some larger expense appropriations. But generally his salesmanager (Old Mother Nature by name) says: 'Look here, young man. You've got to show me something. If you can do enough service to make it worth my while, I'll increase your expense account some, but I ain't going to give all the profits of the business away for nothing just to keep a lot of fellows like you riding around the country.'

"Then the fellow buckles down to work, if he is any good, and the first thing you know he is drawing down an expense account that is worth bragging about. But when he sees where he can place this money the firm lets him have to better advantage, and when the time comes for him to come in off the road and do a big fine job and report, if he can show something worth while that he did on the trip, why there ain't any kick coming about the excess. If he can show a pretty fair sort of a son or daughter as a result of his living, he gets a star against his name on the honor list for the convention. You see, here's the origin of the expression, 'Stars in my crown.'"

Salesman Designs Smart Letterhead to Advise His Coming.

G. W. Brownlee, who is well known amongst the grocery men of the city as a salesman for the McCord-Stewart Co., is always right on the job when it comes to snappy, progressive ideas in his line of work. His latest move in this respect is the designing of a letterhead which he is using as an advance card with good results. The picture of himself, hurrying to meet his trade, is such a clever impress the desired fact thoroughly upon the recipient, and thus serve the purpose of forcing them to remember the advice an dwait for the coming of the date and Mr. Brownlee.

YOUNG NEW YORK MAN MAKING GOOD HERE

About three months ago Joe Levy, whose home is in New York, came to Atlanta to accept a position as city salesman with the Balser, Goldberg Co., wholesale grocers, and has made good with a rush and has won a name for himself as a hustling, aggressive young salesman, who goes out and gets results.

Mr. Levy is delighted with Atlanta as a place to live and work in and states that although his home is still in New York, that he has no intention of returning there to live, and prefers Atlanta as a cleaner, brighter and better place for a young man with ambitious prospects.

J. B. Burrus, representing the John Deere Plow company, and L. W. Laudick, of the Syracuse Plow company, both special salesmen with the John Deere Plow company, of Atlanta, spent last week in Albany, Ga., where they found some fine business, and also report excellent crop conditions.

HARRISON TELLS A FISHY FISH STORY

Popular Salesman Contributes One of Those Famous Letters to Columns This Week.

Montgomery, Ala., June 8, 1913.—Editor Constitution Firing Line: Yes, I had trouble getting The Constitution this morning. It looked as though everybody in Montgomery wanted a Constitution, but I got one at last, and, say, that old paper is some paper. On my way back to the hotel I met one of my Montgomery friends. He pointed at The Constitution and said to a gentleman who was with him: "That is an Atlanta man now, going to get full of Atlanta spirit for next week. These Atlanta fellows can't do a thing if they don't have one of their home papers on Sunday."

I told him the reason why we had to have an Atlanta paper was because there were so many happenings in the south now that the only way to keep up with them was to get a "sure enough" newspaper.

Don't tell my house, but I went fishing one day last week while in south Alabama, and, say, you have never seen fish. I went with a friend of mine, and we caught enough for all the families in that town to have fish dinner that night. I think the population of the town is about 1,500, so you know it took lots of fish. Now, I was only out half a day, so don't know what would have happened if I had fished the whole day. I couldn't spare more than half a day, though, for business is too good. The doctor tells me that I am ruining the shape of my beautiful handwriting so much, and I told him I couldn't help it, for it looked like everyone in Alabama was waiting for the S. P. Richard company's line of school supplies, etc., and that is the line I happen to have just now. Gee, but it is great to have a merchant say to you:

"Harrison, I am sure glad to see you. Go on and open up and let me know when you are ready for me to come to the sample room."

Well that is the way it has been in most towns this trip. It is as hot as blue blazes down here, but who cares so long as he is getting good business?

I will be in Atlanta for next Sunday. This is a nice enough old town, and the Gay-Tenney hotel is certainly a hotel, but there is no place on earth like home, is there? Your friend,

ED. S. HARRISON.

BUYS GOOD BILL SHOES.

Merchant Spends Two Days and Orders Red Seal Shoes.

E. J. Adair, a prominent merchant of Clinton, S. C., was a visitor in Atlanta last Wednesday and Thursday. Mr. Adair was accompanied by Mrs. Adair and took a comprehensive survey of Atlanta's wholesale business, as far as was possible in the time at his disposal.

He bought a nice bill of Red Seal shoes from the J. K. Orr Shoe company, totaling about $3,500. This bill is to be distributed amongst Mr. Adair's three stores, which are located at Clinton, Chester and Abbeville, S. C.

AN APPRECIATION.

To the Retail Grocers of the City by President Camp.

President Camp, of the Retail Grocers and Butchers' association, wishes to express his appreciation of the way in which the grocers of Atlanta observed the early closing agreement last Wednesday. This was the first early closing day for the season since the first Wednesday was celebrated by the big parade. It was natural for all to close on that day, but the real test came last week when there was no special fuss made over the closing. President Camp has a number of the members of the association took a run around town and found that every grocer who had agreed to close had done so—which means practically every one in the city. Mr. Camp expressed himself as highly pleased and stated that it was the most satisfactory closing the city had ever experienced.

The ins this week with Dougherty-Little-Redwine company are J. O. Castlebury, J. M. McKibbin, A. S. Wilkins and W. F. Seay.

Some Workers

FOR THE

Southern Merchants' Covention

ATLANTA---TWO WEEKS---AUGUST 4-16

No. 1—BOLLING H. JONES

"When the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association met to pick officers and choose committees for the Southern Merchants' convention, which will be held here for the first two weeks in August, they were exceptionally happy in their choice of a chairman for the convention. When they selected Bolling H. Jones to fill this important position they chose one of the most enthusiastic workers for the growth and prosperity of Atlanta that can be found in the ranks of the manufacturers of the city. Mr. Jones is secretary and treasurer of the Atlanta Stove works, and he is a gentleman who has long been known as a good one to approach for support for anything which is of real value to the city.

Mr. Jones was recently asked what he thought of the prospects for a large attendance of merchants at the convention, and stated that he was confident that at least 4,000 would respond to the invitations sent out.

"When we held the first of these conventions, one year ago, last February," said Mr. Jones, "we had about 300 visiting merchants who registered. At the second one, held last August, the books showed a total of over 2,000 who registered, and I see no reason why we should not reach the 4,000 mark this year. You see every merchant who comes here is pleasantly surprised at the reception accorded him and the opportunities presented for a good time, both in an amusement and business way. He goes home and tells his neighboring merchants about the good results of his visit, and the result is that practically every man who comes once, comes again and brings others with him."

"Do you hear any reports from your own traveling men as to what the merchants are saying about it?"

"Yes, they are all talking about it. In fact I have been a little surprised at the amount of comment that the announcement of the coming convention in the papers has caused. I was on a trip through parts of the territory myself recently, and I was questioned on the subject by practically every business man I met. I had intended broaching the matter myself in convention, but found this was unnecessary, as they all started talking about it without any urging on my part.

"Another strong factor which will bring many of the merchants here is that they are making all the traveling men to make a point of extending a personal invitation to all they call on between now and then. The influence that a traveling man exerts is much larger than some people suppose, and they will undoubtedly persuade many merchants who were not here last year, and who had not contemplated coming this year, to come and see for themselves. And everyone who comes once, will come again, you may be sure, if it is within the realm of possibility.

"Then we are going to see that they have a good time while they are here. We are not going to take all their time with amusements and entertainments, because we know they will want enough time to do their business, but we will have enough stunts to make them talk for some time to come. You know, I am also chairman of the committee on program, and while we haven't gone far enough with our arrangements to give the full program out, you can take my word for it, that it will be an interesting document when it is completed.

"Yes, you may safely say for me that we are going to have a corking good convention, and also that personally I shall be surprised if we don't go over the 4,000 mark we have set for ourselves."

Manager W. H. Stents, of the John Deere Plow company, returned yesterday from Moline, Ill., where he had been attending the conference of the John Deere company, managers from all over the country.

E. E. Shver, with the Consolidated Paper company, came in Saturday after a good week. C. S. Harley will spend Sunday in Anderson, S. C., and J. C. Mason will be at his home in Cuthbert, Ga.

BELSINGER WRITES ABOUT TENNESSEE

Atlanta Paper Company Salesman Tells of Celebration When Three Atlanta Boys Meet.

Johnson City, Tenn., June 13, 1913.—Editor Constitution Firing Line and Fellow Three Masters: A peculiar thing happened in Johnson City one day last week. This kind of occurrence doesn't come very often up here and it is uncommon enough to warrant comment, so will give it to you as it happened and you can judge for yourselves. If there are more Atlanta salesmen in Tennessee than I think, maybe the firms they represent will correct my impressions in the matter.

To cut a long story short, there were in this city last week three Atlanta salesmen at one and the same time. They were Albert Levy, with the Rosenfeld company; R. V. Goodson, with the Frank E. Block company, and myself, with the Atlanta Paper company. We are the best in the business, etc., but you know that of course. We were having a talkfest and agreed that this was the first time known since the genius Atlanta salesman was first discovered that three of us had ever been in one town in Tennessee at one and the same time. Of course, this does not sound interesting to you boys from the cotton sections, but believe me, it sure is some event with me, and if I had anything else besides expense money I sure would celebrate.

You other fellows ought to come up here. The water is fine, and we never have any bad seasons in this part of the country. They raise everything here from hard coal to hard customers. But don't let anything deter you next season when the lone wants to know where he can broaden out. Just tell him about this North Pole country; come on up and try your luck, and I stand ready at my headquarters, Harriman, Tenn., to give you all of the assistance within my power. I have no particular hopes of having this published, but if it is, you can just say that Goodson, Levy and Belsinger are some proud to have met each and are trying to tell you about it. We have blazed the way. Now, the rest of you come a-running and get some of the bacon gravy.

If you need any assistance to get your bosses persuaded to put a man up here, either of them will be glad to call on him and sell him some dope on the situation. Aufwiedersehen.

S. P. BELSINGER

In The Trenches

P. H. Jeter, with John Silvey & Co., reported at the house with a good bunch of orders yesterday. This was the first time Mr. Jeter had been in for a month or so and he showed a splendid total of business for the month.

W. B. Carlton, of the Capital City Tobacco company, was telling an interesting story last week. He stated that the true reason for the death of one of the world's great men, which occurred recently, was because his doctor had forbidden him to smoke, but he was so fond of El Principe de Gales cigars that he simply couldn't do without them.

J. D. O'Rear, with the J. D. Frazier company, is evidently making records these days. While the chile man was in the office last Friday orders came in from that totaling over two cars loads of McGrain alone, to say nothing of the other goods he had sold.

Sales Manager Holt, of the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, spent Friday in Macon. He said the reason he made for that he knew he could sell a big bill there and he just had to get all he could these days in order to keep ahead of President Hancock in their race for supremacy.

Harry I. Maisby, of the Maisby Machinery company, leaves the city Wednesday for Nashville on a business trip. He expects to be back in a week or two.

Manager Lynn Fort, of the Lamar & Rankin Drug company, is rapidly recovering from his recent attack of typhoid fever, but has not yet been able to leave the house, but expects to be in the office again the early part of this week.

W. E. Rhumph, covering South Carolina for the Warren Manufacturing company, is leading the company's sales forces for June sales to date.

Mack Hirshberg, of the Hirshberg company, has now been out for about three weeks on his maiden trip as a salesman. The house gets good reports from him and he is headed for Florida, doing nice business.

W. H. Eckford, representing the M. C. Kiser company in Mississippi, has been in the city for the past week and expects to stay here for another week or ten days before returning to his territory with new samples and a fresh supply of the Atlanta spirit.

Ed S. Harrison, with the S. P. Richards company, has been enjoying extra good business for the past two weeks or so. His house says that this accounts for the optimistic letter appearing in these columns today from his pen. Whatever the reason it is a good letter and it is also good business—so everything is good.

R. L. Ezell, bookkeeper for the Gramling-Spalding company, is at present on his vacation. He left for New York, to be gone about ten days, and went by boat by way of Savannah.

Ragan-Malone company report that their men are sending in some nice orders for fall delliveries and that the outlook for business in the coming fall season is very bright.

W. O. Beard, woh sells Premium Brand shoes for the Gramling-Spalding company and whose headquarters are at Doerun, Ga., is at present on his vacation, which will last about two weeks.

INVITATION TO TRAVELING MEN

The Merchants and Manufacturers' Association invites every traveling salesman representing the wholesale and manufacturing houses of Atlanta to be present at a Dutch luncheon which will be given in the assembly hall of the Piedmont hotel on Saturday, June 21, at 7 p. m. Important business is to be discussed at this meeting and all salesmen are urged to be present.

News of the U. C. T. Fulton Council 505

Brother George P. Byrd is still on the wing and states that the folks "simply will buy his flour."

Brother T. E. Mathews writes from North Carolina that he is sending in several applications in the near future.

Brother G. L. McBrien, of American Can company, was last heard from in Charlotte, N. C. Brother McBrien cannot get into the city very often, but he is a mighty good U. C. T.

Brother H. D. Barber, the Arbuckle coffee man, has just returned to the city with his family to spend the summer here, after raising chickens on his country ranch all winter.

Brother Homer H. Williams, with the Spalding Grocery company, of Griffin, Ga., is some hustler. He was visiting in Atlanta last Sunday.

Brother H. J. McDonnell, a member of the firm of Brower Candy company, took a special trip on the West Point road the past week. As usual, he was talking U. C. T. mighty strong.

The United Commercial Travelers are asked not to forget that there is a fine for every meeting of Fulton 505 at which there are no initiations. Come to every meeting. There is always something doing.

U. C. T. members who read this column are notified that they may expect to see a good letter here from Secretary P. S. Brownlee on the subject of what the U. C. T. stands for next week.

TWO U. C. T. COUNCILS WILL MEET TOGETHER

Atlanta, 18, and Fulton, 505, Will Hold Combination Meet Next Saturday.

The two local councils of the United Commercial Travelers announce that they will hold a combination meeting in the Knights of Pythias hall, in the Kiser building, next Saturday at 8 p. m. This will be a monster meeting and every member is strongly urged to be present. There are a number of new members to initiate and they will probably total about twenty-five. It is a special meeting for the initiation of out-of-town members, and the boys are asked to come and help to make the newcomers into the councils have an interesting time. Also to have one themselves.

NOTES OF THE CITY SALESMEN

The secretary's report, read at the meeting yesterday, shows that the City Salesmen's association is in a prosperous and active condition. We hope to make this our banner year in good works, and, with the proper support from the members, President H. L. Simmons, will have an administration that all will feel very proud of.

Fellow Salesmen of Atlanta: The City Salesman's association needs you. Put your shoulder to the wheel and help us up the hill.

The jobbers and manufacturers are all signing the agreement to close for the week of our excursion. We desire to thank our employers and also the retail merchants for their co-operation in our efforts to make this the best trip we ever had.

Brother Eugene Cuints will shortly leave for Europe to look after a large inheritance. We congratulate him on his good fortune and trust that he will soon return safely home, and be among his Atlanta friends again.

Most of the boys report good business on their trade and all look on conditions as being very encouraging.

The men on the road report good crop prospects and everybody is anticipating a large fall business.

Vice President M. L. Minor, of the Warren Manufacturing company, is a proud and busy man these days. He is getting out some of the best designs in neckwear that have been on the market for some time. They are mostly Bulgarian and Cubist in design, and the only difficulty experienced is in getting the silk rapidly enough to supply the demand.

ARE YOU AN EFFICIENT STORE-KEEPER?

There's the rub. Do you know where the leaks are? How can you find 'em? Can you put your finger on the trouble-spot? Do you snicker at selling-psychology or do you study it?

This is the line of talk and query on the Program of the MERCHANTS' CONVENTION. Plain, practical common sense American talk for the store-keeper who wants to better the breed and to make more money. Are you in this class?

First two weeks of August is the time, Atlanta the place. Plenty of opportunity for everything you'll want to do—recreation, sightseeing, meeting the folks, hearing the speeches, getting together, and playing around. Fix things NOW so as to be here and have a big time.

We're looking for you. Atlanta's looking for you.

MERCHANTS AND MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION

Of Interest to Autoists

Motoring Department. The Constitution: Although I have put plenty of heavy grease in the housing, the gears of my touring car make a most annoying growl. How can I silence them? Is this noise caused because the pinions are possibly meshed either too deep or shallow?—Reader.

If the pinion gears are meshed too tight there will be a heavy grinding noise or growl. On the other hand, if they are not close enough there will be more or less of a loose rattle, especially in changing gears. With a steady load, however, this condition would not be so noticeable. The pinion gears usually cause the trouble, especially when a new one is placed in mesh with an old one. The old gears wear themselves to a fixed position, and when a new gear is installed there is more or less unavoidable noise. This, of course, would be greatly aggravated by meshing too tightly. They should be adjusted to a point where there is no lost motion, but perfect freedom of action. This adjustment should not be made at one point only, but the gears should be revolved to make sure that there is freedom of action at all points in turning. Heavy grease will help to silence the noise, but will not prevent it if the adjustment is not correct.

Motoring department. The Constitution: Now that the 1913 racing season has been inaugurated with the Indianapolis contest a fortnight ago, these questions are timely and of general interest: (1) Is a narrow or wide tread best adapted for racing? (2) Why have racing cars got their frames and oftentimes the motor castings bored full of holes? (3) What kind of oiling systems are used on most speed cars? (4) Why do they have but one ring to the piston, and in such cases is the piston turned for one ring or for as many as are generally used?—T. R. Barbee.

(1) The tread is usually standard but it is sometimes narrowed to save weight. There is a limit to this, however, as a car with a narrow tread is more likely to turn over. Then again, in such a construction there is less resistance in going ahead and also slightly less resistance in turning corners. (2) This is done to save weight as much as possible. (3) Usually the same lubricating system is used as on regular stock cars. A slight difference is undoubted ly made in the amount of oil pumped, on account of the high speed required of the motor proportionately more oil is also required. This is accomplished by increasing the efficiency of the oil feed pump. The racing motor must be practically flooded with oil in order to prevent the scoring of the cylinders and bearings. (4) The piston traveling at high speed expands considerably and also holds compression with less packing. The additional rings increase the friction and tend to rob the cylinder wall of proper lubrication at such high speeds. In special motors the piston is usually tuned to suit the conditions required.

Motoring Department. The Constitution: When running slowly the motor of my car hits regularly on but two of the cylinders, while the other two will be dead. It does not throttle down, but runs efficiently on high speed. The ignition I find in good condition, and a large spark is obtained from the magneto at about fifty revolutions per minute. Can you tell me what the trouble with my motor is? PERPLEXED.

It seems that your trouble is due to an air leak at either the valves, the manifold gaskets, or the manifold itself. Sometimes a slight sand hole in the manifold will cause this trouble. Would suggest that you make sure that the valves are seated properly, inspecting carefully for an air leak. If is assumed that you have tried various carburetor adjustments in order to eliminate the trouble. From what you said it would appear that a slightly richer mixture is wanted. If there is a slight air leak this would impoverish the mixture at slow engine speed.

Motoring Department. The Constitution: I understand that it is absolutely necessary to determine which is the positive and which the negative wire in order to connect them properly to the starting or lighting generator. Some batteries have a minus mark for the negative and a plus mark denoting the positive wires, but mine are not so marked. How am I to tell which is which? AMATEUR.

A simple way to determine the poles of a battery is to immerse the wires leading from the battery or other source in a glass of salt water. Shortly bubbles will form in the negative side. Although some batteries are identified as you mention, others have their positive painted red and the negative black.

Motoring Department. The Constitution: I have heard that ordinary coal oil may be used in a motor with efficient results; in fact, I am told that when mixed with one-half gasoline it works better than gasoline alone does. One of my friends uses crude oil with but a small amount of gasoline and claims that he gets more power out of his stationary engine than when he used gasoline solely. Before I start experimenting, please advise me. P. L. F. RODNET.

A mixture of coal oil and gasoline may work satisfactorily in stationary and very slow speed motors, but it will not do for automobile motors where high speed is desired. The use of crude oil produces a slow burning mixture which answers the purpose well in stationary type of motors. Using crude oil with gasoline in an ordinary motor will foul the cylinders unless same are designed for its use.

Motoring Department. The Constitution: When the motor of my car is not running, gasoline drips from the carburetor. Can you suggest a way to curtail this waste? C. R. S.

The float in the carburetor may be adjusted too high, causing the valve to unseat or the float valve may not seat properly and it would be best to replace the old valve. Very often, however, the valve may be reseated by tapping slightly, making sure to center the valve pin at the time.

Motoring Department. The Constitution: A pair of electric lamps were recently fitted to my car, but the light is unsatisfactory, that is, I cannot keep the proper adjustment, and they do not cover the road as well as my acetylene lamp equipment did. How can this be eliminated? S. A. SCHLOSS.

Usually the bulbs in electric headlamps are adjustable and may be moved forward or backward. If this is the case with your lamps, it would be best to locate an object at a fixed distance ahead, say about 100 yards and then adjust the bulbs in both lights until the best result is accomplished. Also note whether the lamps are arranged in such position so that the light is properly turned ahead. Unless the lights are set correctly you do not get the combined light of both on a single object ahead.

Motoring Department. The Constitution: I would like to have a supplementary seat in my runabout suitable for a child. Where is the best place to get out at a reasonable price? W. A. F.

The seat may be obtained at any automobile supply store. There is no company which carries detachable seats in stock to fit any make of car. Any responsible body maker, however, can easily design and attach an adjustable seat to your car which can be removed or folded up out of the way at will.

Motoring Department. The Constitution: As we are leaving the city to go to our country home within a few weeks I have taken my car out of storage where it had been idle for some time during the cold months, and I am now unable to crank it. He oiled it thoroughly, even lubricating the cylinders, but without results. Please let me know what might be my method of procedure in order to get the car working right again? PHILIP BRADY.

If the car has been stored in a damp place it is more than likely that the pistons have rusted. Would suggest putting crude oil directly into the cylinders, and allow it to remain there several hours. If you are unable then to crank the motor, jack up one rear wheel, and with the gear in first speed force this wheel around. The additional leverage obtained should force the corroded parts.

Motoring Department. The Constitution: I am advised by my garage man that a mixture of lactic acid and oil of lavender is good to remove rust spots from a body. I do not care to do any experimenting, being afraid that I might further spoil the paint on my car. There are a number of spots which need touching up, however, and these are somewhat rusted. Will you please advise a good way to remove the rust and whether these spots can be properly touched up by a painter so that they will not show? APPRECIATIVE.

The rust must be removed before the paint is applied, otherwise it will not hold. It should first be scraped off and then further cleaned with emery cloth and kerosene until a perfectly clean and smooth surface is obtained. When all the rust has been moved care should then be taken to remove any oil, as paint will not hold to an oily surface. When thoroughly cleaned and dried the various spots can be painted and blended to match the rest of the car. Of course, with some colors this is practically impossible without repainting the whole panel or section. Usually such spots are touched up by the use of a paint gun, which sprays the paint. An experienced painter can do this work so that the spots will hardly show after the car is used for a few days.

Motoring Department. The Constitution: Recently I purchased a new six-cylinder car, and did not drive it more than 150 miles before two of the connecting rod bearings burned out and three of the cylinders scored. In taking down the motor I found that there was a great amount of foreign matter in the crank case. There seemed to be plenty of oil, and I cannot account for the trouble except that this dirt followed the oil and caused the parts to score. Do you think this possible? P. C. C.

It is more than likely that the foreign matter you have mentioned clogged the flow of oil and prevented the proper lubrication of the parts. If the flow of oil was prevented only temporarily it may have been sufficient to cause the trouble. Even though foreign matter gets into the oil there is usually a screen which prevents it from reaching the vital parts. If there was plenty of oil in the motor there is no reason why it should not reach the various bearings, provided the oil pump was functioning properly.

Helpful Hints to Motor Car Owners.

Because a towed wheel will follow in a straight line behind whatever is towing it, it generally is possible to drive a short distance backward if the steering gear breaks, leaving one wheel controllable. The unmanageable wheel in such a case should be lashed to prevent it turning athwart the car.

It is not an easy matter to insert a gasket between two flanges, which cannot be separated any great distance without tearing the gasket before it is in proper position. If the gasket is placed in a cardboard folder, the task becomes mere child's play, for the crease of the folder can be inserted and pushed into the small space until the gasket is in proper position and the fodder then withdrawn.

When it is desirable to blacken lamp and windshield brackets without removing them from position, it can be very easily accomplished first by roughening up the brass work with emery paper. A priming coat of white lead paint is then applied and then followed after drying with a coat of black. A second coat of black is applied followed by two coats of spar varnish.

The ordinary method of putting a valve spring in place after compressing the coils and tying them together with string is all right and very useful, but a very disagreeable, and possibly serious injury may result if the bindings let go while the spring is being held in the hand. For this reason care should be taken to use string that is plenty strong enough.

One part which requires lubrication, but which is oftentimes neglected, is the interior of the flexible speedometer driving shaft, to which an elusive squeak often can be traced. The best lubricant for the shaft is a light grade of grease or non-fluid oil.

At any time that a single cell of a storage battery is sulphated, or if the gravity of the solution is very much below that of the other cells, it should be cut out and given a slow charge individually until it is brought to the same condition as the others.

AUTO OWNER USES CAR IN A NOVEL BEAR HUNT

For resourcefulness in adapting his automobile to a game-killing enterprise, first prize undoubtedly belongs to Judge W. A. Masters, of Chisholm, Minn., who recently when confronted with a dilemma of a big black bear in the roadway, utilized his Mitchell 5-4 model car as a means to bring down the bear, wounding him so severely that it was a comparatively easy matter subsequently for Mrs. Ed Davis, wife of a neighboring homesteader, to follow the animal into the brush and bring him down with a well-directed rifle bullet sent crashing into the bear's left eye.

Judge Masters declares that the excitement of the involuntary bear hunt and triumphant return to Chisholm with the carcass hung over the hood of the automobile caused the biggest kind of a stir in Chisholm and afforded the hunters, amateur and professional, plenty of May day gossip.

But for the animal making a quick jump just as the car came down upon him Bruin might have been knocked under the motor. As it was, the machine struck him squarely on the side, both wheels of the left side of the car passing over his body. The bear was unable to show fight and the party proceeded to the nearby homestead, where the services of Mrs. Davis were volunteered to shoot the injured animal.

Needless Expense.

(From Judge.)

"Father," asked the girl who was going to marry a poor man, "do you think I ought to take a course in household economics? They offered a lovely one at Briny Moore for three hundred dollars."

"No," replied pater grimly. "You will get one for nothing after you are married."

Woman can stand more pain than man can. However, she isn't expected to suffer in silence.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

We Control Them

Fortunes have been lost by makers in attempts to imitate these tires.

Faults developed—tires fell down—countless tires came back.

It is not from choice that any maker offers tires that rim-cut now.

Our Secret

The only way known to make a faultless tire of this type is by using braided wire bands in the base.

We use six of these bands—126 wires. We set them at certain angles. Thus we make a tire which nothing can force off, yet a tire which doesn't hook to the rim.

These bands are made by a secret machine, under lock and key. And no way has been found to make anything else which equally serves the purpose.

That is why the demand for this new type centers on No-Rim-Cut tires.

Their Record

No-Rim-Cut tires have been used for seven years—used on hundreds of thousands of cars.

Not a fault has developed. Not a tire of this kind has ever been known to rim-cut.

In addition, these tires have 10 per cent greater air capacity than the same rated size in clinchers. And that, on the average, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

All these advantages, yet no extra price. That is why these tires outsell all others—why the demand grows like a flood. These are now the world's favorite tires.

Write for the Goodyear Tire Book—14th-year edition. It tells all known ways to economize on tires.

The Knight Motor Supreme

Official test demonstrates beyond question the superiority of the Knight type sleeve valve motor over the poppet-valve type

A short time ago a 6-cylinder 38 H. P. poppet-valve motor of high-grade manufacture was given an official test by the Automobile Club of America in New York. It was run for 300 hours. During that time it averaged 35.7 horsepower—less than its nominal rating. At the close of the test it showed less power than at the beginning, despite the fact that valves were twice adjusted in an effort to sustain the power. This motor was of the latest and most highly improved design---but it was a poppet-valve motor.

Back in 1909--four years ago--a 4-cylinder 38 H. P. Knight sleeve valve motor was given a similar--but much harder--test. It was run on the block and on the road in a test covering 320 hours. During this test it averaged 53 horsepower---40% more than its rating. It was also driven 2,000 miles on the famous Brooklands track, and after all this it showed more power at the finish than at the beginning. No adjustments were made to the mechanism of the motor at any time.

Thus every claim of the superiority of the Knight type motor has been officially and unmistakably proven by the testimony of the poppet-valve itself, and this testimony again supports the statement of the Stearns-Knight that---

The Stearns-Knight "Four" is better than any poppet-valve "Six," and that—

The only car better than the Stearns-Knight "Four" is the Stearns-Knight "Six"

The F. B. Stearns Company

546 PEACHTREE STREET, ATLANTA

The most sensational feature of the 500-mile Indianapolis Decoration Day race was the performance of a 25 H. P. Knight-motored car, which, although by far the smallest car in the contest, ran consistently throughout, averaged nearly 70 miles an hour, and did not take oil or water from start to finish. It defeated 19 high-powered foreign and American machines, and finished fifth behind cars of far greater power.

Kelly-Springfield Automobile Tires

The seasoned motorist isn't looking for a tire that will cure all tire troubles. He knows there's no such thing. What he wants is a tire that will overcome the great, big majority of troubles, the ones that are conquered by the real rubber that goes into hand-made Kelly-Springfield tires.

"The name did not make the tire good—the tire made the name good."

Price even throughout, and then if you want to buy for speculation or actual use, you will buy this at $450 per foot. Consider that Crawford and Currier are to build on east side of Whitehall, just beyond Trinity; that Charlie Black is to build a $50,000 building on the corner part of old Trinity church site; that where the building that fell down on the northeast corner is obliged to be rebuilt with a fine building; that there will be more doing right there for the next year than in any other part of the city; that there is just about as many people on the sidewalks right now at the corner of Whitehall and Mitchell, in one block of this property, as there was at the corner of Marietta and Broad, where property is worth, say, $5,000 per foot. LOAN AGENTS NEW ENGLAND MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.

Atlanta Philharmonic Orchestra Is Now Big Civic Asset;

Concerts Are Planned for Other Cities, Thus Advertising Atlanta

Atlanta has never been accused of an overtendency to the aesthetic. So far, indeed, does she lean in the other direction that when a big movement is started which has an aesthetic side there is a very general questioning as to what will be its practical or commercial value.

The Philarmonic orchestra being developed by the Atlanta Musical association is a case in point. Just now it is strongly in the limelight because of its recent heroic seeking and finding of a ten thousand-dollar guarantee which will place the orchestra on the only kind of foundation to mean more than mere spasmodic achievement.

The list of the officers and executive board is in itself of a character to inspire confidence, to indicate a practical and a loyal ambition to supply what appears to be the logical need just now in Atlanta's educational advancement.

Mr. J. M. Van Harlingen and Mr. W. J. Lowenstein are the newly elected members of the board. Mrs. John M. Slaton is president, Mrs. John L. Meek is vice-president, Mr. T. S. Florence, treasurer; Mr. Forrest Gardner, secretary, and on the board also are Mrs. Edward T. Brown, Mr. L. E. Rogers, Miss Edwine Behre and Mrs. Milton Arrowood, founder of the association, while the membership, which has more than doubled during the past winter, is made up of all elements—men of profession and business and women of business and of leisure.

Plans for Next Season.

Two important actions taken by the association recently which concern the guarantors was the postponement of the last concert of this season to form an extra concert in the season of 1913-14, and the calling on the guarantors at once for a small part of the guarantee.

The postponement was decided upon partly on account of the departure of the concert meister for a summer in the music centers of Europe, and the absence of other members of the orchestra from the city, conditions which would make a concert of satisfactory standards at this time impossible.

The immediate response from the guarantors will buy new instruments necessary for music of symphony class and will secure the new scores for next year's concerts.

In the meantime, the active forces of the association, and this includes a big percentage of the membership, have been made into committees which are working toward the future along the directest and most practical lines.

For one thing, they are busy building up an orchestra sentiment. In one way or another they are working to make the orchestra-thought the popular thought-line-of-least-resistance.

What the orchestra can do and what it is meant to do for Atlanta is the leading motive of their argument, and they back it up with the records of symphony orchestras in other American cities, and the value these cities put on them both as advertising assets and educational forces.

What St. Louis Is Doing.

In reply to a request for information concerning the St. Louis symphony orchestra, the vice president and chairman of the executive committee declares that the St. Louis public classes its orchestra as a civic institution which they regard in the same light as their universities, their art museums, their libraries and their schools.

Within several years the orchestra scope has been broadened to include besides its regular season of thirty high-class symphony concerts with popular concerts on Sunday afternoons in the symphony hall, other popular concerts in sections of the city remote from the symphony hall, and still other appearances in connection with the public high school, when these schools supply a chorus feature.

Concert Tours.

Concert tours to other cities are being undertaken, and St. Louis considers these "probably the very best advertisement the city can possibly have in any shape and form. These cities seem to regard the visit of the orchestra as a compliment; in other words, that St. Louis is sending them in the shape of the orchestra the flower of its civic achievement.

"It always receives a cordial welcome, and where we go once we usually go again, and further than that it brings musical students to St. Louis, because the orchestra is the life of all music in St. Louis."

"The orchestra that made Minneapolis famous" might well be a truthful paraphrase, since that city's "Civic and commercial association" declares that "Minneapolis has never had an advertising plan of greater efficiency than the high-class publicity given to it by the appearance of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra in other cities."

The Orchestra in Philadelphia.

The secretary of the Philadelphia chamber of commerce sums up his city's experience with the statement that "from the standpoint of education, artistry and even commercially, an organization such as the Philadelphia orchestra is of the utmost importance to any community that is able to support such an institution."

From Cincinnati comes similar encouragement as to the advertising value of an orchestra and its inevitable bringing to the city that supports it of music conservatories and students.

The Atlanta Musical association has in view a concert tour for the Philharmonic orchestra to neighboring cities next spring, and other ambitious plans are in view, but first, they are looking to the development of a good orchestra for the sake of musical sentiment and enjoyment in Atlanta.

A Brief History.

Mr. Forrest Gardner, secretary of the association, writes the following brief and comprehensive description of the association and its work:

"The association was organized on October 22, 1909, with a charter membership of sixteen. Mrs. Bertha Harwood Arrowood was its first president, and its existence and early success is due mainly to her untiring efforts in its behalf. The first orchestra conductor was Mr. Richard Schliewin, an artist of great ability. He was succeeded in the leadership of the orchestra by by one our own people, Mr. W. Whitney Hubner. Under Mr. Hubner's good management the orchestra was greatly developed and more firmly organized. His artistic interpretations of the programs he rendered made each concert a musical treat.

"At the present time the orchestra is under the leadership of Mr. Mortimer Wilson. Mr. Wilson is both a conductor and composer of international reputation. After an extended study period in Chicago, directed by the best instructors in that city, he completed his work under Oscar Nedball, in Vienna, and Hans Sitt and Max Reger, in Leipsic. Mr. Wilson is unusually well fitted for the position he now holds. Besides his comprehensive knowledge of music and his artistic ability, his work as a composer has brought him into a more sympathetic touch with the orchestra.

"The personnel of the orchestra is made up of the best musical talent in and about Atlanta. The full orchestra now consists of forty-eight pieces. The concert meister, Mr. Skibinsky, is an artist of remarkable attainment and one of the best violinists in the country. Each member is a musician of demonstrated ability and many are leaders of various musical endeavors in the city.

Prospects Never Brighter.

"At no time have the prospects of the association been brighter than the present. The president, Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, has been untiring in her efforts to make the work a success. Under her able management the association has made remarkable growth and been more surely established than ever before. In this great work she has been ably assisted by Mrs. John Lamar Meek, the first vice president of the association. It is chiefly due to their efforts that the membership has been more than doubled during the season just closed and the great guarantee fund of $10,000 been subscribed. The membership now, including guarantors and subscribers, is about 400—the largest in the history of the organization. This gives the association a financial backing of about $13,000 per year. With this as a nucleus, the association is planning to accomplish a great deal during the coming season.

"Very few in the audience attending an orchestra concert realize the work and expense attached to the production of a program. Our actual records show that in the four seasons of our existence we have given some eighteen full orchestra concerts. Besides the work of the conductor in studying and arranging the programs, over 200 rehearsals were necessary. The average cost of each concert we give is $500.

"It is a well established fact that no place can become a musical center without the presence of a good orchestra. The orchestra is by far the greatest unit in the field of music. In attempting to make Atlanta the musical center of the south, the foundation upon which we must build is the orchestra. The Atlanta Philharmonic orchestra, besides being the pioneer orchestra in the south, is better known today than any other. Various offers have come to the orchestra for concerts in adjoining cities, and all have expressed a most keen desire to witness its productions.

"The board of directors and members of the Atlanta Musical association desire to impress upon the minds of the people the fact that their work is purely a civic movement. The earnest desire to make our city one of the best in the land urges them to take up the work they have. One hundred of our business men have shown the 'Atlanta spirit' in the most esthetical way by making a guarantee fund to cover the deficits in the expenses of the association. All residents of Atlanta and adjacents towns are eligible to this membership. The dues are nominal, the benefits, both individually and collectively, great.

"The Atlanta Musical association is a body that is truly of Atlanta, for Atlanta and by Atlanta. Will you help to keep it so?"

"Story of the Other Wise Man" To Be Recited by Mrs. Talcott

Harry Van Dyke's "Story of the Other Wise Man"—regarded by thousands of book lovers as one of the gems of modern literature—is to be presented in a unique and interesting way on Monday evening by Mrs. Janet R. Talcott. The reading will take place in the First Christian church, under the auspices of the "Royal Guards" and the "Delta Alphe" classes, and another interesting event on the program will be the solo selections of Miss Clara Porter.

When the three wise men from the east" met in the desert and followed the star of Bethlehem in search of the infant Jesus, there was a fourth who had been expected, but who did not reach the meeting place in time. The beautiful little story of Dr. Van Dyke's describes the journey of the "other wise man," telling how he lingered to perform a deed of kindness and how his love for His fellow men kept him from seeing the face of the Christ-child. Mrs. Talcott's interpretation will be given at 8 o'clock Monday evening, and the admission will be 25 cents, the proceeds to go for benefit work by the two young people's classes of the Christian church.

Minstrel of Marist Rifles Greatly Enjoyed by Big Crowd

Marist rifles, company "G," of the fifth regiment of the National Guards of Georgia presented their annual minstrel show on Friday night in the auditorium of the Marist Military college. As usual the entire personnel of the program was composed of very best amateur performers in the city. The program was unique and entirely original as can easily be seen by the accompanying copy:

Messrs. S. R Dull, Jr., Frank Pearson, Bernard Kane and Mr. Turner, ends.

4. "When I Gather the Myrtle with Mary," Paul Fields.
5. "You Are Going to Get Something You Don't Expect," by Bernard Kane.
6. "Here Comes My Daddy, Now," by Bennie Cleyburne.
7. "The Star of the Deep," Mr. Willby.
8. "That's a Plenty," Frank Pearson.
9. "When I Lost You," Mr. Maurer.
10. Introducing Miss Hazel Massa, in Character Songs.

Second part:

2. "It" and Nit," Captain E. R. E. Schmidt and Frank Pearson.
3. E. A. T. S. quartet, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Cleyburne, Mr. Stephens and Mr. Wallace.

Miss Hazel Massa in character songs was one of the most highly appreciated numbers. Miss Massa sung her song delightfully and was received with much enthusiasm.

Frank Pearson and Sam Dull, with their clever pokes and funny antics kept the audience in one long and continuous laugh from the rise to the fall of the curtain.

Mrs. Frank Pearson, in her pleasing way, sang several songs and was applauded and reapplauded.

Mr. Maurer and Mr. Cleyburne, with their excellent voices, amused and pleased the audience.

Captain Schmidt and Frank Pearson enacted an original comedy sketch which is worthy of honorable mention. The proceeds of the entertainment is to be used to furnish the company room of the Marist rifles in the auditorium armory.

COLORED BUSINESS MEN HEAR RALPH W. TYLER

Ralph W. Tyler, national organizer for the National Negro Business league, addressed the Atlanta colored board of trade Friday afternoon at their roms in the colored Odd Fellows' building.

The speaker complimented the progress being made by the race in this city along business lines. He advised hearty co-operation and concentration. He also urged that the negroes engaged in business should put as much ability and courtesy and honesty in their business as possible, and that whenever possible orders for supplies ought to be consolidated in order to secure the discount for largest quantity, and the goods prorated on receipt.

His talk was listened to attentively by a large attendance of negro business men. Tyler is making a tour of the country in the interest of the National Negro Business league, of which Dr. Booker T. Washington is president.

REAL SUMMER WEATHER RETURNS TO GATE CITY

With real summer weather back again and the mercury clinging around the top of the eighties, the weather Saturday was so tempered by cooling breezes that the ordinary heat of summer was hardly noticeable in Atlanta or in this section.

The forecast is for continued clear weather and for a slight rise in the temperature Sunday, so that the afternoon mark may be up in the nineties. There is no indication, however, of a falling off in the breeze and the atmosphere, being free from moisture and with the wind blowing, should be pleasant enough.

With the rise of temperature in Atlanta to normal, the same conditions are to a certain extent prevalent over the country and as far north as Winnepeg, Canada, the mercury is in the neighborhood of the seventies.

THREE LOCKER CLUBS DECLARED NOT GUILTY

Verdicts of not guilty were found in the cases against three locker clubs yesterday in the city court, which marks the end of the agitation started a year ago by the grand jury of which T. K. Glenn was foreman.

The Theatrical, the Beavers and the Metropolitan clubs were the ones acquitted in the cases which were against the officers of the clubs. Cases against the Southern, Georgia Athletic and Mystic Ark officials were dismissed, as these organizations have since gone out of business.

The inability of the state's witness, G. S. Bohannon, to tell whether he had been drinking real beer or near beer in the clubs when he visited them with a detective from the grand jury was the main reason for the failure of the state to make out a case.

IN THE RECENT GROCERS' PARADE

The "Big 4" company made a brave showing in the recent grocers' and butchers' parade. This company is rapidly coming to the front in Atlanta as the typical prosperous business, founded on the smallest of small scales, but grown to a size which attracts the attention of the discerning business man in a very few years.

As most everybody now knows, the company manufactures peanut products and is probably best known for their "Big 4 peanut sandwiches." They make many other succulent delicacies out of the humble goober, however, and are growing and increasing their business scope every day. S. Singleton is the head of the concern and it gets its name from the four attractive young ladies, his daughters, who, by their loyalty and untiring energy, first made the business possible.

President Jim Little, of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, returned last night from New York, where he had been on a combination business and pleasure trip.

The Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company report mail orders as especially good this week and also that their road men have had quite a good time. The general report seems to be that the merchants in the country are enthusiastic over crop prospects and are buying rather more liberally.

Sales Manager E. M. Hudson, of the McCord-Stewart company, stated last week that the removal of his company to their new headquarters on West Hunter street had been effected with much less trouble than he had anticipated. Of course it had been a huge job, but nevertheless they had managed to do it all right and also to get out practically all their orders with their usual dispatch. Which is something to be proud of.

In the Manager's Office

"And After the Last Letter Was Signed They Talked Together or Many Things."

The Oldest Traveler had come in Saturday after a week of sales which had made the whole office talk. When the Young Salesman came in he was also informed of the wonderful showing, and, while he didn't show any envy, as he had had a pretty good week himself, he seized the first opportunity to ask his confrere how he had done it. They were in the Manager's Office after the day's work was done.

"How do you account for your big sales this week, Joe?" he asked.

"Oh, there were several things contributory to them. Weather was good people needed goods, and two or three others."

"Yes, but those same conditions held good in my territory, yet I didn't sell anything like you. Why didn't I?"

"Perhaps you didn't expect to."

"Well, no, I can't say I did. I went out Monday morning feeling that I might have a good week, but not expecting anything wonderful."

"That's the point. I went out Monday knowing that I was going to have a record-breaking week. I could have told you then that I would, if I had been questioned."

"Cut out the supernatural stuff, tell me how you did it."

"There's nothing supernatural about what I'm telling you, boy, and you'd better get wise to the fact that what a man KNOWS he's going to do is what he WILL do. There's a certain big mail order house not a thousand miles from here which has won a wonderful success and the motto which the man at the head has put all over his place is "I CAN and I WILL."

"Oh, I know that determination has a lot to do with success, but you can't always make up your mind about the amount of stuff you are going to sell and go out and sell it."

"Not always, but what you make up your mind to has a lot to do with it. Listen and I'll tell you a true story. Years ago I started out to sell goods on the road. I was working on a commission and selling about five hundred dollars' worth of stuff a day. I thought that was pretty good and to tell the truth, it was, too. There was another young fellow on the same territory for a different house who had an identical line to mine. I couldn't see any difference in the two lines in quality, service, price or anything. He also was selling about five hundred dollars a day. One day I went out after a particularly good breakfast or something or other and sold seven hundred and fifty dollars worth. I was surprised that I could and resolved to sell that much every day afterwards. I said I could and I did. Then one day I sold a thousand dollars' worth and resolved to sell that much every day—and I did. This kept up until I was finally selling twenty-five hundreds dollars' worth of goods a day. In the meantime, my competitor was still selling his five hundred dollars' worth a day, and said he didn't see how I could possibly sell more. He worked a full day every day, told all he could about his line and sold every bill he could. He never saw that it was because I KNEW every day ahead that I was going to sell so much and consequently I DID sell it. There's a whole lot to this will power thing in business and you can cultivate it if you like."

"Maybe, there's something in what you say, and I guess I'll try it next week."

"You mustn't guess you'll try it. You must KNOW that you're going to do it."

"All right. How much shall I sell next week?"

"Twenty per cent more than this week is what you'll sell, and you know you will, too."

"Will I? I believe you, so put my sales for next week down now as 20 per cent better than this, Mr. Bookkeeper."

A Business Parable.

By Walter Clayton.

"Mr. Sandy" kept a general merchandise store in a small southern town. He carried furniture, hardware and many other thinks that a customer might want. Amongst other items of stock he had on hand a second-hand shotgun of a high grade, standard make.

"Mr. Jones," the undertaker, wanted this gun, but delayed his purchase until he could correspond with his favorite mail order house in the east.

One day Mr. Jones walked into Mr. Sandy's store and said:

"Mr. Sandy, how much do you want for that gun today?"

Mr. Sandy named his price and Mr. Jones replied:

"Why, Sam, I can get a new one from the Magazines mail order house for a little more than you ask for that second-hand gun."

"That's all right," replied Mr. Sandy. "Send your money up there. Get their gun, and if one of their friends dies they will send down here to you for the coffin, won't they?"

There are many merchants in this country today with the same convictions as Mr. Sandy, but few with the backbone to say them out as plain.

This question of buying at home is one for everyone to consider. The farmer that puts his money in an envelope addressed to some northern mail order house hopes for a prize package—and generally gets one.

Mr. Farmer, the value of your land, the market for your chickens, eggs, butter, garden vegetables, depends on the size of your home town. Your home town depends on your support. The farmers that live near that big city in which that mail order house is located find a ready market for their products. The reason is that he isn't lending his money down here to your town to buy his supplies with, but is trading at home, while you are giving him some of your money every time you buy goods in his town.

Mr. Merchant, the wealth you have or hope to have, must be created at your own door within the borders of this southland of ours. You will not be called on to pay taxes on the bricks you are putting into those northern skyscrapers by going up there to buy your goods every year. You are laying bricks, but you don't own them.

How would you like of see Atlanta, Macon, Birmingham and many other southern cities have a two-million population? Wouldn't you point to it with pride? Don't you think it would help your business?

All this and more is possible if we will live at home and help our neighbors to live at home. Remember your store, your town, your county, your state and your south. Yours for what you make them. The industries of this country are depending on you for success. Attend the merchants' convention in Atlanta and other southern cities. See what they have to offer and what they want for it.

Many American tourists have been placed in extremely embarrassing positions when our foreign brothers would ask about Yellowstone park, Royal Gorge canyon, Pike's peek and other wonders of our land that the tourists had never seen. Know your own home before you begin searching foreign markets for the goods you require.

PEOPLE HAVE NO IDEA OF MOTOR CAR COST

W. H. Mahoney Talks of the Chances of Lowering the Prices.

Whether or not the cost of motor cars will be lowered depends on securing new methods of applying labor, more efficient manufacturing methods, according to W. H. Mahoney, southern district manager of the Cartercar company, Atlanta, Ga.

"The average person intending to buy a car has absolutely no idea of the real cost of building a motor car," says Mr. Mahoney. "He thinks that the castings and other parts are quickly made and that materials are inexpensive. Tell the average person that a certain casting, of aluminum, would cost about $35 to $40 to the manufacturer and he would be astonished. One who is not familiar with the construction of an automobile does not begin to realize the immense amount of work necessary in getting every part absolutely right. He does not understand that every part must be fitted exact or the car cannot give such good service.

"It is when the owner has to buy new parts that he awakes to the real cost of making a car. He has never before had any idea of what the real cost is, and then when he finds out he believes he is being charged extortionately, when in fact he usually gets extras at just about what they cost the manufacturer.

"I find that a surprisingly large number of Cartercar owners are people who have previously used other cars, but have changed to this car because of the gearless transmission. This form of transmission eliminates the buying of new parts, because there is nothing about it to cause trouble. I believe this is only a step, however, to the simplicity that will be obtained in motor car construction during the next few years."

COLE MOTOR COMPANY AFTER AUTO THIEVES

Bureau of Information Will Give Every Assistance in Hunt for Stolen Cars.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 14.—(Special.)—As a result of the activity of automobile thieves all over the country the Cole Motor Car company of this city has added to its national selling organization a department to be known as a bureau of information to assist in the recovery of stolen Cole automobiles. J. D. Riker has been appointed as head of the bureau. Every Cole owner is to have the benefit of the big army of Cole distributors and dealers in the United States and Canada should he lose his car.

There is hardly a place in the country today where automobile thieving is not prevalent. Although the Cole and other makes of cars are equipped so that the owner can lock his car, making it positively burglar-proof, still many forget and leave their machine unprotected, resulting in the car going on a joy ride and in some cases being driven to distant points.

It is the purpose of the Cole new department as soon as an owner reports a car lost to immediately notify their big army of representatives and have them scour the country, garages, etc., if clues lead in that direction.

Just recently two automobiles were recovered by the new bureau. One belonging to the Cole advertising department caused the arrest of the culprit two hours after he ended his joy ride. The private car of J. J. Cole was stolen one night at 11 o'clock, and thirty-six hours later the car was captured in Buffalo, after a record-breaking run between Indianapolis and Buffalo. President Cole immediately offered a big reward for the conviction of the thieves, who are known to the police.

A man seldom feels out of sight when he is head over ears in debt.

Would you make the mistake of buying a single or two-cylinder car? Of course not.

Would you make the mistake of buying a four-cylinder car today, when in the seven months since August, 1912, the number of manufacturers building six-cylinder cars has increased five times?

Who would consider the purchase of an automobile today without fore doors? Not that such an automobile is not serviceable, but because it is out of date and has not kept up with the times.

In 1914, when every manufacturer who has been able to dispose of his old stock, is advocating and building left-side drives, will not the right-side drive car be as unsalable and conspicuously out of date as is the car without fore doors today, except fore doors can be added while a right-side drive cannot be changed to a left-side drive?

Who would ever think of abandoning the left-side drive where the passengers can enter from the sidewalk for a right-side drive where, in order to comply with traffic regulation requiring you to stop with the traffic on the right side of the street, the occupants of the front seat must dismount in the street or go out into the street to enter the car?

The flush side body with concealed hinges and clear running boards will characterize the motor car of the future; the car with projecting hinges, tool boxes, battery boxes and spare tires on the running board, with projecting lamps and horns, will be conspicuously out of date.

There is no question as to which of the characteristics will mark the car of the future. Be sure the car you are considering has these cleaner, later and more practical characteristics, and is not already a year or more behind the times.

CLOSING UNDERPASS IS NOW UP TO W. & A.

Atlanta Must Provide Suitable Ingress and Egress to Their Tracks, Officials Tell Committee.

The closing of the Forsyth street underpass, characterized by engineers as a "municipal cancer," depends upon the consent of the officials of the Western and Atlantic railroad, Major J. L. Cullom, superintendent, informed council's special committee at a conference yesterday morning.

The city submitted two proposals to Major McCullom and Chief Engineer McDonald; one provides for the use of the Central of Georgia roadway from the freight depot east to Forsyth, and the other that the city build an incline from the center of the bridge to the railroad tracks.

The incline scheme was favored by the railroad officials over every other suggestion offered at the conference. The project, however, will necessitate the expenditure of $37,600, which cannot possibly be raked up by the city owing to the stringent money condition which the city faces by reason of having been forced to put $260,000 cash in the June sheet to purchase the Grematory.

Anxious to Co-operate.

"The W. & A. is anxious to co-operate with the city on any feasible plan to close the underpasses," Major McCullom told the committee, "but at the same time we cannot be expected to agree to a plan which will bottle up our property."

While the two officials indicated their approval of the incline scheme, they did not promise the city that they would recommend it to officials higher up. Discussing the incline, Major McCullom frankly told the committee that he did not think the W. & A. would agree to the closing of either gap of the underpass until the city provides adequate means of ingress and egress.

Ex-Mayor Robert F. Maddox directed attention to the depleted condition of Atlanta's city treasury, and commented on the impossibility of securing the improvement this year. He stated that Major McCullom co-operate with the committee, and offered the following proposition, upon which he conferred the committee, and which will be submitted in lieu of the incline proposal:

Offer of Ex-Mayor.

"The city of Atlanta asks and urges the Western and Atlantic to agree to the closing of the underpasses, as a basis for the underpasses to be closed, the city offers the use of the roadway across the Central of Georgia railroad tracks, which this road will serve for an indefinite period subject to termination on twelve months' notice, as a protection to the Western and Atlantic against such termination, the city guarantees to either reopen the underpasses or else provide some other means of ingress and egress to the Western and Atlantic tracks that will be equally satisfactory."

Both Major McCullom and Engineer McDonald promised that they would submit the above proposal to the company officials immediately, and assured an early decision.

Because the closing of the underpass undoubtedly means damage, more or less, to the entire city, it seems there is some doubt as to whether the officials can be persuaded to agree to it.

Governor Must Approve.

The act of the legislature, adopted last year, and which authorizes the closing of the underpass here requires the governor and the railroad commission to pass on and approve any scheme proposed therefore before it can be carried into effect. As the Western and Atlantic is the property of the state, both the governor and railroad commission are likely to disapprove any scheme which will, in any way, effect the value of the property.

Major McCullom's position at the conference was positive and emphatic, and it is considered likely that the head officials of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, owners of the Western and Atlantic, will take the same position. If they refuse to sanction the use of the Central of Georgia roadway, and agree to the erection of an incline as a method of egress from the railroad yards, it will be up to the city to provide the money or let the project go over until next year. Every cent of the surplus of the city has been literally used up, and no more is in sight this year.

Restrictions of Legislature.

The restrictions placed by the legislature on the proposed project, and the length to which it went to safeguard the property, is conclusively shown in the following section of the act:

That said underpass shall not be closed nor said portion of said street vacated until other adequate and reasonable means of ingress and egress from the roads and yards of the Western and Atlantic railroad shall be provided by the city of Atlanta, and before said underpass shall be closed, plans and specifications of the proposed new means of entering said roads and yards shall be prepared and submitted to the railroad commission of Georgia and approved by them, when said plans and specifications shall be submitted to the governor and if approved by him then, after said new means of ingress and egress from said tracks and yards have been constructed and opened in accordance with said plans and specifications, then said railroad commission if satisfied that said new means of ingress and egress conform to said plans and specifications, shall issue their order permitting said underpass to be closed and said portions of said street to be vacated.

BRITISH TREATY STILL UNRATIFIED

It was feared that the failure to ratify the renewed arbitration treaty with Great Britain in the senate after identical treaties with two other countries had been ratified without any objection being raised would lead to complications. Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, responsible for the successful blocking of the attempt to ratify the treaty, based his opposition on the fact that ratification early next month would obligate the United States to arbitrate the Panama canal tolls controversy with Great Britain. The British arbitration treaty expired by limitation. The two governments previously agreed to its renewal for another period of five years, and the senate committee on foreign relations brought in a report recommending the ratification of the treaty as well as of identical treaties with Italy and Spain. The senate in executive session agreed to the ratification of the treaties with Spain and Italy, but when a vote on the British treaty was proposed, Senator Chamberlain objected. The senate, desiring to avoid the appearance of affronting Great Britain, thereupon withdrew the ratification of the Spanish and Italian treaties. The British treaty will lie over until it is ascertained that the necessary two-thirds vote can be obtained for its ratification. It was understood that a considerable number of senators stand with Senator Chamberlain, who has already introduced a resolution providing for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer and Hay-Pauncefote treaties upon which Great Britain based its protest against exemption of American vessels from payment of canal tolls. Senator O'Gorman, who is a member of the foreign relations committee and chairman of the committee having charge of canal legislation, has announced that he will fight for Senator Chamberlain's resolution for repudiation of the treaty. He has been one of the leaders in the fight for exemption of American ships engaged in the coastwise trade from payment of tolls.

National Guard Prepares For Camp at St. Simons

By Ogie Grice.

The second squadron of cavalry, and the third battalion of infantry, National Guard of Georgia, will go into camp at St. Simons Island early in the morning of June 21.

Major J. G. Semans, of Atlanta, is in command of the cavalry, and Major H. P. Hunter, of Elberton, commands the infantry force, and will be the ranking officer at the camp.

Both the second squadron and the third battalion, in company with the fourth battalion, and the fifth regiment, encamped at Camp Perkins, near Anniston, Ala., in the summer of 1912, and engaged in the extensive maneuvers at that place with the 25,000 men of the United States army officers. All these troops go to Camp St. Simons this year. The other bodies will not encamp until later in the summer. This is known as a state encampment, as the state finances the camp.

Camp Will Be Enjoyable.

Majors Seamans and Hunter have made arrangements whereby everything possible in order to make the St. Simons camp beneficial and enjoyable to the officers and men. The band of the First Georgia infantry, located at Brunswick, Ga., has been detailed to camp with these troops, and a platoon of the Atlanta artillery will also report at Camp St. Simons with a large field piece, which will be used in firing salutes and other formalities.

Major Seamans has announced that close-order drilling and guard duties will be the principal duties of his men at this camp. Arrangements have been perfected whereby every member of the squadron will do at least twenty-four hours' guard duty. All drilling will be done in the forenoon, it is announced. In the afternoons and evenings the men will have a real guard duty will be at complete liberty. Another thing that will add much to the pleasure of the men is the fact that they will be allowed to carry citizens' clothing and other light effects with them. It is the intention of the commanding officers to make this camp as much like a picnic as possible, as is consistent with efficiency.

Food Will Be Much Better.

Lieutenant Fay Wilson, quartermaster of the second squadron, is quite enthusiastic over the arrangements for camp. He says that the men will be fed much better than at Anniston last year, however, as the appropriation will be sufficiently large to enable him to make proper provision for subsistence stores. The amount of seventy-five cents is available for one day's rations. Only nineteen cents served this purpose last year. And considering the Atlanta contingent, Mr. McRae, Hazelhurst, Jesup and Brunswick.

"Liberty Independent Troop."

One of the oldest military organizations in the United States—the Liberty Independent Troop, or troop B, of the second squadron, will attend the camp. The Liberty Independent Troop was organized in 1776, and fought with distinction in the Revolution, Mexican and Civil wars. Since the Civil war the troop has been commanded by the following captains: William A. Fleming, Edward P. Miller, Josiah L. Fleming, James B. Fraser, W. Preston Waite, A. Gordon Cassels, R. Frank Cassels and W. Preston Waite. Captain Waite's first service was between the years 1895 and 1900, when he was elected major of the First Regiment Georgia cavalry, and after five years' service as such was elected lieutenant-colonel of the regiment. He will take command of the troop on March 25, 1910. Captain Waite joined the troop when but eleven years of age, and has served in every grade. He is now fifty-five years old.

The troop is one of the strongest numerically in the state, and is now right up to the limit, and has a number of applicants on the "waiting list." Many troops find it difficult to keep as many as forty men, even though located in as large a city as Atlanta, while troop B, which is located in a very small town, has a membership of fifty-eight. Troop B has only served one time on riot duty during its long existence—in 1895, at Darien.

H. C. Norman is second lieutenant, and F. Ben Gordon is first lieutenant. The non-commissioned officers are: First Sergeant P. T. Martin, quartermaster sergeant, and E. E. Thiess; sergeants C. W. Fraser, D. A. Fraser, H. Gordon and D. F. Martin; corporals H. B. Fraser, W. A. Mills, C. C. Martin, J. L. Fleming and T. Martin, Jr., Pratt Stafford, trumpeter.

Governor's Horse Guard

The governor's horse guard, of Atlanta, troop L, of the Second squadron, one of the best known troops of cavalry in the national guard, will attend Camp St. Simons. The governor's horse guard was organized in 1883, and has been under command of the following captains: John Millidge, John A. Miller, J. S. Dozier, George M. Hope, W. T. B. Wilson, J. O. Seamans and O. L. Rudisill. The troop has always been represented on state and national rifle ranges which have been established in Atlanta. Only a few present strength of the troop is three officers and forty-five men.

The troops of the second squadron will go to Brunswick over the Southern railroad. The first troop to move will be troop T, of Gainesville. Three special cars will be attached to a regular train and bring that troop to Atlanta. A special will be ordered out of Atlanta, consisting of three baggage cars, two day coaches, and a Pullman. Other troops join further down the road, and when the train pulls into Brunswick it will consist of fifteen cars. Some of the towns along the line which the special will go are: Jackson, Macon, Cochran, Eastman, McRae, Hazelhurst, Jesup and Brunswick.

Squadron Officers.

Major J. O. Seamans is in command of the squadron. The members of his staff are: Adjutant, Lieutenant Arthur McCollum; Lieutenant A. S. McClatchy, Jr., and Lieutenant L. F. Wilson, all of Atlanta.

The squadron is composed of troops L, of Atlanta; B, of Dorchester (Liberty county); F, Gainesville, and K, Augusta. Lieutenant E. R. W. McCabe, inspector-instructor of the cavalry of the national guard of Georgia, will attend the camp and will assist in conducting the drills and other matters.

The captains in the squadron are: O. L. Rudisail, Francis P. McIntire, Savannah; W. P. Waite, C. Neal and W. K. Young.

The first lieutenants are T. P. Gordon, E. E. Kelly, A. D. Wilson, Arthur McCollum, Homer C. Ashford and W. E. Williamson.

The second lieutenants are H. C. Norman, S. B. Heldt, L. F. Wilson, A. C. Ashford and J. C. Adolphus.

Battalion Officers.

The officers of the Third battalion are: J. F. Hunter, major; H. F. Melkleham, J. C. Reese, W. A. Way and F. W. Bondurant, captains; W. A. Marshall, B. C. Juhan, L. Commerford, H. B. Payne, C. L. Bailey, first lieutenants; J. E. Kelley, H. M. Hill, R. M. Gibbons, second lieutenants.

The Hospital Corps.

Captain Benjamin E. Pearce, of the hospital corps, will have charge of the hospital department at Camp St. Simons. He will be chief sanitary officer of the camp. Dr. Thomas J. Holton, first sergeant, and Privates Todd and Jones constitute Captain Pearce's staff.

At Camp Pettus last summer Captain Pearce and staff received glowing praise from the United States chief sanitary officer for the superb sanitary conditions existing at the camp. It said to be the most perfect ever maintained at a national guard camp.

Captain Pearce has been associated with the national guard for the past ten years. Sergeant Holton served two full enlistments in the Governor's Horse Guard and has been in the hospital corps from the Governor's Horse Guard.

National Board Committee Meets.

Organization of the International Realty Associates, whose stockholders must be members of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, opposition to certain provisions of the income tax law, and endorsement of the Smith amendment to the national banking law, allowing national banks to accept real estate security as collateral for loans, were among the matters discussed at the third quarterly meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, which convened here on June 11, 1913. The Norfolk, Va., Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Racine, Wis.; Dubuque, Iowa; Brandon, Man., and Spokane, Wash. real estate exchanges are members of the national association.

Convention on Wheels.

So many requests have come to the Winnipeg convention expect to be guests of the Winnipeg convention committee on the complimentary, twelve hundred mile wheat belt excursion train, that it will be necessary to run the train in three sections. This will make it possible to have a continuation of the convention on wheels, as those making the trip will be together for three days. Many subjects presented at the convention will doubtless be considered by the delegates during this trip; thus making it possible to get all the good points out of the different subjects. This feature of the wheat belt trip adds new interest to the convention plans, and already delegates are arranging their summer vacations to allow them the time necessary to take this trip. The real estate boards of Saskatoon, Regina, Moose Jaw and Brandon are planning interesting entertainment for their respective cities, and as an after-convention feature the trip will be a valuable, educational one.

Special Winnipeg excursion parties are being arranged in many of the boards, and in a number of instances several are joining together for special trains, and indications are that it will be the greatest gathering of real estate men, both in numbers and in enthusiasm, ever held.

REVIEWS OF THE WEEK IN AMERICAN MARKETS

New York, June 14.—Heavy rains this week closed at a net advance of 14 to 17 points. Bulls were in fairly good control of the market for the start. The low record being made on Monday, and at the lowest only a slight net decline was noticed, the trading months standing unchanged to 4 points down, compared with the final prices of last week. The high prices were made on Tuesday, when the trading months were 23 to 32 points over the week's close. The range of prices was 23 to 36 points.

The main bullish influence of the week were the operations in the July months and the cool weather in the cotton belt. Reports of too much rain in a few sections of the belt early in the week also helped the long side. While few deny—even admit that any great immediate damage had been done the growing crop by the late cool temperature, it was almost unanimously conceded that the growth of the plant was being retarded, which, the bulls argued served to make the crop vulnerable to a severe attack because of the setback around planting time. Toward the end of the week weather conditions were more favorable, but they brought forth no great amount of fresh short sellings. Bears were very bearish in their inactivity at the low level of the early campaign.

The work of the bulls in the summer months caused a considerable improvement in the spot demand, and while offerings of actual cotton were not large enough to satisfy the large buiness being done, there was more activity than usual in spot circles which made the issues of the bulls grow in favor in some quarters. The small stocks at the United States ports attracted much comment and caused uneasiness among shorts.

The belief that stocks would still further shrink as the result of record foreign shipments the only consolation the bears got out of the early and rainy week. Even was the report that owners of actual cotton in the south were selling 1907 to New Orleans and New York against prospective large shipments to those markets.

In the spot department prices gained 9-64 middling closing at 12 7-16, against 12 3-16 last week and 12 5-16 a year ago. Sales on the spot amounted to 1,875 bales, against 1,500 last week and 1,618 this week last year. Sales to arrive were 1,600 bales, against 900 and 638.

FINANCIAL.

New York, June 14.—The most violent decline in stocks of the year, followed by a recovery almost equally rapid, made a week of unusual ease in the securities market. Pessimism had prevailed for months in the financial district. Quoted values had fallen steadily until many issues were from 10 to 16 or 20 points below the high figures of the year. World-wide money tension, with gloomy reports of business generally, European selling of American securities, evidences of contraction in some lines of business, all united to increase the fear under which the market was staggering. Then came the supreme test—a decline in the high-class railroad bonds, which Wall street heartily construed as decidedly favorable to the stock market.

That a reaction should have taken place was to be expected in the usual course of affairs growing out of the unfavorable conditions. But the extent of the reaction and the continued strength during the latter days of the week were what made it evident that a change in sentiment had taken place in the financial district. While it is recognized that unfavorable factors still exist, there is, temporarily at least, a more hopeful feeling.

Hastily drawn conclusions regarding the Missouri Pacific rate decision were modified on second thought. The district improvement in the prospects for crops also had a strong effect in bringing about a change in sentiment. There were indications that a plan for dissolution of the Harriman system would be offered in the near future.

More important still was the change in the money market. It has been recognized for months that the financial situation of the world centered in the chief causes of depression of the securities markets, and the more liberal offering of money by leading banks was of direct effect. Large amounts of commercial paper were absorbed, and the offerings of time and call money indicated a relaxation of rates. Secretary McAdoo's announcement that he would approve the issuance of emergency currency was of value chiefly for its effect on sentiment.

In spite of relaxation, the financial outlook in its broader aspects was little changed. The situation abroad was regarded as serious, and while reluctant to place loans except for short periods, and continued to pile up reserves for the crop moving season. Prospective borrowers saw little to encourage the belief that requirements of the corporations for new capital can be met advantageously.

From some lines of trade came further reports of a slowing down in business. Crops were favorable.

COTTON GOODS.

New York, June 14.—Jobbers are buying their fall requirements of domestic cottons in a very careful way and are supplying only a small portion of normal needs. Free operations are providing any goods to be held, and the absence of speculation in the commodities gives a very unusual appearance of beatiancy. The combined influence of tight money and tariff uncertainties is apparently the most depressing factor in situation. The strong feature of the market is that stocks in first and second hands are generally low and the spot sales are frequent enough to keep prices steady. Reductions in prices for fall trading have been made on wide and narrow sheetings, ginghams, and bleached muslins, and after the first week have attracted good sales.

Profits of the loom 4x4 bleached muslins were reduced from 6c to 5½c, at which price all the goods offered were taken, and the goods are now held at a value. Prices for 4x4 brown sheetings were revised only 2 cents a yard. Factory and jobbing manufacturers are in unsatisfied prices for spring and fall lines of last season, and the men now on the roads are getting moderate sized advance orders. Wash goods sales in the jobbing houses were very successful for the week and orders for spring and vacations are active in cleaning up the small lots that are to be had. Prices range as follows:

Print cloths, 28-inch, 64x64s, 3¾c; 64x60s, 3¼; 3¾4-inch, 64x64s, 5 1-16c to 5¼; brown sheetings, standard, 7½c; 4-yard, 8¾c; 10-yard, 8 ounce, 13¾c; denims, 9 ounce, 14c; standard ginghams, 6¼c; staple and fancy ginghams, 6¾c; dress ginghams, 9¼c.

STEEL AND IRON.

New York, June 14.—Several large orders for steel rails, one for 50,000 tons, and others for structural shapes for export to South America were booked by the subsidiary companies of the United States Steel corporation this week, which brought up the average orders booked since June 1, the beginning of the new year. The indication is that output and shipments of rolled steel products will be somewhat more than the average 1,000,000 tons per day, while new orders were approximately 21,000 tons per day.

The independent steel companies, apparently, are not in the market for new business, are placing very few orders for equipment, and future steel business from this source seems to be the smaller number from this company's weight in the entire market and the freight rate question. The steel mills, however, report the receipt of railroad specifications for the last quarter of 1913 ahead of steel shapes.

The Pennsylvania placed an order for 3,500 tons of bridge work and the Pennsylvania company placed an order for 2,000 tons of steel.

Exports orders included 11,000 tons of rails for Japan and 5,000 tons of rails and 5,000 tons of other South American roads. Brazil took 8,000 tons structural steel.

Another interesting development is the inquiry for 42,000 tons of rails for 1914 shipments by the Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Pacific and Missouri, Kansas and Texas.

Heavier sales of pig iron were made in the east, but inquiries were made in the west.

Drug Feinds Use Heroin.

(From The Philadelphia North American.)

The abuse of heroin began about three years ago, and, of course in the absence of statistics, the cause of the abuse of cocaine, morphine and heroin is not known to the general public, but only to the underworld. The drug spread its tentacles first in the more fashionable parts of the city. Users of the drug "snuff it," and the effect is as rapid as cocaine. The natural form of the drug is a pure white crystal, but it is also prepared in tablet and powder form.

Chemically, it is known as heroin hydro-chloride. It is the hydrochloride ester of morphine, and is a white crystal with a compound produced by the action of various acids. Its chief characteristic those of sugar rather than those of chalk. In medicine it is used as a substitute for codeine, frequently been prescribed as a sedative suitable for people constitutionally opposed to opium.

Like morphine, heroin first excites and is a convulsive exhilarant. That stage is succeeded by one of sleep and then by profound depression. There is always a danger of an overdose. Morphine, one of the most powerful of the chief narcotics reduces the pulse and the pupils of the eyes are reduced to the size of pinheads. Cocaine, on the other hand, flushes the face and gives the eyes a glassy stare.

Heroin acts about the wrecking of the mind and body with English precision and characteristic deliberation. The habit of the user is broken; the imagination becomes a wreck. Delusions of persecution arise for any crime. The bodily disease wears away and vitality sinks to a low ebb. The craving for the drug soon becomes more powerful and insistent than the craving for morphine, cocaine or opium.

His Opinion.

(From Judge.)

"It seems to me," ventured skimpy little Mrs. Peckhead's partyguck, with Mrs. Peckhead's patchwork, "that the average woman's idea of the ideal husband is a mere copy for any prime. The bodily disease wears away and vitality sinks to a low ebb. The craving for the drug soon becomes more powerful and insistent than the craving for morphine, cocaine or opium.

"I'm—ah!—sometimes such a word. As far as I have ever known, the man had no more to do with choosing his wife than he has with getting his photographsaken—he just keeps still, looks as pleasant as he can, and accepts whatever is given him."

Mercer Cohen, of North Carolina, and the maid of honor, Miss Otis David Thach. The little flower girls were Miss Martha Power, of Montgomery; Miss Eileen Donahue and Miss Frances Mitcham, of Auburn. The little ring bearer was Miss Sarah Hall Crenshaw, of Auburn.

The bride entered with her father, Dr. C. C. Thach, and was met at the altar by the groom with his brother, Mr. Howard Curtis.

The beautiful ring ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. John C. James, of Auburn. Soft music was played by Miss Mary Casey who presided at the organ.

The bride was exquisitely gowned in white charmeuse, hand-embroidered and trimmed in point lace and seed pearls, which was extremely becoming to her girlish beauty. Her veil, caught in cap effect with orange blossoms was of special interest in that it has been used by seven of her college classmates, she being the eighth to wear it. The flowers were white bride's roses, showered with lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor wore a handsome gown of white crepe de chine. Her flowers were pink peonies.

The three little flower girls and the tiny ring bearer wore dainty white lingerie frocks, with touches of pink. The flower girls carried baskets of pink roses and sweet peas and the ring bearer bore in the same shade ring on a silver tray, showered in pink sweet peas.

The bride, a girl of charming personality, is the eldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Chas. C. Thach and has enjoyed a delightful young ladyhood in the college town, and in southern cities. She is a graduate of Converse college, Spartanburg, S. C.

The groom was for several years professor of architecture at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and at present is the head of that department at Tulane university. He is a graduate of the University of North Carolina and of the University of Virginia.

The bridal tour will include Washington and the North Carolina mountains. Later they will visit the groom's parents here on the North Carolina coast. The going-away gown was a tailored suit of blue sponge worn with an imported hat of black brown. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis will be at home after October 1, at 1506 Calhoun street, New Orleans.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Robt. Thach and Robert H. Thach, Jr., Mrs. M. S. Shaw, C. C. Certain, Jefferson H. Hamilton and Robert Ware, of Birmingham; Mrs. Lottie Driver, Miss Sallie Driver, Miss Jean Burke, Mrs. Power, of Montgomery; Mrs. Edward Simms, Miss Kathleen Golden, Mr. George Clap, Mr. Will Pease, of Columbus, Ga.; Mrs. William M. Cohen and Mr. Howard Curtis, North Carolina; Miss Mamie Harrison, Mrs. Mattie Banks, Mr. and Mrs. Banks, Misses Street, of Opelika; Mrs. C. A. DuVal, Marianna, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. A. F. McKissick, South Carolina; Miss Lillian Brantley, Miss Miss Wilbur Zuber, Opp, Ala., and Mr. Lewis Hardage, Meridian, Miss.

On The Constitution Firing Line With the Commercial Travelers

A DUTCH LUNCHEON

The invitation of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association, which will be found in these columns today, is one which every traveling salesman who sells goods from Atlanta should be certain to accept. The association has important business to discuss with the traveling men. The matters pertain to the coming Southern Merchants' convention which will be held here the first two weeks in August.

The association realizes that the traveling men form one of the strongest factors in the success or failure of these meetings, and it is their desire to get the ideas of the salesmen before arranging the program for the convention.

This convention is for the benefit of the merchants of this southern territory. It will provide a means by which the merchant can visit Atlanta for a week or so before his fall business commences, and he will be able to gather ideas here from the various speakers which will enable him to go back to his business prepared for the conduct of it through his busiest season by the inspiration received from the best practical men in his own lines. Many vital subjects will be discussed, and it is the plan of the association to get the merchants to take an active part in the conduct of the convention and thus enable them to get more direct benefit from it.

The importance of being present at this luncheon, which will be given next Saturday evening, cannot be too strongly urged upon the salesmen. Every one should strain every point to be present.

Salesmen, just make a note that you are going to be there, drop a line to Harry T. Moore, secretary of the association, telling him that you will be present, and then—COME! But even if you forget to notify Mr. Moore, come just the same. The association needs you and is looking for you. Don't fail them!

Cliff Johnson, who travels southwest Georgia for the J. K. Orr Shoe company, sent in a nice order for Red Seal shoes last Wednesday. It came from Columbus and totaled $2,500.

A. W. Malone, of the well-known insurance firm, J. L. Riley & Co., was visiting his brother, E. F. Malone, of the Capital City Tobacco company, last Friday. Which one was getting the most business out of the other could not be discovered, but it is at least certain that some business is done whenever a tobacco man and an insurance man get together.

I. N. Binder, of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, stated that he received a pleasant surprise when he went to add up their business for May. It was much better than he had anticipated, "and," he added, "I resolved not to be pessimistic in the future. Why, I was sure I had good cause to be, because, really, our May business stacked up as quite a lot better than May, 1912."

E. L. Adams company report that they have just received a carload of Wyman's pickles fresh from Louisville.

AN OPEN LETTER TO GEORGIA MERCHANTS

From John Bratton, Secretary Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., June 15, 1913.

Mr. Merchant:

The time for the holding of your annual convention is near at hand.

As you have already been apprised Atlanta has been chosen as the place and July 21, 22 and 23 the time. Your officers are diligently engaged in perfecting arrangements, laying plans and outlining the work that is to be done and which you are expected to help do.

What arrangements are you making to these ends? That you will come and take part in the deliberations of your brother merchants, it is hoped. This is your duty—do it.

The time is now at hand when the service of every merchant in the state is needed to push for the measures being urged for the benefit of the mercantil interest. Get together, act together and do their duty individually and collectively, they cannot hope for results, or a successful determination of the effort, now being put forth for the enactment of a just and equitable garnishment law and a fraudulent check law.

The purpose of this letter is to wake you up to the needs of the hour, you as individual merchants, and members of the Georgia association, but as just one merchant, a single unit in the wheel of commerce, and as such, get busy, to put your shoulder to the wheel and push with us and thus help to attain the ends desired. You can help. Will you do it? As an individual your influence may be of minor importance and weight, but joined with that of thousands of your brother merchants it becomes a force of wonderful impact and a source of much good when rightfully used.

As a merchant, you should be, and no doubt are, deeply interested in these measures that are sought to be enacted into law. It should, therefore, be your pleasure to do what you can to help put them on the statute books. Just as a state of the same you could do nothing better than to agitate and talk up the annual meeting to be held in Atlanta July 21, 22 and 23, never lose an opportunity to speak of it to your brother merchant, urging him to be there, and that you, of course, will be with him.

You are invited to this meeting, not necessarily as a member of any merchants' association, but as a merchant to take part in the deliberations of merchants and to help merchants in the good cause in which they are engaged, that of urging the enactment of a good and wholesome garnishment law and a law against the fraudulent check writer. As a merchant, you have, without doubt, felt the need of these two laws on more occasions than one, and this being the case you should now be willing to come to the front and help to put them on our statute books.

Remember this, that it matter what part of the state you live, or whether you are a big or little merchant, own the store or are a clerk, male or female, you are invited to be here and to do your part in the work to be done.

Make up your mind at once that you will come—then write us at 1124-25 Candler building, Atlanta, Ga., in order that we may know how to arrange for your pleasure and accommodations. It is very necessary that we have this information as early as possible, in order that ample provisions may be made.

JOHN BRATTON,
Secretary Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia.

FOR AN ART GALLERY.

Business Men Should Back the Movement, Says Binder.

I. N. Binder, the well known manager of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, of Whitehall street, was talking last week about the prospects of Atlanta having an art gallery.

"The Atlanta Art association has started a movement," said Mr. Binder, "with the object of securing such a building for this city. It is a movement which I would very much like to see meet with success, and I, for one, am going to do all I can to see it go through.

I believe every business man in the city should most certainly back this movement with all his influence. The benefit to the city would be incalculable. All legitimate business benefits by anything that tends to improve conditions of living and the general status of the people. The educative value of an art gallery cannot be estimated, but it is one of the best things possible to raise the standard of public ideals, not only along art lines, but in all that tends to a clean, moral and intelligent method of life. But besides this, the business men will find a benefit to them in a business way. The knowledge that there is such an institution in Atlanta will help wonderfully to advertise the city amongst the best class of people, and will undoubtedly attract many people to the city who would not otherwise be drawn here. It is the city which possesses institutions such as this which gains a countrywide reputation as a good place to visit, and the wider a reputation we have the more people will come here and it is unnecessary to add that the more people who come here the better it will be for business of all kinds."

BUYING FALL STOCKS.

Ladies From Alabama Visit John Silvey & Co.

John Silvey & Co. had as visitors last week two ladies from Alabama, who were here representing a well known business house in that state, in order to lay in place orders for their fall goods.

They were Mrs. W. P. Zuber and Miss Nora Lee Wise, representing W. P. Zuber, of Auburn, Ala. They spent last Tuesday and Wednesday in the city and placed a nice order with John Silvey & Co.

Sales Manager G. B. McDowell, of the E. L. Adams company, writes from Indian Springs that he expects to be back on the job again tomorrow, after a couple of weeks' absence on account of sickness.

BUSINESS BUILDERS

THE SALESMAN'S MOTTO: I will accomplish everything within the power of energy, tact, and resourcefulness; nay, more, I will attempt and overcome the impossible.

SALESMANSHIP

It is not always the man who makes the biggest initial showing who turns out to be the salesman. There are so many points to be considered in judging salesmanship that it is impossible to tell who is doing the best work until a fair space of time has elapsed. Many a salesman who goes over a territory the first time and makes a big record on his sales for that trip is unable to do much on the same territory again. The reason is because he has gotten his business the first time over by misrepresentation and the customers on the list have no confidence in him after they have seen that he does not, and cannot do, what he promises.

It is a habit with some men who are soliciting business to get the customers' O. K. to an order in any manner, by hook or by crook, and then when the time comes to collect the account the customer replies that he did not authorize that order, or that it is not according to specifications, or some other excuse why it is not satisfactory. The reason for all this trouble lies in the fact that the salesman, in his report to the house a big showing on his sales record, has taked the order without the full consent of the customer. He has made promises that it is impossible to fulfill and which he tries to retract as soon as he has delivered the goods or the service, as the case may be.

A salesman who only sells 50 per cent of the goods that another one sells, but who gives absolute satisfaction and makes a friend of every customer is worth many times the one who sells double the amount of goods, but who has kicks and complaints on half of his orders. The loss to the house in correspondence and complaints is a matter which cannot be thoroughly estimated and probably never will be thoroughly overcome.

RAILROAD RATE.

If there ever was a subject which deserved the title of "Chinese puzzle" it is the rate book of a railroad which carries all sorts and conditions of freights. The business of delving into this book and discovering just what is the correct rate on "split cane bottomed chairs, circled by brass-headed tacks, feet turned slightly outward, upholstered seat in red, and by a red-headed man who was born in China of Irish-American parents and who day-showed a thousand ways making them is one which will turn the average man's head gray quicker than anything else.

In this respect the benefit of belonging to a freight bureau will appeal to the business man who has some such problem as that cited above to contend with. Such a bureau in a city is an inestimable advantage and should be used by every firm in that city.

It is a fact that many firms are working under the misapprehension of paying more freight than they need to, just because they do not know that their goods, by their style, quality or manner of packing, are entitled to a lower rate.

There is a certain firm which manufactures baskets. For some time they were worried by the fact that a competitor was able to make lower prices than they were. They worked out a system of costs and found that they were buying their raw material at as good a rate as the other people. Their cost of manufacture was as low and, in fact, every point seemed to give them equal expense as the other house. Finally they tackled the matter of rate and shipping costs and after some time found the cause of their trouble in the fact that they were packing their goods under the wrong classification. By the method of packing these goods they could get them in a class that sent the rate nearly half of what they were paying, and yet this mistake was a perfectly natural one and it is probable that there are many other firms making similar errors today.

It is not the province of the railroad clerk to see that his shippers get the best rate. In the first place he is working for the railroad company, he has the time to work out these figures for every case, and if he has any doubt as to the right rate it is his duty to charge the highest in order to protect himself and the road.

All in all, every shipper of goods should, either by the utmost care themselves or else by belonging to a good freight bureau protect themselves from their own errors in classifying the goods they are shipping. It will mean a big saving every month to many firms now losing money every day.

THE FOLLY OF CRIME

The difference between conditions of today and those of one century ago are in nothing more striking than as they relate to the commission of crime. A hundred years ago the events that transpired one hundred or one thousand miles away were seldom known of, or, if they were published there was a long interval of time which elapsed between the time of the event and its universal publication. Today, a crime is committed in one locality at midnight, and before noon of the next day full details have been flashed over the entire country and sufficient details for the ends of detection and justice have even been sent to foreign countries and to the entire world. By nightfall the papers will have carried full details of the crime and photographs of the suspected people, photographs of the scene of the crime and particulars of the rewards offered for a radius of hundreds of miles. These are eagerly read by every police official, every town marshal and even by the majority of private individuals. Wherever human beings are, the news is carried to them, and every man, woman and child is watching for the criminal. Every stranger is noted and every act of his is carefully stored away in the minds of the people with whom he comes in contact.

Considering these facts, how unutterably foolish, how simple and how stupid it is to commit a crime at this day and date. Every criminal begins, as soon as his crime is consummated, to give himself away. No man can commit a crime and fail to leave clues so plain that any trained analytical mind can take these clues trace down the criminal and show the entire tragedy just as it was committed. Sometimes the guilty man, with the fear of the penalty in his heart, will leave the section of the country at once—disappear, as he thinks—but this he cannot do. The fact that he has gone is corroborative evidence of guilt or complicity, and no human being can devise, today, a means of getting away altogether from connection with his crime or with the means of detection. In cities of millions, they are caught, in mid-ocean they are found and in the wilds of the jungle they are relentlessly trailed.

To allege that any crime is an unsolvable mystery amounts to a belief in the supernatural, and places events which are the natural and proper results of material cause, in the category of the supernatural—a category in which they cannot possibly belong. It is impossible, of course, for a well-balanced mind to form definite opinions without some concrete facts on which to base them and in the commission of a crime these facts, in the form of clues and circumstances, are inevitably present to be read by the trained mind.

The chief defect in the method pursued by untrained men in seeking a solution to a puzzling crime lies in the taking of some individual who can easily be superficially connected with the crime, and endeavoring to make the clues and circumstances fit the individual rather than by taking the clues and circumstances and fitting the individual to them. In the first, and commonly used method, the entire line of reasoning may easily be on a wholly false premise.

There is a continuous, unbroken chain of circumstances in the plan of nature that fits link by link perfectly into each other. Every man, woman and child in a community is connected with all the others, and every form of natural pursuit, labor and play is a part of the composite day which that community registers on the scrolls of time every twenty-four hours. So long as any individual is following the natural course of life, each tiny circumstance is being created in proper sequence to fit into this perfect whole accurately, each moment of time fitting into each other moment so accurately that facts of correlative evidence are formed which are indisputable. But just as soon as an individual deviates ever so slightly from this natural trend and commits some unnatural act, in other words, a crime, the hair-spring of this whole machine is bent out of shape and the alarm is sounded immediately.

Besides the discordance which is evident in the external facts of life, a physcological change has also occurred in the mind of the criminal. Knowing what he has done is at variance with nature's controlling laws, he at once begins the construction of artificial circumstances to turn attention away from him. To do this successfully is a human impossibility and it is only the stupidity of the investigators which ever allows the guilty to escape.

One fact which many criminals overlook is this: Their hands often work independently of their minds, in a routine form, and in a mechanical manner. When proper tests are applied this is demonstrated beyond a doubt.

The most potent factor in the detection of criminals is that there exists in the mind a dual power. The one is capable of punishing the other in the natural course of life. The first power, which may be termed the normal, is always in the ascendency. But the moment a man commits a crime the abnormal power rises and strange phantasies and delusions cloud reason and obscure judgment, making of the individual a different being. The desire to be natural, normal and free again makes the criminal commit many follies, and it has frequently been known to make him confess in order to get justice rather than be forever tortured by the wild vagaries and constant dread of danger, and forever fleeing from his fellowman and himself.

Personal gain is the usual cause of crime and, any way you may view it, crime is folly. The fact that a criminal has done one individual harm in committing his crime is not the most disturbing element he is forced to consider. The fact that he has committed the crime forces on him the knowledge that all mankind feels that he is a dangerous character and consequently should be exterminated, and as a man feels, so he acts.

If anyone reading this article doubts the logic herein expressed, let him plan a crime in which he leaves no clues, escapes detection and disturbs no natural program of events. Then let him submit it to the writer for consideration.

F. H. Glasgow, city salesman for the Consolidated Paper company, was [illegible] and at work Saturday morning, writing out his orders for the week. C. E. Owens, the other city man, also reports good business, and, in fact, the city trade for the past week has made a splendid showing.

Do You Think This Story Is True?

A certain house had a salesman covering territory for them who was doing what ranked as good business. He was sending in a steady run of orders from a regular round of customers. But the house was not satisfied. They said that he hardly ever opened a new account, and they thought that his territory might be developed into a far better paying proposition than it was. In order to do this they contemplated taking him off that territory and putting him on some new territory for a while. About this time the sales manager received a letter from a salesman, who was desirous of working for them, and he was so impressed with the letter that he gave the man a job, and straightway sent him into the old territory of the salesman number one. The new man's name was Smith.

Smith went into the territory with a six months' contract with his firm, and for the first three months there was no improvement over the old man's record. But the house felt that the new man was a fair trial, and anyway they had given him that six months contract and they would let him work it out before they decided he wasn't better than the other.

The sixth month that that fellow worked for his house was the biggest month's sales they had ever had from the territory. And each succeeding month kept up correspondingly big. He was soon rated as their star salesman, and the sales manager began to wonder how he did it. Finally, he decided to go and spend a day or two with Mr. Smith and investigate his methods.

The first day he got there Smith took him out with him on his calls. The merchant they called on had just gotten in a new line of goods and was fixing up a window display. It wasn't a very big town they were in, and they only had about four calls to make before train time, which was six hours off. So Mr. Smith made a suggestion or two to the merchant, and finally took off his coat and helped to arrange the window display.

In half an hour he had the confidence and friendship of the merchant, and in an hour he had left with an order in his pocket.

The next place they stopped at the merchant had a complaint to make about the fact that the wholesaler that he was buying from persisted in sending their goods in cases, which were too big to go through his door, thus necessitating unpacking on the sidewalk. Smith took the dimensions of the door, took an order and promised that the goods would not be delivered unless they came in the right size cases. And the sales manager remembered several peculiar specifications of a similar nature which Smith had been positive were to be complied with or the goods not shipped.

The third place they called on the merchant was having trouble with his accounts, and was badly worried over a number of bad debts. Smith sympathized without unnecessary fuss, and offered a suggestion or two here, which attracted the merchant's attention, and which he thought worthy of noting. Smith also inquired if the merchant belonged to the local merchants' association, and advised him to make use of the organization in its credit department. He left a promising prospect for future business. The fourth merchant could not see them, but Smith left his card and a note of regret at not seeing him and the approximate date of his next visit.

The sales manager went home to analyze the situation, and finally put his answer into shape something like this:

"Smith is selling more than the goods. He is giving away a certain amount of service with every order he sells, and, besides, is giving each merchant his individual attention and interest. So the merchant is getting more for his money by buying from Smith than he would from the average salesman."

"The keynote of it all is 'service.'"

That is the truth. Service is the one thing which the business men of today are looking for, and the firm which can give them the most in service is going to get the most of their business.

Likewise, the traveling men who give the most in service are going to get the most business, and every salesman should remember that he must spend as much time as he can afford in helping the merchant to realise on the goods after he has sold them to him.

You can decide or not for yourself as to whether this story is true or not. The moral is a good one, but you can also discover that for yourself.

LIVE WIRE AUTO DEALER LEAVES

R. H. Losey Resigns as Atlanta Buick Manager and Joins Westcott Forces in High Position.

R. H. Losey, for the past nine months manager of the Atlanta branch of the Buick Motor company, has resigned his position to take effect immediately. He has joined forces with the Westcott Motor company, of Richmond, Ind., in the capacity of assistant general manager and sales manager, and will leave in a few days for the north. He expects to return to Atlanta frequently, however, in the interest of the Westcott company, which will be strongly represented here.

The departure of Mr. Losey marks the promotion of a young man, who is a pioneer in the motor car world, and who has forced himself to the front by indomitable energy and determination to succeed. For the past eight years he has been a branch manager for the Buick Motor company, having established and managed the Indianapolis Buick branch before coming to Atlanta. It was his work for this company that attracted the makers of the Westcott. His method of establishing new sales records appealed strongly to the Richmond manufacturers, who made him too tempting a offer to be refused.

The Westcott is one of the standard Indiana-made cars. The factory is the property of the millionaire Westcott family that has been in the vehicle manufacturing business at Richmond for the better part of a century.

Both sixes and fours are manufactured in large quantities and with the appearance of Mr. Losey at the helm the output is certain to be increased.

Since taking charge of the Atlanta Buick branch Mr. Losey has made a wide acquaintance and has made himself felt throughout the Southern territory. He moved the Buick branch into its present magnificent quarters and completely reorganized his sales organization with good results. He will be missed in Atlanta motor circles, and will be warmly welcomed when he returns in the interest of his new company.

An Heritage of Service.

(From "The Roadmender," by Michael Fairless.)

God help the soul that bars its own door! It is kicking against the pricks of divine ordinance, the ordinance of a triune God, whether it be the dweller in crowded street or tenement who is proud to say, "I keep myself to myself," or Seneca writing in pitiful complacency, "Whenever I have gone among men, I have returned home less of a man." Whatever the next world holds in store, we are bidden in this to seek and serve God in our fellow men, and in the creatures of his making whom he calls by name.

Tall Buildings a Necessity.

(From Scientific American.)

Land is so immensely valuable in the big centers and the tendency of business is so pronounced toward centralization, congestion, that the tall building is inevitable. It is profitable and therefore is bound to be.

The tall building must be superlatively well built. Property owners realize that, and the architects and engineers are responding to the demand. A tall building, perfectly constructed and equipped with its own water supply and fire extinguishing apparatus, such as the Singer Tower, the Metropolitan and the Woolworth, for instance is as safe as any 3-story or 4-story building, and infinitely safer than most of the 200-foot ones. It is also absolutely independent of fire department limitations. It has to be self reliant. Being beyond ordinary help, therefore the law—self interest—every motive compels it to be so built as to warrant that reliance upon its own excellence.

The tall building can be made, and a lot of them are, artistic, beautiful. It is distinctively American, therefore the real opportunity we have of giving to the world a distinctively American art!

OAKLAND PLANT WORKS AT FULL CAPACITY

Vice President Geo. E. Daniels Says May Was Biggest Month in History.

"This is an Oakland year," said George E. Daniels, vice president and general manager of the Oakland, recently in discussing the motor car situation.

"We are running our plant at capacity to fill orders and more than 1,100 men are employed. During May our daily shipments averaged fifty cars. Oaklands are now being sold by over 1,200 dealers. The total business for the season will be approximately $15,000,000.

"And the best of it is that there is going to be no letup, if we take the word of the dealers who are clamoring for cars. They are unanimous in declaring that the Oakland line for 1913 has been the biggest kind of a hit in the motoring world. We take this as a good omen because we are planning to do even bigger things in 1914 and we know that the car is this year entrenching itself in popular favor so that it will be in still greater demand next year.

"Some idea of the furore that the Oakland has created this year is evidenced by its sale in Atlanta. The Georgia metropolis is motor car wise. The people here see the new models before anyone else in the south, and there is hardly a family but has some member in the business and people discuss the technical points of automobiles to a surprising degree. For a car to make good in Atlanta in the big sense it has to have something back of it.

"Therefore, we are distinctly proud that the Oakland has been leading the field in retail sales during the spring and that the Oakland Six Greyhound has been meeting cars ranging from $900 to $5,000.

"We have also invaded the foreign field with marked success and taken all in all we are about as proud as we can be of the way our product has been received this year."

Let All Pay the Income Tax.

(From Leslie's.)

"We are proud of Wisconsin's income tax law," declares State Senator Bosshard, "because it has made the people better citizens, and we believe the proposed national income tax law is defective in this particular." Taking example of the nations of Europe where the exemption of incomes ranges from $77.20 in Italy to $750 in Great Britain, Wisconsin proceeded to determine what constituted an actual decent living in that state and made this figure the exemption. The result was a tax on all incomes above $800 for a single person, $1,200 for a man and wife and $200 for each minor child, making the average $1,225 in the state.

Senator Bosshard tells us that the passage of the law raised a roar of protest from thousands of persons who had never before paid any tax. Finding, however, that the sums they were compelled to pay were small, ranging from $5 to $10 a year, they instantly began to show a pride in the state and an interest in the work of public officials they had never felt when they were not paying taxes. The federal income tax with its exemption at $4,000 will include but a very small proportion of the population of the country, and we shall fail to get that increased civic pride and loyalty which Wisconsin has experienced and which the whole nation might experience with a lower exemption. Instead of this desirable result we shall have the feeling that the tax is class legislation, placing upon a few the burden which all should share.

A Judge's Good Advice.

(Boston Post.)

"You should be very careful in your investigation of every case presented to you," said a New York judge in impaneling a grand jury recently. "Many [illegible] reputation has been destroyed by the filing of unnecessary indictments, and the dismissal of the indictment does not remove the stigma upon a person's name."

"That is good advice for any grand jury anywhere. There is always danger of the thought that 'this isn't a trial. It isn't calling him guilty; he'll have his chance later on;' we'll indict him on general principles.' But it is hard for anyone to undo the damage caused by an unjustified indictment.

There would be no harm to the community if indictments were made more difficult instead of more easy.

Enrollment of 259 the Lowest At Emory Within Last Few Years

Editor Constitution: I your issue of June 11, under the caption of "Intercollegiate Sports Banned by One Vote," your correspondent states that "The attendance at the college has dropped from over 300 to slightly over 200 within the past few years."

The facts are as follows:

Enrollment for 1907-1908.	265
Enrollment for 1908-1909.	270
Enrollment for 1909-1910.	313
Enrollment for 1910-1911.	297
Enrollment for 1911-1912.	259
Enrollment for 1912-1913.	267

The foregoing statement, I presume, will cover the "last few years." Your correspondent in Oxford had every opportunity of knowing the truth. The information was easily accessible to him. There has not been any time "within the last few years" when the enrollment has been slightly over 200. It is hard to understand, therefore, how there can be but one of two explanations; namely, either stupidity or malice.

President Emory College.

The constitution gladly gives publication to the above communication from President James E. Dickey, of Emory college. The report referred to was taken at The Constitution office over the long distance telephone, and the error as corrected by Dr. Dickey was evidently due to some misunderstanding on the part of the editor receiving the report.

World's Wealthiest Man.

(Answers.)

The czar of Russia is the wealthiest man in all the world; far richer even than John D. Rockefeller or any of the Rothschilds. His civil list alone amounts to something like £2,500,000 a year, and more than a half of this is available for his own private use.

In addition, the czar owns land in European Russia equal in area to the whole of Ireland, and derives from it the colossal revenue of £5,000,000 per annum. And then he also owns land in Siberia which, even in its present undeveloped state, brings him in well over £1,000,000 a year.

The czar's annual income, including the interest on his savings, has been estimated at £7,500,000.

Seeing, therefore, that the czar puts aside every year a large sum of money for each of his four daughters, the prince who contracts a marriage in that quarter is likely to do extremely well for himself from a worldly point of view.

COTTON MADE ADVANCE ONE TO THREE POINTS

Market Opened at Decline Under Realizing, But Rallied Later.

New York, June 14.—An early setback was recovered in the cotton market this morning and the close was very steady at a net advance of 1 to 3 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 3 to 5 points, with the active months selling about 6 to 7 points net lower during the early trading. Cables were about as expected, and reflected the the cotton goods trade indicated a continued good business, particularly in the south. The outlook was for generally fair and warmer weather over the week-end, and in addition to realizing there appeared to be some local selling on favorable new crop conditions and a feeling that the short interest had been materially reduced. Offerings were checked at the decline, however, by a bullish few of the census report on ginning and distribution for the month of May which indicated a continued active consumption by domestic mills and the market closed steady, recovering in the absence of any important offerings.

Houses with foreign connections were moderate sellers of the near months, but the buying was credited with selling new crop positions, but New Orleans bought some crop between 1 and three points net, and there was a steady demand from Wall street sources during the late trading.

Cotton, spot closed unchanged; middling uplands 12.35; do gulf 12.60; no sales.

New Orleans Cotton.

New Orleans, June 14.—The week-end session in the cotton market was surprisingly steady after the week of heavy selling. Much to the surprise of the ring traders the market made a moderate recovery and they had put out short cotton on the idea that week end liquidation of long contracts would cause at least a moderate setback.

The advance was all the more surprising because it was made in the face of the most favorable weather map of the week, while the forecast promised fair weather on Sunday over the entire cotton region and indications were for a further warming up in temperatures. Spanish cables were more encouraging than otherwise and they claimed that fair weather was being made with work in the fields. Except for a slight decline around the first call, bearish news had no effect on prices.

The opening was slightly unchanged to two points lower, ruling steady under realizing yesterday. Cables were be for than due but they were construed as favorable weather returns and bullish on the situation and a little short selling from short sellers who looked for a bearish reaction.

At the lowest the trading months were 2 to 3 points under yesterday's close. The market gradually did better, until late in the morning it stood 6 to 10 points over yesterday's figures. The close was steady at a ne gain of 4 to 9 points. The advance was generally set down to buying for the account of leading bull interests.

Gibert & Clay.

New York, June 14.—During the past week the local market has ruled firm at higher prices under the influences of a better demand for spot cotton and bullish news from the continent. This fact resulted in nervousness among shorts in July and August here, which was intensified by the decrease in the local stocks. The strength displayed by the old crop makes it apparent that the new supply must be large in order to satisfy the world's requirements and consequently the general demand for the new crop has broadened. Despite favorable conditions, however, Our reports indicate that the growth in the Atlantics has been retarded by the cool nights and that south Texas needs a general rain, but that otherwise satisfactory progress is being made.

Rice.

New Orleans, June 14.—Rice strong. Receipts—Rough, none; clean, 732; millers, none. Sales: Rough, none; clean Hendurras, 290 at 4 7-8. Japan, none. Quotations: Rough, nominal; clean Honduras, 4¼@5⅝; Japan, 4¼@4⅝.

Bank Statement.

New York, June 14.—The statement of the actual condition of the clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $38,812.50 reserve in excess of legal requirements. This is a increase of $8,824,100 from last week. The statement follows:

Actual condition:
Loans, $1,805,574,000; decrease, $8,869,000.
Cash, $232,066,000; decrease, $10,858,000.
Legal tenders, $33,910,000; increase, $114,000.

Net deposits, $1,757,298,000; increase, $4,402,000.

Circulation, $47,029,000; decrease, $52,000.

Banks' cash reserve in vault, $370,661,000.

Trust companies' cash reserve in vault, $55,232,000.

Aggregate cash reserve, $425,906,000; increase, $4,100.

Excess lawful reserve, $38,812,500; increase, $8,824,100.

Trust companies' reserve with clearing house members carrying 25 per cent cash reserve, $59,540,000.

Summary of state banks and trust companies in greater New York not included in clearing house statement:

Loans, $1,043,500; decrease, $4,147,800.

Cash, $66,339,600; decrease, $494,400.

Legal tenders, $7,914,000; decrease, $139,600.

Total deposits, $918,359,000; decrease, $6,248,500.

New York, June 14.—The Financier says today:

"Exceeding all preliminary estimates of the currency gain, basis of this week's operations of the clearing house banks, in their statement of actual condition, discloses a net addition of cash holdings of $10,972,000, and as deposits increased only $4,402,000, the net gain went to swell the excess reserve. This item rose $8,824,100, bringing the total surplus above legal requirements to $38,812,500.

The favorable showing this week was helped by a contraction of $8,869,000 in the loan account, which reflected part of the severe liquidation in the stock market early in the week.

Hubbard Bros. & Co.

New York, June 14.—Liverpool prices were about as expected and the opening here was tame with some pressure on July which affected the late deliveries. Business was small and the trade indifferent but quotations were well sustained and advanced under a slight demand. Very few reports came from the south but the crops has been retarded apparently about ten days to a fortnight by the cool weather and should extend the trade heat follow, complaints may ensue and an improving market here result. July interest is mostly that of the trade is bearish but not selling at the moment. The government census report is indicative of the good consumptive demand during Coffee.

New York, June 14.—Coffee futures opened steady but at a decline of 28 to 36 points, the latter for the nearby break at Havre and rumors of financial troubles at Brazil. Offerings were more liberal than for some time and private cables from Santos reporting an improved situation there were followed by a sharp break in the market from the lowest, on covering, but the market became very unsettled and in the late trading there was continued liquidation for both local and foreign account. Reports of a lower Havre market and a weak Rio market, also local spot situation doubtless contributed to the renewed weakness. The market closing steady but at a net loss of 31 to 35 points. Sales, 102,750.

WHEAT PRICES RISE ON HOT, DRY WEATHER

Market Closed at Advance of Nearly Two Cents—Corn Higher.

Chicago, June 14.—Wheat prices took a violent swing today, impelled by an official forecast of protracted dry, hot weather. Throughout the northwest crops needed rain, and there were reported that permanent damage from drought had already been done. The market closed firm, at an advance of 7-8 to 1 3-4c net. This is 1-8@1 1-4c to 1 7-8c up; oats with a gain of 1 1-8@1-14c to 1 12c, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 12c.

Except for a momentary dip at the outset, when the market was affected by some overnight showers in the Dakotas and Canada, with clear skies and soaring temperatures made there unusual, and when announcement came that an indefinite period of such conditions could be looked for, a lively scramble developed. Stocks supposed to be acting for bull leaders, were conspicuous bidders for September wheat. The special incentive for this purchasing was said to be an opinion from a well known export house that without general soaking rains within a week, in the spring wheat belt would reach a heavy total. Seaboard clearances of wheat and flour equalled 570,000 bushels. Primary receipts of wheat were 636,000 bushels; a year ago 295,000 bushels.

Pessimistic field advices from Iowa, Illinois and other important states excited the shorts in corn. Offerings were extremely small. Bearish receivers predicted a falling off in receipts next week.

Oats crossed the 40 cent line, and closed at the highest level of the season. The causes were unwelcome heat and absence of moisture.

Provisions sagged with the hog market, and also on account of an expected bearish statement Monday in regard to packing house stocks. Trade was much more active than usual on Saturday.

RETRACTS STATEMENTS ABOUT EMPIRE HOTEL

Carl Hutcheson Declares He Believes Party Who Made Affidavit Swore to a Lie.

Carl Hutcheson, who recently made serious charges against the Empire hotel in connection with the vice investigation, has written a letter to John L. Edmondson, lessee of the hotel, making sweeping retraction or every accusation against the hostelry. His letter is as follows:

Mr. John L. Edmondson, Atlanta, Ga.

My Dear Friend: You have sent a copy of an affidavit which was given to me in which the Empire hotel was held up as an immoral institution. I wrote this affidavit in good faith and accepted the contents therein in good faith, but after conferring with Assistant Chief of Police Jett, whom I consider an honorable officer, I am convinced that the party who made the affidavit swore a lie, that what he sets out in said affidavit is false, and that I have done you a wrong which I can never correct, except by future steadfast friendship.

In taking the man's affidavit, I wrote it as he gave it, but I am now convinced that he swore falsely. I wish to also state that I shall make every effort to save the affiant brought to justice, and I shall utilize my every effort of mind and body to prosecute the affiant, and all parties connected therewith for perjury to the extent of my ability. I detest and despise liars, imposers and perjurers, and nothing would give me more pleasure than to place the affiant and his co-conspirators, if you please, in prison where they justly belong.

I wish to state that I have never known you to do a dishonorable act, and more than that we have fought our battles side by side in the past, and I trust that we may do so in the future.

I beg to state that I think a man is a coward, if he does not acknowledge a mistake. I am confident that if any disorderly women or lewd women were ever guests at your hotel that you were not cognizant thereof.

In justice to myself, I will state, and I think that you will agree with me, that under the circumstances I had a right to accord faith in the entire matter, unless I made the error of not conferring with you before I signed before the grand jury the affidavit which I now consider a damnable perjury. I am truly irreconcilable parties. If my hundreds of friends consider that I am vacillating, let them have their opinions. I will not before God and man do to any person wrong if I can avoid it. Why? Because truth crushed to earth will rise again with might and power.

In this letter I hereby call the attention of the grand jury to an affidavit now in their possession which I consider a nefarious piece of work as mean and low as the burning of Rome by Nero.

In conclusion, I wish to state that I shall continue to fight and bring to light the truth of my general accusations concerning vice conditions in this city, as published in the press of May 27, but never shall I allow any person to be wronged when I am convinced that I have been instrumental in wronging him.

I trust that this my letter will be accepted in the same spirit in which I write it.

Sincerely yours,

CARL HUTCHESON

DORSEY ASKS REFORM IN THE PENAL SYSTEM

Solicitor General Tells Why Many Juries Are Reluctant to Convict.

Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey, of the Fulton county superior court, has given out an interview strongly indorsing the proposal to appoint a legislative committee to make thorough investigation of the penal system and criminal court proceedure in Georgia, with a view of improving both, increasing their efficiency and bringing them thoroughly up to date.

The specific proposal which Mr. Dorsey indorses is that recently outlined by Judge T. E. Patterson, of the state prison board, and which has been commended by leading legislators and superior court judges throughout the state.

As solicitor general, Mr. Dorsey is constantly brought in contact with many difficulties under the Georgia law of convicting a man before a jury, even when his guilt is certain.

"This is one of the difficulties," says Mr. Dorsey, "lies in the fact that the members of the average jury know that the conditions which surround a convict in Georgia tend to make a man worse and not better, and that juries are consequently reluctant to deliver even a guilty man into the hands of a justice that will merely inflict punishment on him without much likelihood of doing him any good.

"If the penal system were revised along practical and thoroughly conservative lines, yet in such a way that it would make for the moral and physical betterment of convicts, I believe our juries would not only be more willing to convict in proper cases, but would also be willing to give the criminal courts wider authority, which they stand in such great need of."

SANITARY DEPARTMENT CHANGES ANNOUNCED

The action of the city health board in dismissing Inspector Henry Maddox, brother of Alderman James W. Maddox, for insulting a young woman on Alexander street, has caused quite a shakeup in the city sanitary department.

The board has confirmed the appointment of D. E. Rice to fill the vacancy caused by the dismissal of Maddox. Rice is promoted to inspector at a salary of $19.60 per week, and E. Williams has been taken into the department as flusher at $16 per week.

Inspector E. S. Hilderbrand sent his resignation to Sanitary Chief John Jentzen, and C. H. Donnelly has been appointed to the vacancy.

Inspector Rice has been in the service for some time, and has proven himself a valuable employee of the health board.

MANCHESTER WISHES TO BE A COUNTY SEAT

Headquarters of the Kimball House will be opened on June 20 by the boosters of the proposed new county of Warner, with Manchester as the county seat, and a determined fight will be made by the citizens of this new Georgia town to have it made a county seat.

Those who are at the head of the movement are confident of success, and declare that the fact that there has been but little active opposition to the formation of the new county up to this time, is an indication of the favor with which the movement is meeting.

Manchester, although only four years old, already has a population exceeding 2,000, and is growing rapidly. It is surrounded by some of the richest farming lands in the state.

GREAT OIL LAND SUIT LOST BY GOVERNMENT

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 14.—The government's suit against the Mildcat Oil company—a test case involving the title to millions of dollars' worth of oil lands in California and Wyoming—was dismissed today by Judge John A. Riner, of the United States district court. While the government sought to recover only 4,000 acres of land in this suit, the issues involved cover thousands of acres of other California and Wyoming lands withdrawn by President Taft's sweeping order of 1909, designed to conserve the country's oil resources, and especially to afford the government a supply of fuel oil for the United States navy.

President Taft made the withdrawal upon the assumption that he had the power to act for the protection of the oil deposits. His authority was questioned, and congress, by the act of June 25, 1910, affirmatively gave him the power to make the reservations. The lands then were rewithdrawn. Between the first and second withdrawals, however, a great number of settlers went upon the lands. Judge Riner held that the act of congress authorizing the withdrawal was not retroactive.

Washington, June 14.—Officials here tonight expressed the belief that Attorney-General McReynolds would appeal from Judge Riner's decision dismissing the government oil land test suit. A similar test case is pending at Los Angeles and the department of justice is preparing to file in the near future many other suits seeking to stop at once the production of great quantities of oil in the disputed territory, as well as attempting to confirm the government's title to the land.

SAVINGS OF DEAD MAN BEYOND GOVERNMENT

Washington, June 14.—It is not within the power of the federal government to regulate the disposition of the savings of a deceased depositor in postal savings banks, but the subject lies entirely within the control of the state which was the domicile of the dead depositor, declared Comptroller of the Treasury Downey in an opinion today to Postmaster-General Burleson.

The decision practically reverses an opinion of former Attorney General Wickersham and nullifies regulations drafted by the board of trustees of the postal savings system, which authorized postmasters to pay after the deduction of funeral expenses the postal savings of a deceased depositor to any person to whom they had been bequeathed, or in case a beneficiary had not been named to pay the amounts to blood relations in a designated order of precedence.

The former attorney general and the board of trustees, said the comptroller, whose opinion is final, apparently failed fully to consider the fact that the states have the right to and do regulate "descents" and the methods by which property may be disposed of otherwise than as provided in the various "statutes of descents."

REBELS ADVANCING TO CAPTURE JUAREZ

United States Officer Reports That Force of 1,100 Men Will Soon Attack.

El Paso, Texas, June 14.—Eleven hundred rebels compose the force marching on Juarez, according to advices received here from Captain R. S. Pitch, of the United States cavalry stationed at Finley, Texas.

Captain Pitch reports that he has obtained copies of orders under which Colonel Ornelos, commander of these rebels, is operating. He reports that Ornelos is instructed to capture Guadeloupe, opposite Faberns, Texas, and use it as a base in further operations.

It is reported that Ornelos' advance already has had a brush with federal cavalry. This occurred below Guadeloupe, and it is reported the rebels were worsted.

Advices from Sonora say that Colonel Talamantes, with 250 men, has entered the Casas Grandes district of Chihuahua. It is said he will recruit a force to assist in the Juarez attack.

After looting the town, 400 federal volunteers evacuated Madera yesterday. Madera is an American lumber center in Chihuahua state. They left on orders to hasten to Chihuahua City, the surrender of which has been demanded by the constitutionalist troops. The patrols north and south of the town have been withdrawn.

FLORIDA WOODMEN OBJECT TO MANAGER

Jacksonville, Fla., June 14.—When the Woodmen of the World sovereign camp reconvened this morning, Judge H. W. Adams, state representative for Florida, offered a long set of resolutions demanding that T. W. Mitchell, state manager, be ousted, who, the resolutions declared, has been forced upon the state by Sovereign Commander J. C. Root over the protests of nearly all the camps.

The resolutions recited the allegation that Mitchell would not be admitted to most of the state's camps, being distasteful to and out of harmony with the state organization.

The resolutions were referred to the committee on distribution on motion of Root, after a motion to thrash the matter out on the floor was withdrawn and a motion to refer them to resolutions committee number 2 also was withdrawn after an acrimonious debate.

They posed this way in Berlin at the recent wedding of the kaiser's daughter. The czar and king are first cousins by marriage. Russia's ruler having married a daughter of Princess Alice, sister of King Edward, father of King George. The czar is 46 years old and the king is 48.

DETECTIVE IN DUEL WITH SAFE-CRACKER

Fred Farris Wounds Negro, But Injured Man Manages to Make His Escape.

A pistol duel between Fred Farris, a Pinkerton detective, and an unknown safe robber, occurred in the offices of the Troy laundry on Houston street shortly before midnight last night, as the culmination of a long vigil in an effort to foil a vault robbing plot.

The robber was shot, but managed to escape into the darkness of the laundry plant. Three shots were fired, two by the detective and one from the gun of the intruder. A trail of blood led from the spot on which he fell to the Houston street entrance.

The police have been given a description of the man, a burly negro. Hoping to trace him to a hospital at which he might apply for medical aid, special policemen in each sanatorium have been supplied with his description and prompted to be on the lookout.

For the past six months the vault of the Troy laundry has been robbed on Saturday nights. The robberies did not occur in succession, but intermittently. Officials of the concern learned Saturday morning in some manner of a plot to rob the safe last night.

The Pinkertons were notified and Detective Farris was stationed in the office at 10 o'clock when the plant closed. After a vigil of less than two hours, he was rewarded shortly after 11 o'clock by sounds of someone entering.

As the invader reached the safe, the detective, standing near an electric switch, turned on the button, flooding the room with light. The robber stopped directly in front of the vault. Levelling his gun at the negro's head, Farris commanded him to throw up his hands.

The negro turned to flee through the door. Farris fired, the bullet striking the robber in the knee, knocking him to the floor. As the detective started across the room, the wounded man drew a revolver and fired point blank. Scrambling to his feet, the negro stumbled toward the door. The detective fired again as his victim disappeared into the plant proper.

When Farris followed, the wounded robber was nowhere to be found. The Houston street door was unlocked and swinging open. Spots of blood marked the negro's path to the entrance. From the detective's description, officials of the laundry believe it is a negro employee of the plant.

POLICE ARE STIRRED OVER PICTURES OF "SEPTEMBER MORN"

Howard S. Cole, president of the Cole Book company, in the role of the Era Lippo Lippi of Atlanta, is expecting to be placed upon trial before the monks of the city in recorder's court Monday afternoon, to test the validity of Browning's proposition that "when you get simple beauty you've got about the best thing God ever made."

The trouble all arises over the exhibition in the big show window of the Cole Book company of M. Paul Chabas' world-famous picture, "September Morn," which was similarly attracted in Chicago, New York and other cities, and the question once more resolves itself to Browning's original question of whether art consists of the interpretation of the form without, the soul within, or a happy medium of the two.

The question of "soul within," apparently, as yet remains unsolved. Of the "from without" there is not the slightest shadow of a doubt. It is "without" so much as a little gilt frame!

"September Morn," at a hasard, is the painting of a maiden of some 17 summers, who at the crack o' dawn has ventured into Piedmont lake after the season closed and forgot her bathing suit.

"September Morn" was on exhibition for nearly a week before anyone presumed that the matter of when or where or how a young lady chooses ta take her morning bath was of concern to any save her own sweet caprice.

But Saturday morning a dear old lady, who thought that such a slip of a girl should have known better, complained to police headquarters, whereupon a speedy and minute inspection by Assistant Chief Jett ensued, with the result that the board of censorship of the "movies," the city attorney and other experts were called in to gaze and pass judgment. They gazed, passed judgment and shook their heads.

Mr. Cole said last night:

"The picture is the purest art and has no element of evil in it. It is in the window now and stays there until I am compelled by the law to remove it. I have understood indirectly that I will be summoned to recorder's court Monday afternoon."

Mr. Cole has assurances of the support of many prominent people of the city.
